Woman Chosen To Lead India

ESCORTED by acting Prime Minister Nanda, Mrs. Indira Gandhi arrives at Central Hall in New Delhi today where Parliament elected her the new prime minister of India. Mrs. Gandhi, 48, is the daughter of the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru. (AP Wirephoto.)

Nehru Daughter Prime Minister

NEW DELHI (CP)—Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of the late Jawaharlal Nehru, was elected today to be India's third prime minister, the first woman in modern times to head the government of a major nation.

See Story Page 27

India's ruling Congress party automatically elevated Mrs. Gandhi to prime minister by electing her leader of its majority faction in Parliament.

Thus to the shoulders of this 48-year-old widow fell India's immense problems — problems which her father wrestled with for 17 years until his death in 1964 and which his successor, Lal Bahadur Shastri, attacked vigorously until a heart attack killed him Jan. 11.

Mrs. Gandhi went to her victory wearing a red rosebud pinned to her shawl, just as her father wore a red rose daily throughout the tumultuous years after independence in 1947.

Mrs. Gandhi polled 355 votes to 169 for her only challenger, rightwing leader Morarji Desai. Two votes were invalid.

Cheering erupted in Parliament's central hall when a party official, G S. Pathak, announced the results of the secret ballot.

As the Nehru family once again took command in India, Mrs. Gandhi moved quickly to heal any damage done to party unity by the hectic political manoeuvring that followed Shastri's death.

'We Need Everybody's Blessing'

"I want your blessing," she told Desai as balloting began.

The stern, 69-year-old Desai replied:

"Who am I to give you blessing? We need everybody's blessing."

Victory for Mrs. Gandhi, who learned politics at her father's side, not only resumed the Nehru era after Shastri's 19-month interval, it also passed the nation's leadership to the second generation of Indian politicians.

Until today, India has been governed by the early freedom fighters who waged Mohandas K. Gandhi's "peace resistance" campaign to gain independence from Britain.

Mrs. Gandhi was part of that movement but played only a minor role. However, the survivors of her father's generation, notably Congress party President Kumaraswami Kamaraj, crushed most opposition to Mrs. Gandhi and thus will continue to have a say—perhaps a strong say—in national affairs.

Mrs. Gandhi is the 20th century's second woman prime minister. The other was Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon, the tiny island nation of 10,000,000 people off the southern tip of India. Elected in 1960, she was defeated in elections early last year.

A new prime minister could hardly face more serious problems than Mrs. Gandhi does.

There is widespread hunger in India and a near famine is expected in the coming months.

The dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir, which has set the two countries at war twice in 17 years, still festers. India's 480,000,000 people are still divided along religious and sectional lines. The national economy is in chaos. Neighboring China is a constant threat.

Gulzari Lal Nanda, sworn in as acting prime minister last Tuesday after Shastri's death in Tashkent, Russia, went to tender his government's resignation to President Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan and inform him of Mrs. Gandhi's election.

The president asked Mrs. Gandhi to form a new government.

Desai pledged his full co-operation to the new prime minister.

Mrs. Gandhi, weeping as she spoke, said in her acceptance speech:

"I am indebted to all members of the party including those who voted for and against me and I solicit their support in the great tasks lying ahead of us.

"Of all the resources we have,

Counter Spy Chief Replaced

(See story Page 3)

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government today replaced its counter-espionage chief following the affair of a kidnapped Moroccan politician.

The government charged the abduction of Mehdi Ben Barka, a left wing Moroccan opposition leader, on a Paris street in October was organized abroad with the complicity of certain French secret agents.

The announcement was made in a communique issued after a cabinet meeting presided over by President de Gaulle

The communique said Ben Barka's abduction was "a criminal enterprise organized from abroad and which benefited from certain connivances on the part of French secret agents or police."

Following the cabinet meeting, a government spokesman said Gen. Paul Jacquier was being replaced as head of the counter-espionage service.

Gen. Eugene Guibaud, a career officer who once served as military intelligence chief in Saigon, was named to replace Jacquier.

The spokesman also said the counter-espionage service, formerly attached to the office of the prime minister, now will be placed directly under the armed forces minister.

One member of the counter-espionage service, Antoine Lopez, is under arrest and has been charged in connection with Ben Barka's disappearance.

Lopez' immediate superior in the counter-espionage service, Marcel Leroy, was suspended Tuesday.

Ben Barka, an exiled leftist Moroccan leader, was kidnapped Oct. 29 and has not been seen since then.

KILLED BY BULLET

A Paris gangster, Georges Figon, who had said he saw Ben Barka murdered — was found dead with a bullet in his head in an apartment on the fashionable Avenue de Wagram Monday after police went there to arrest him.

Justice department officials said Figon killed himself.

MLA Held In Quebec Payoffs

QUEBEC (CP) — Marcellin Laroche, 46, Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly for Portneuf, was charged today with accepting benefits from a person dealing with the provincial government.

Mr. Laroche was charged with 16 counts involving a total sum of $15,260.

He was charged under section 102 of the Criminal Code with having exacted from businessmen in the District of Portneuf returns for himself, and also for other persons.

The charge says the businessmen had received provincial government contracts.

Mr. Laroche was first elected to the assembly in 1960. He lives in Pont Rouge.

Section 102 says:

"Everyone commits an offence who directly or indirectly, being an official or employee of the government, demands, accepts or offers or agrees to accept from a person who has dealings with the government a commission, reward, advantage or, benefit of any kind . . ."

ORGANIZER INVOLVED

Mr. Laroche also is charged with having conspired with a Portneuf Liberal organizer to commit some of the alleged offences.

The organizer is named as Guy Renaud of Donnacona, who himself is charged with 14 counts of conspiring with Mr. Laroche.

The alleged offences were said by the charge to have been committed between Jan. 1, 1961, and Nov. 30, 1965.

Of the counts in the main charge against Mr. Laroche, 14 involve benefits to himself, two involve benefits to others

The charges were filed before Sessions Judge Alphonse Garon, who then summoned the two charged men to appear before him by Jan. 29.

The complaint against Mr. Laroche was signed by Omer Auclair, special investigator for the Quebec Provincial Police.

The businessmen from whom the money is alleged to have been exacted were involved in farm - improvement projects at the time.

4 CHILDREN DIE IN FIRE ON RESERVE

ENDERBY, B.C. (CP) — Four children, including two-year-old twins, perished overnight when fire destroyed their Indian reserve home near this northern Okanagan centre in the B.C. interior.

Dead are the twins Dean and Dennis Felix, Russel Paul Thomas, three, and his two-year-old sister Valerie Pauline, children of Mrs. Winnifred Thomas.

Mrs. Virginia Felix told RCMP she awoke to find the house filled with smoke and flames and managed to escape with a three-year-old daughter, Diedre Lynn. They jumped out a window.

PRIME MINISTER Sir Robert Menzies of Australia announced today he is retiring after 16 years in office. Treasury Minister Harold Holt, right, is expected to succeed him. Menzies, 71, did not disclose whether he also intends to give up his seat in Parliament. (See story Page 26.)

Dief Says He'll Try To Dump Government

OTTAWA (CP)—Three opposition party leaders slammed the government Tuesday for making no mention of pension increases in the throne speech and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker promised an early non-confidence motion on the issue.

All leaders criticized the speech for containing little but leftovers from the last Parliament. They used adjectives such as puny, pallid, pedestrian and ineffective to denounce it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a non-confidence motion is the only course open to the opposition to pressure the government into increasing old age pensions to $100 a month from $75, even if this means defeat of the government in the Commons.

He criticized other leaders, particularly T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party, for trying to find some way other than a non-confidence motion to express their views on pensions.

Defeat of the government wouldn't necessarily mean another election, he said. Prime Minister Pearson could recommend to Governor-General Vanier that another party be allowed to try to form a government.

Mr. Douglas said last weekend only certain votes should be taken as non-confidence in the government. He wants pensions increased but not at the cost of another election.

INCREASE NEEDED

Mr. Douglas and Creditiste Leader Caouette also criticized the speech for containing no pension increases. Mr. Caouette said he was disappointed there was no reference about any increase in family allowance payments.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the only new measures in the speech were increased aid to universities, which his party would support, and the reorganization of government departments.

"One wonders what the government has been doing in the 200 days since Parliament sat," he said. "It was a pallid photostat of the last speech which couldn't be implemented because the government decided to go to the country."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the brief reference in the speech to the government's desire to find a way to amend the British North America Act in Canada indicated that the Fulton-Favreau formula "is as dead as a dodo."

The formula to move the BNA act to Canada and set up an amending procedure was approved by nine provinces, but Quebec decided against approving it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the speech gave no indication that the government is going to discontinue its "give-away attitude" on national unity questions. "The weakening of the

Sanctions Studied Against Students

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec education department is studying the possibility of imposing sanctions on thousands of technical and vocational school students across the province who have been "striking" since Monday in protest against an extension of their school year.

Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie mentioned some of the possibilities at a press conference Tuesday.

He said the government could withdraw the $10-a-month allowance paid to parents of 16- and 17-year-old students and suspend payments of the second half of 1965-66 bursaries and student loans.

The education minister said he was "scandalized" by the fact that some teachers had encouraged the student walkout, and reproached parents "for having failed to live up to their responsibilities."

He took a firm stand on the new school calendar, some 2½ weeks longer than last year's, which provoked the student "strike."

There was no question of any change. "The new school calendar is essential for academic and pedagogical reasons." It was adopted after consultation with teachers' groups representing schools across the province.

IN TAIPEI

'Explosive' Fire Claims Hostesses

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI) — Fire raced today through a five-storey building housing a theatre and nightclub and trapped 50 cabaret girls on the upper floor with heavy loss of life.

Some of the victims died in an elevator which jammed as they tried to flee.

Police said they had found the bodies of 25 of the girls on the fourth and fifth floors and that a number of others were still trapped on the elevator jammed between the third and fourth floors by a power failure. A fireman and a restaurant employee also were killed.

The fire broke out around 1:50 p.m. in the kitchen of a restaurant in the building which houses a theatre, restaurant, and the Metropolitan Club where the hostesses worked. The girls were on the top floor to collect Chinese New Year bonuses when disaster struck.

500 ESCAPE

The agency collected a grand total of $966,250 in 1965.

GRITS SHOW LITTLE ZEST FOR MEETING BASIC ISSUES

By PETER NEWMAN

OTTAWA—The Speech from the Throne which opened Canada's 27th Parliament may not do much to illuminate the nation's future, but it does cast a pale clear light on the present state of the Liberal Party of Canada.

The party portrait drawn by this declaration of parliamentary plans is that of a group of well-intentioned men with little zest for dealing head-on with Canada's basic problems.

The throne speech reflects accurately the changes which have taken place within the Liberal party since it was first elected to office nearly three years ago.

Lester Pearson opened his stewardship then with the ringing declaration that his time in office would "excite the daring, test the strong and give new promise to the timid."

That, too, was an accurate reflection of the mood of the moment; everything seemed possible in that faraway time of brave beginnings.

The Liberal party was then firmly in the control of its left-wing activists and despite the many pratfalls that followed,

THREE-YEAR-OLD BEATEN TO DEATH

Town Will Bury 'Little Boy Blue'

MONROE, Mich. (UPI)—Unless someone can identify him, a three-year-old boy will be buried in this southern Michigan town later this week known only as "Little Boy Blue."

The boy, clad in a blue quilted ski jacket, red shirt, black corduroy pants and blue socks, was found by a rabbit hunter in an outhouse on an abandoned farm near here.

An autopsy revealed the lad had been beaten to death.

Authorities said their best clue collapsed today. A label inside the boy's shirt was found to be that of a brand carried by three discount chains with stores throughout the nation.

Detective Sgt. Patrick Lyons of the Michigan State Police said laboratory tests on the boy's clothing failed to disclose anything of help in the investigation.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation assigned an agent to help local authorities in the investigation.

No one has claimed the boy. His description: Brown hair, 35 inches tall, 25 pounds with that sturdy, well-fed look.

Police theorize no one has claimed the boy because those who know him may be his murderer or murderers. They believe either the parents slew the boy or they are dead themselves.

Shortly after the body was discovered last Saturday, police sent out a nationwide alert for an identification of the lad.

A color photograph of the boy's clothing and its description have been distributed to other law enforcement agencies, so far to no avail.

Monroe County Sheriff Charles G. Harrington said of the mystery child, "he was neat, but his clothes were dirty. He didn't look like he came from a first class family. The clothes were fairly good, but dirty."

When the body was found the jacket was zippered and the hood was on the boy's head—an indication, authorities said, the boy had been well cared for and well trained. Also it was an indication, they said, the lad was not struggling at the time of his death.

By the middle of this week only two divorced fathers had come to take a look at the boy on the possibility he may have been a son. He wasn't.

Meantime, the little body was being held at Mercy Hospital.

Monroe County officials will bury the body in a few days unless a loved one shows to give "Little Boy Blue" a proper burial.

VANCOUVER—Mike Chernoff, 39, heeded a half-heard siren song early Tuesday morning—and spent the following 10 hours trapped on the roof of a bank.

Chernoff, former resident of Grand Forks, B.C., said he saw several persons enter the building just after midnight Monday and thought there was a party in progress.

"I followed them in because I had nothing else to do. Then I heard music so I tried to track it down."

He stepped through a door which closed and locked behind him, leaving him stranded on the roof, seven storeys up.

Ten hours later he dropped a rock, with a note attached near two girls leaving the building on a coffee break.

The sounds which lured Chernoff came from the building's piped-music system.

LOS ANGELES—"When I die I want artificial flowers, jitterbug music and a bottle of vodka at my grave."

That quip to a bartender—made only in a spirit of fun last Saturday—proved an exit line for Mark Twain's last direct descendant, Nina Clemens Gabrilowitsch, 55.

The sprightly granddaughter of the author of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn novels was found dead Saturday, the coroner's office reported Tuesday. She was the daughter of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony at the time of his death in 1936.

Her room contained several bottles of pills and alcohol, police said.

She called herself Nina Clemens, joking that she couldn't pronounce Gabrilowitsch (Gab-ril-o'-vitch).

Miss Clemens lived on, and generally spent, a $1,500 monthly allowance from a $2,000,000 share of Twain's estate.

DONCASTER, England—One of Britain's biggest construction firms is giving some of its men time off without pay to watch strip-teasers.

The firm, George Wimpey and Company, has about 200 men building a fuel plant at Doncaster. It discovered that on Sundays they were taking more than their usual half-hour lunch break in a nearby miners' club.

A company spokesman said:

"It was no good closing our eyes to the situation or sacking good workers who return late. So we arranged that they could have an extra half-hour added to their lunch break—without pay."

NEW YORK—Verbosity lead to the arrest here of a suspected bank robber.

His note said: "This is a stickup. Do just like this note says and you will be all right. Put 10s, 20s and 50s in a bag and don't push no buttons. I have someone at your house and if I don't get away he will know what to do and you will get hurt. Also we have been keeping an eye on you for the past two weeks. So hurry."

By the time teller John O'Brien finished reading the 68-word note, 12 persons had lined up behind the would-be robber and the guard came over to tell them to move to other wickets.

O'Brien shouted to the guard and he grabbed John Marshall, 36.

Saanich Reconsiders Municipal Handouts

How much can a municipal government give in the form of grants?

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis suggested to the Intermunicipal Committee Tuesday that the end of the line had almost been reached.

"The whole grant picture is causing Saanich council grave concern," he said. "Last year Saanich could not see its way clear to contribute to a specific grant and Victoria picked up the tab. This is passing the buck in the worst way and caused great embarrassment to me."

Looking at requests for grants from Goodwill Enterprises, the Dominion Drama Festival, the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and the Maritime Museum, Reeve Curtis sighed "and this is only the second week in January."

Other bids for grants already before the committee come from baseball and basketball organizations, the Left-Handed Golfers Association and various other community groups.

The committee decided to shelve them all until a special meeting could be called to review the entire grant system and to decide what should be done.

"I'm not just crying wolf," Reeve Curtis said. "I am just expressing concern about the amounts being asked. We need a meeting to bring in a full report on grants.

They reached Key Sal, north of Cuba, and were brought here by the U.S. Coast Guard.

HOME GARDEN

Plant Now In Dryland Gardens

By HILDA BEASTALL

Gardeners in many parts of this general area have soil which drains freely after winter rains. With them even snow is only an unpleasant memory.

Hilda

Soil which loses water rapidly and does not remain sticky for long, is suitable now for continuing the planting of trees and shrubs halted by the snow and rain.

The advantages of planting now are that the moisture needed for new root formation is in the soil and likely to be for several weeks; and nearly a season is gained by this early start.

Soil which drains quickly also warms quickly under the sun's rays, and no-one who works briskly outdoors on a sunny day even in January can doubt the warmth from the sun already.

Heathers are one of the most delightful groups of plants to add to a garden during winter. They like a sunny, open location, where the winter-blooming varieties may even repay you by attracting the stray hummingbird who has gambled with fate by remaining here.

Shrubs and trees which lose their leaves for winter may still be planted in well drained locations, since the soil can be worked back closely around the roots.

Staking is as necessary as in fall planting.

Plants of the conifer group, sold with a complete rootball of soil, help to give instant effects as do the broadleaved type of everygreen shrub.

The latter also give the double value of flowers in season as well as foliage all the year.

It is no empty promise that gardening is a year around hobby in this general area, since the variation in topography and soils add up to a similar variation in the little climates of the individual gardens.

In many cases, there is no need to wait for spring—plant it now.

Mile From Home, Woman Dies Walking In Cold

DAWSON CREEK (CP)—An attempt to walk a little more than a mile to her home from her husband's stalled truck, resulted in death for Mrs. Wilfred Hackett, 57-year-old resident of the Dawson Creek area.

Police said she was in a truck with her husband when they bogged down in a snow bank. The husband left her in the vehicle and started walking for help. When he returned, she was missing and her body was found later, about ¾ of a mile from their farm home.

Police said she apparently started walking in the 25-degree below weather and became lost in the drifting snow and darkness.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

An extensive high pressure area off the Washington coast continues to dominate the weather over southwestern B.C. Under the influence of this high skies will remain generally clear over the area. A series of weak Pacific disturbances moving toward the Charlottes will give cloudy skies to the north coastal districts with a few showers or showers of mixed rain and snow. In the interior the Arctic air continues to slowly edge southward. It is expected to reach the coastal mountains tonight and stall. Snow flurries will progress southward with the cold air.

INTERMUNICIPAL AIM

Cost-Sharing Probe Urged on Province

A government committee to hear the financing problems of municipalities was requested Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Before formal presentation to the government the request, presented in the form of resolution by Oak Bay, needs the approval of individual municipal governments.

But committee members from Saanich, Victoria, Esquimalt and Central Saanich left no doubt that their sympathy was with the strongly worded resolution worded by Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox.

Noting that provincial and federal governments continuously renegotiate the responsibility of various social programs, the resolution said a "glaring defect in this system is the position of local government."

PROPERTY LOADED

Reeve Cox, absent from Tuesday's meeting, said in the resolution's preamble that local governments are "required to provide (for social programs) out of the real property tax."

He submitted, in modern society this is no longer a reflection of the property owners' ability to pay substantial sums of money for such programs as education, health and hospital construction.".

Adding that an objective study of the problem is urgently required in British Columbia, the resolution called for the immediate establishment of a select committee to hear the municipal point of view.

The inter-municipal committee in a unanimous vote agreed that the government should be "earnestly requested . . . to establish during the 1966 session of the legislature a select committee."

It would hear representations from municipalities and municipal organizations on the general question of sharing social legislation programs.

Costs of education, health and hospital construction would get particular attention.

The special committee would recommend to the legislature "a course of action for the immediate and equitable solution of these problems."

HOSPITAL PLAN

Earlier the committee had discussed a proposal by Coun. Frances Elford, Oak Bay, that a meeting of mayors and reeves be called to discuss hospital needs with the hospital planning board.

She said that prior to the recent defeated hospital referendum no meeting were called and the issues were not clear. disagrd.

Reeve Hugh Curtis, Saanich disagreed.

"I think the issues were pretty well understood," he said. "I don't think this was voted on my an uninformed electorate. I think it was voted on by an electorate that took a firm position."

CURTIS IN FAVOR

He, and other municipal leaders, said they could only speak as individuals on Reeve Cox's resolution but they agreed that it was a move to be supported.

"Saanich council will decide whether or not to support the resolution, but I shall certainly do all in my power to persuade them to vote unanimously in its favor," he said.

Mayor A. W. Toone said he would be more than happy to take the resolution to Victoria city council for approval.

After ratification and possible amendment by various municipalities the resolution will be forwarded to the government, if possible prior to the opening of the legislature later this month.

Real Test Of Trade Sanctions Will Come In March: Welensky

By IAN MacDONALD
Special to The Times

SALISBURY, Rhodesia—The former prime minister of the then Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland believes Rhodesia is today on a suicidal course.

Sir Roy Welensky says he is certain the sanctions brought against Rhodesia by Britain and other countries will succeed in eventually destroying the Smith regime.

Interviewed at his home seven and a half miles from downtown Salisbury, Sir Roy said the Rhodesian government is reneging on its international debts.

"This is irreparably harming us," he said.

Sir Roy said he expects the full effects of the economic sanctions will be felt around mid-March and the real test of the effectiveness of the economic embargo will show towards the end of March.

He said Rhodesia will sell some tobacco but it won't be for a good price and the government will be compelled to buy the rest using funds it now holds for external debt.

"This shouldn't cloud the dangers, however, to the Rhodesian tobacco industry if the ban lasts to the end of the year.

"We will lose our principal markets forever," Sir Roy said.

'We Can Always Feed Ourselves'

"If Britain feels Rhodesia can be brought to her knees in the sense that there will be no food to eat here then Britain is wrong.

"We can always feed ourselves."

Sir Roy, who retired from active politics and now operates a fruit and flower farm, said his greatest fear is that if the sanctions are not as successful as Britain hopes then the matter could be taken to the UN Security Council and mandatory sanctions imposed.

"This would immediately raise issues for our two best friends — Portugal and South Africa."

Sir Roy said: "I don't believe there would be any military threat to Rhodesia."

He added that danger would only arise if one of the metropolitan powers was willing to back the action of the United Nations. If that happened, Sir Roy said grimly, it could lead to a major conflict on this continent. Emotionalism, the former prime minister said, is the guiding factor now.

Sir Roy said one of the delusions that many Rhodesians offer at the moment is that if a Conservative government were in power in London things would be much different here.

"That's just not true," he said. "A Tory minister told me in 1963 that it we took a unilateral declaration of independence we would be treated as a rebellious country."

Sir Roy said an indication of the seriousness of the current situation is that for once both the United States and Russia are united in a cause and are both against the Smith government. A lot of people here suffer from another delusion, Sir Roy said. They believe that South Africa will support us through thick and thin.

South Africa 'Doesn't Want Us'

"This is nonsense. South Africa doesn't want us. They don't want to be bothered with 4,000,000 more blacks just to gain the support of 200,000-odd whites."

Sir Roy, who is 59, intimated without really saying it that he would be available to act as a negotiator between the Smith government and Britain if called on.

He maintained, however, that he does not want to return to political power himself. He merely wants to see Rhodesia restored to its old glory. Although a political opponent of Ian Smith, Sir Roy, like virtually 99 per cent of the white Rhodesian population, agrees with Smith on the subject of majority rule.

"You cannot set a timetable for majority government," Sir Roy said. "If you set anything then the blacks will immediately want to cut it down. If you say 10 years then they will want it in five. Even Harold Wilson knows the futility of talking in terms of years."

Sir Roy, who visited Vancouver last year while on a speaking tour of Canadian Clubs, said he feels no animosity towards Canada for supporting the sanctions against Rhodesia.

MILITARY MISSION OFF TO LUSAKA

By DAVID GODDARD

LONDON (Reuters)—A British military mission headed for Lusaka today to discuss future arrangements for British forces in Zambia while top-level talks on the Rhodesia crisis continued in London.

Sir Hugh Beadle, 60, chief justice of Rhodesia, arrived unexpectedly from Salisbury Tuesday for talks with Prime Minister Wilson and senior cabinet ministers.

During a two - hour meeting with Wilson Tuesday night he was told of Britain's plans for the white - ruled breakaway colony if and when Premier Ian Smith's regime abandons its seizure of power.

Government officials viewed Beadle's visit as a means of discussing various key economic and constitutional aspects of the independence crisis which Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley was to have reviewed with the British - appointed governor, Sir Humphrey Gibbs, in Salisbury last week.

But Bottomley's mission to Salisbury collapsed last week after three British Labor MPs were ordered out of Rhodesia.

ACTED AS MEDIATOR

Beadle, who played an important behind-the-scenes mediatory role before Smith grabbed independence Nov. 11 was expected to stay in London for two or three days. His visit was not seen as a mission on behalf of Smith or his government.

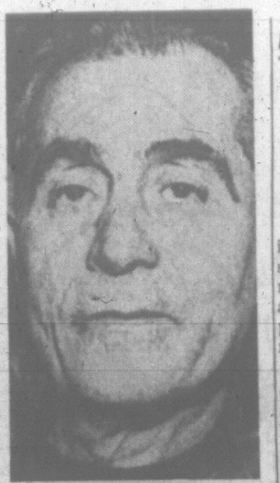
Sources close to Wilson said the British leader had no evidence that the Rhodesian government wanted to negotiate with Britain—except on its own independence terms.

Tuesday night's talks were held after Wilson presided over a cabinet meeting at which plans for tighter economic sanctions against Rhodesia were believed to have been discussed.

The British military mission arriving today in Zambia, Rhodesia's northern neighbor, is led by Maj.-Gen. John Willoughby, commanding general of Britain's Aden - based Middle East land forces.

British forces now in Zambia consist of a squadron of RAF Javelin jet fighters and a unit of the RAF Regiment.

Government sources said the sending of a mission did not indicate Britain had agreed to station ground troops in Zambia. But Willoughby could explore this possibility.



PALERMO

Can't Read, Driver May Lose Licence

TORONTO (CP) — John Palermo, 55, of Toronto, has been driving heavy trucks around the city for 35 years—with a licence and without an accident.

But the department of transport has informed him they will suspend his licence because he can't read or write English, although he speaks the language well.

The department says applicants for drivers' licences must be able to pass the road test and a written examination. Mr. Palermo can't pass the written test.

Dec. 28, the driver examination branch gave Mr. Palermo two weeks to learn enough to pass. He failed again Monday.

"Take me from behind the wheel and I'm dead," Mr. Palermo said in an interview. He has taxes and the mortgage on his home to pay, and payments on the dump truck and pickup truck he uses in his one-man business.

His nephew, John Cecy, asked the department to give Mr. Palermo a six-month extension so he could go to night school and learn to read and write, but "all they would give him was two weeks."

Mr. Palermo's illiteracy came to light when he was called in for a driver interview after he had accumulated nine driving demerit points.

"When I'm behind the wheel of my truck I can tell you what every sign means. . . . But when I'm looking at those little signs in their book I can't make them out," said Mr. Palermo.

His business operation is marginal, and he claims he cannot continue by hiring someone to drive his truck because there would be no profit left.

Mr Cecy quoted a department official as telling him:

"We're not interested in this man's living. We're only interested in his driving ability."

POLICE, SECRET SERVICE UNDER FIRE

Facts 'Concealed' in Paris Kidnapping

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Ben Barka affair is building up a dangerous head of steam in France, darkening the reputations of the French police and secret service and compromising men in the highest ranks of government.

Disclosure has succeeded disclosure in the 2½ months since a Moroccan revolutionary, Mehdi Ben Barka, 45, apparently was kidnapped by two plainclothes French policemen in broad daylight on a busy Paris street.

Ben Barka, leader in exile of the Moroccan opposition, is presumed dead but his body has not been found. Details of the kidnapping are being brought out with agonizing slowness at an official inquiry by a Paris magistrate.

Despite stern orders many weeks ago from President de Gaulle that the affair must be cleaned up, each day brings new evidence that known facts were concealed and the official inquiry thwarted.

The French press is beside itself with indignation. The conservative daily Le Figaro asks: "Who was being protected? Who is still being protected?"

The independent daily Le Monde wonders whether a climate has been built up under the Fifth Republic which has led some police to think they serve the national interest by hiding evidence. The Communist daily l'Humanite says the whole affair shows "there is something rotten in the Gaullist kingdom."

The case reached a sensational point Tuesday with the suspension of Marcel Leroy, alias Marcel Finville, a high official in France's counter-espionage service.

Leroy is the latest highly-placed figure to be accused of having concealed a knowledge of Ben Barka's kidnapping, apparently in defiance of de Gaulle's general instructions.

In another development, a former gangster called Georges Figon, 39, is reported to have committed suicide Monday night as police went to arrest him. Although police previously had sought him for weeks without success, he was found by at least two Paris newspapers.

In an interview which he later disowned, Figon allegedly told of being present when Ben Barka was beaten up and tortured in a suburban Paris bungalow, then was taken to another home and strangled.

The Moroccan minister of the interior, Gen. Oufkir, has been accused by some of the French press of having had a direct hand in Ben Barka's kidnapping and even his death. French reporters have produced evidence alleging that Oufkir made an undercover trip to Paris at the time of the kidnapping.

The Wheels Begin to Turn

THE SPEECH FROM THE Throne read in Ottawa yesterday reflects what the coming session will be: a continuation of the 26th Parliament designed to put into legislation many of the important items which did not get beyond the [illegible]ing stage last time.

Because of this, there are no surprises in the Speech. But it would be a great mistake to dismiss the proposed parliamentary agenda on that score, for a number of the matters listed for discussion are among the most important that have faced this country, including railway legislation, medicare, extensive aid to education, establishment of the Canada Development Corporation, revision of the Bank Act, and similar items which had their introduction at the last session.

Of major importance will be the federal-provincial conference forecast in the Speech, which will precede legislation, probably next year, regarding changes in tax sharing between the two major levels of government. In this connection the Speech contains a newly affirmed determination of the federal government to reject efforts of the provincial authorities to move into federal fields. The principle for which Mr. Pearson vainly sought a majority government in the general election will nevertheless be unheld: any invasion by provincial governments of the responsibilities allotted by the constitution to the federal authority will be firmly resisted.

This will no doubt lead to head-on collisions with such regional stalwarts as British Columbia's Premier Bennett, but its major impact will be felt if it heralds a stand-fast attitude towards Quebec demands for undue regional sovereignty. The present session could mark a turning-point in the trend of the past few years which has augmented provincial strength at the expense of the central government. The problems which face Canada — whether domestic or external—are not such as to be solved by a federal authority weakened by the encroachment of the provinces on its jurisdictions. Particularly is this true in the field of finances, where more and more the demands of the regional administrations have threatened the revenues of the Ottawa government.

The opting-out procedure, for instance, has been frequently exercised by Quebec, whereby the province creates and administers its own plan for various pension, welfare or educational programs rather than join in the federal plan, but receives a compensating amount of money from Ottawa to implement its local plan. This is constitutionally permissible, but carries the threat of inequality in nation-wide provision for Canadians, and erosion of the national concept.

But while this problem may dominate the session now beginning, there will be important debates on lesser topics such as the abolition of capital punishment, and no doubt in some areas not mentioned in the Speech: immigration, the CBC and redistribution of federal voting constituencies.

This session, probably the last before our centenary year, will be an important and significant one. It may well set our national course for many years to come, and in any event its effects will be felt by every Canadian regardless of location or economic level.

The education proposals alone—embracing as they do the emergency requirements of the universities and the equally pressing demands for training and re-training of workers faced with the advent of automation—will establish patterns and enter fields that are new in our federal experience. This is a session which will demand the best of every member, whether government or opposition, and the public should make it very clear that it will stand for none of the petty, time-wasting, partisan forays by Mr. Diefenbaker and others which disgusted the nation last year.

The Bankers Take Note

ACCORDING TO REPORTS from Europe, a meeting of the leading central bankers of Western nations in Basle, Switzerland, last week devoted a good deal of time to discussions of the danger of inflation—not localized inflation in this country or that, but world-wide inflation.

The bankers' consensus was not that inflation is going to hit overnight. But looking ahead they could see unpleasant signs that the pressure is increasing and the danger growing greater. The biggest trouble spot in the Western world—the decisive one, actually—was seen to be the United States, where the price level has now cracked after almost a decade of relative price stability. The New York transit strike settlement on the basis of a 15 per cent wage increase over two years was seen by the bankers as an inspiration for high wage demands by other union workers throughout the country.

The central bankers also took a dim view of the firing of M. Valery Giscard d'Estaing as French finance minister, contrary to the quiet satisfaction with which his removal was greeted in other world financial circles. They expected that his replacement by M. Michel Debre would signal an opening of the economic spending tap with consequent price increases.

The meeting also observed that the British incomes policy had virtually collapsed, prices were on the increase in Germany and even Switzerland had been forced to abandon its price stabilization policy.

There was no mention in the report of the central bankers' meeting of the situation in Canada but the latest bulletin from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on prices for December tells its own story. Prices for consumer goods and industrial materials last month were up 2.9 per cent over the same month a year earlier. Food was the major offender—up one per cent from the previous month and up 4.8 per cent for the year—but increases were also registered in housing, health care, clothing, recreation, transportation and reading materials.

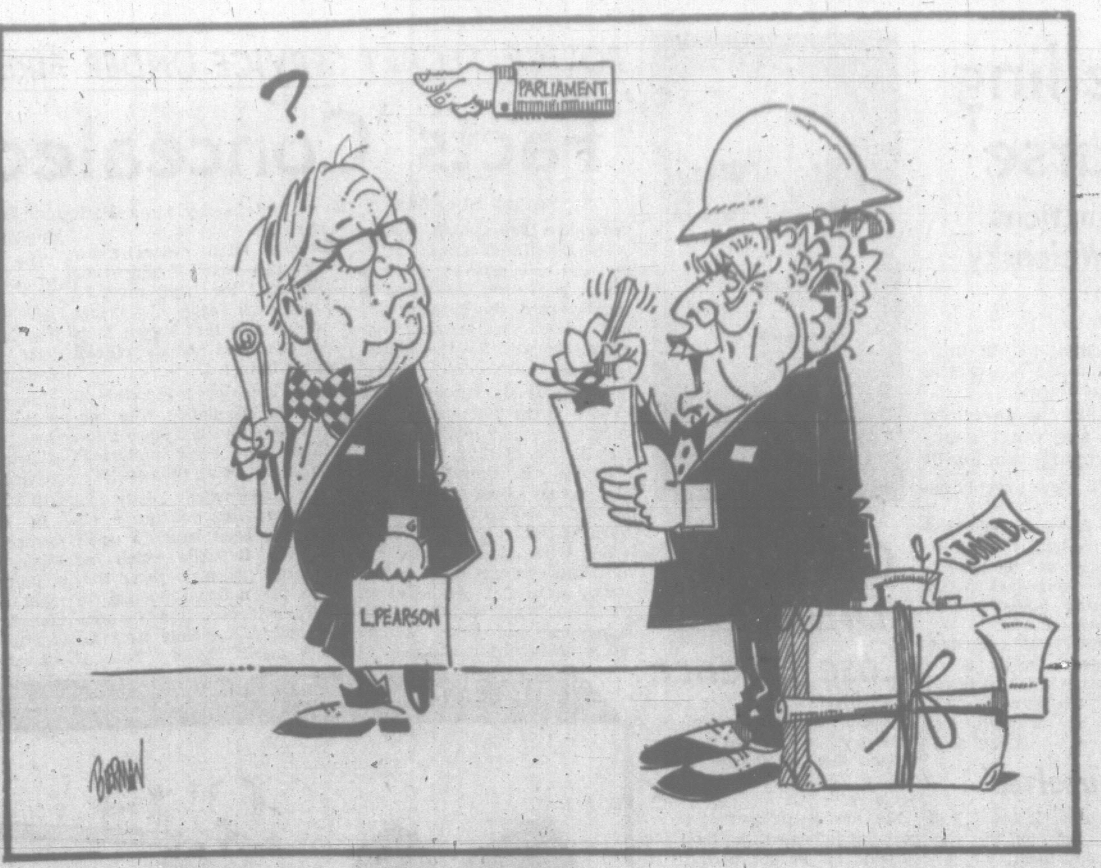
These figures suggest that in Canada, as in the United States, France, Britain, Germany and other Western nations, the cracks in the price stability wall are widening and it will take more than paper to cover them over.

In Time for Tea

THE EIGHT HOURS AND 55 minutes that a man can use in going to work, doing a full shift and returning home again will take him from Vancouver to London by Air Canada's new Hudson Bay jet route, to be inaugurated this spring.

In terms of earth-orbiting satellites, this may not be particularly fast travel. In comparison with flying time a very few years ago, it is sensational.

The importance of the new service to this part of the world will become more apparent when regular operations have shaken down. In view of the traffic from Canada's west coast to European capitals it promises a major step forward in both business and tourist travel. The western portion of this country originated 25 per cent of the Canadian-European market in air transport last year—a market that will now be served by the new Air-Canada flight and Canadian Pacific's continued use of the polar route.



—Bierman, The Victoria Daily Times.

FROM WASHINGTON

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Pause That Refreshes Le Duan

"WHEN without a previous understanding the enemy asks for a truce, he is plotting." So runs the 28th proposition of the ninth chapter of Sun Tzu's "Art of War." On this proposition of the master's, the authoritative commentary was written by the worthy Ch'en Hao. "If without reason one begs for a truce it is assuredly because affairs in his country are in a dangerous state and he is worried and wishes to make a plan to gain a respite. Or otherwise he knows that our situation is susceptible to his plots and wants to forestall our suspicions by asking for a truce. Then he will take advantage . . ."

Alsop

These words, here given in the admirable translation of the scholarly American Marine, General Samuel B. Griffith, are of almost measureless antiquity by American standards. Sun Tzu himself appears to have been a Chinese general of the early period of the warring states, which means that his probable date was in the neighborhood of 350 B.C.

As for Ch'en Hao, he stands about midway in the long succession of important commentators on Sun Tzu; he flourished during the T'ang Dynasty, rather more than a millennium ago. Yet in this season of Lyndon Johnson's noisy peace offensive, Sun Tzu's proposition and Ch'en Hao's commentary are of very great current importance.

For Sun Tzu is the Clausewitz of the Far East (and far more brilliant and perceptive, as well as miraculously less verbose than the wordy German theorist of war). And Sun Tzu's "Art of War" was the unique foundation of Mao Tse-tung's Theory and Practice of Guerrilla Warfare, and of the development of Mao by the masterly North Vietnamese General Vo Nguyen Giap.

In both the Chinese Communist and North Vietnamese staff schools, students therefore quite often learn by rote both the basic text and the main commentaries of Sun Tzu. One can be quite certain, then, that proposition 28 of the ninth chapter and Ch'en Hao's commentary have been solemnly quoted 50 times a day by policy-makers in Hanoi, ever since the Johnson peace offensive began.

It will seem very odd indeed to the countless American authorities on Asia who have never studied Asian history or set foot on Asian soil, yet the deadly seeming appositeness of Sun Tzu and Ch'en Hao may be assumed to have impressed the North Viatnamese government a lot more than such richly comic gestures as sending Arthur Goldberg to talk to the Pope.

The betting is increasingly heavy, to be sure, that the prime motive of the President's peace offensive was the domestic politics, as astutely defined by Ch'en Hao. Furthermore, since negotiations are obviously undesirable at this time, the almost vicious negative North Vietnamese response to date should be a matter of deep relief.

Other Considerations

But just before the jet-propelled take-off of another international diplomatic fuss of this type, a little more consideration really ought to be given to the character of the intended audience. In the present case, there were several other things to consider besides the characteristic modes of thought and standards of judgment of the North Vietnamese and Chinese Communists.

There was, to begin with, the enormity of the price of a prolonged pause in the bombing of North Viet Nam. Bombing attacks on lines of communications are not the most damaging possible kind of attack on North Viet Nam; but the American pilots, who have risked and sometimes lost their lives in these attacks, have none the less done a brilliant job.

Before the pause, repairs of roads and rail lines had caused such an acute manpower shortage that only women were left to till the fields in a good many provinces. Very young girls were being mobolized as road-coolies. Inter-provincial communications were already breaking down.

Breathing Spell

In other words, the pressure, although not of the most severe sort, was already beginning to produce quite crippling effects. The prolonged pause has therefore acted as a heaven-sent breathing spell, permitting all serious damage to be put right again. And thus the fact should be faced, it has probably helped to prolong the war.

Then too, the internal political situation in Hanoi deserved some consideration. Briefly, failing health has almost certainly reduced Ho Chi Minh to a figurehead. The real power is in the hands of the secretary of the Communist Party, Le Duan. And Le Duan not only made his party reputation by criticizing the decision to negotiate with the French in 1954; he was also the original organizer, and he is still the principal director of the "War of Liberation" in South Viet Nam.

Le Duan's personal situation, therefore, will always compel this man to reject negotiation, except under irresistible duress or with an abject promised surrender as bait. A peace offensive and a longed-for respite from bombing are not duress. Instead they have no doubt given Le Duan exactly what he wanted most—arguments to persuade doubters within the North Vietnamese politburo, that American weakness of will and lack of resolution can still be counted on to bring victory in the end.

LBJ PROPOSAL

By RICHARD PURSER

Negro for a Neighbor?

MANY Congressmen, from Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield on down, hoped to approach the new session of Congress on a hold-the-line basis. It was to be chiefly a session of review and consolidation, following the sweeping legislative achievements of last year. Concern with Viet Nam and increasing costs of the war there, it was believed, would take the edge off any drive for new domestic programs. The main task of administration supporters would be to prevent conservatives from using Viet Nam as an excuse to chop existing programs.

Purser

But President Johnson saw things differently. In the domestic portion of his State of the Union message, he not only came out as expected for both "guns and butter"—he wanted a virtually new edition of his already extensive "Great Society" program. His humanitarian concerns of the past appeared in no way diluted by his concern over Viet Nam.

His new legislative proposals are so many and so controversial that a now-muted Congress may be transformed into a Congress of seething controversy. Some are predicting a rough election-year Congressional ride for the President if he tries to push his full program through.

By far his most breath-taking initiative came in these words: "I propose legislation, resting on the fullest constitutional authority of the federal government, to prohibit racial discrimination in sale or rental of housing."

Core Problem

This strikes at one of the core problems of America's greatest sickness: the inability of Negroes who make the difficult breakthrough into the middle class to find decent housing commensurate with their income and in neighborhoods shared with whites of similar income and culture levels. Everywhere, one finds the prevalence of ghettoism. This is nowhere more true than in the nation's tinderbox capital, where half a million Negroes of all classes are squeezed together, unable to buy or rent a house in the white enclave of Northwestern Washington or the lily-white garden suburbs of Maryland and Virginia.

At present, the government can only ban discrimination in the 17 per cent of housing built with federal insured mortgages. This can be done by executive order, without legislation. But if non-discrimination is to mean anything on a national scale, which it must if eventual racial explosion is to be avoided, legislation must be sought to prevent private mortgage lenders from discriminating.

The administration believes such legislation can be drafted under the constitutional clause giving Congress the power to "regulate commerce . . . among the several states," because lending agencies are usually inter-state operations.

If such legislation can be devised in an effective form, it will face immense opposition: from the South, from the lobby, from powerful real estate interests which have capitalized on discrimination—and from the whites of thousands of suburbs, whose cocktail party liberalism vanishes when a Negro tries to enter their neighborhoods.

Sop to Civil Rights?

So unlikely does a bill to ban housing discrimination appear of passage, that some have already accused Mr. Johnson of putting the housing section in his speech as a public relations sop to civil rights advocates. But if he means business, the resulting battle in Congress could put America on trial.

Other civil rights proposals also face potent opposition, but chiefly from the south: Legislation to enforce non-discriminatory jury selection and to make the murder, beating or intimidation of civil rights workers crimes within the reach of federal courts.

To "improve the quality of American life," the President proposed programs to plan the growth of entire metropolitan areas and to build the whole urban neighborhoods of up to 100,000 people, to sweep pollution out of the air and out of entire river basins, to legislate for highway safety, to protect the consumer from deceptive labelling and credit gypping, to build a supersonic transport, to collect 35 stumbling, overlapping government agencies into a new, powerful and coordinated department of transport at cabinet level, to study the redesigning of American federalism, to get the political parties out of the clutches of big contributors.

Eyes on November

These and other proposals, if all or even several of them reach Congress as bills, could lead to a far livelier session than returning Congressmen had in mind. Legislators hoping to adjourn in late spring now may find themselves with only two months left for the hustings before the November elections.

Significantly, the only passage in Mr. Johnson's speech to draw extended applause from Congress was the one proposing a four-year instead of two-year, term for members of the house of representatives. As it is now, the 435 representatives find themselves almost continually campaigning for re-election. For next November, they can consider themselves campaigning now. Democrats and Republicans alike, it is their question to answer: Is the President attempting to move too fast for the voters?

MARKED for READING

A GOOD YARN

Recently "Science" reported some work on spiders, and it was found that webs spun on Mondays were different from those made on other days of the week. Did the spiders know it was Monday? No. But they did eat their webs every Sunday night when the scientific staff wasn't there to destroy them. And apparently, eating a web makes a spider construct a different one the next day.

Women at Night

Here is an important suggestion for women who must be out at night.

Instead of carrying a handbag, which we so often read is the cause of a hold-up, or an assault, etc., have a tailor put a deep pocket on the inside left side of your coat, large enough to hold your wallet, change purse, glasses, compact, hankie, etc. A good tailor will charge only $1.

Any woman equipped in this manner and wearing a pair of reflective pedestrian arm bands which glow white a block away in the headlights of a car, when she is out at night, need have no fear of any kind, either of being held up, or of being run down by a car when she crosses a street.—Be Prepared.

"Rhodesia and 1776"

When the United States took their freedom from Britain in 1776, they considered that they were acting under the guidance of God. In fact, they prospered greatly, and are today, perhaps, one of the most powerful, richest, and most highly civilized countries in the world. Their breakaway was, it is generally acknowledged, very much the result of bad government on the part of Britain, and history has shown it to have been highly beneficial to the world at large.

Rhodesia's breakaway from Britain shows a very similar pattern, and that it has been caused by the mistakes of the British government; and not only the present government under Mr. Wilson but previous governments must also take some of the blame.

Now that Rhodesia has made the breakaway, she should be allowed to work out her plan and purpose for her people without interference from anyone—least of all from the other African states who, by their example, have nothing whatever to show that their independence was either fairly earned, or in any way deserved. — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

School, Hospital Needs

The recent rejection of the hospital and school building referendums clearly indicates one simple fact, viz., that if such buildings are necessary and urgent—and I believe they are—then this antiquated and archaic system of asking the public for permission to build should be scrapped immediately.

If the two senior governments are not prepared to provide the two most important assets of this or any other country, then regardless of what parties are in power, they are not doing their job. The health and education of Canada should be far beyond local voting, often by members of a public who are not in a position to be sure of why they are voting either yes or no.

If the school boards can show just cause to the department of education for additional buildings then the construction should go ahead and costs be met out of general taxation or other sources of government revenue . . . the public pays anyway. To have the school boards spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year continually planning for school accommodation for three years ahead is ridiculous, for no sooner have they completed planning for one period than they must start on the next and are never sure whether the buildings will be ready in time. Incidentally, this last rejection should be a lesson to the Victoria School Board to either do a better job of their estimating or be quicker in letting their contracts so as to avoid increased building costs.

Likewise, if areas can show the department of health sufficient reason for the construction of hospitals then there should be no further delay in providing them.

It is surely obvious that since many home owners have no direct interest in schools, then some of them are not going to self-impose additional taxes and as always we have an element amongst us who have been fortunate never to have been confined in a hospital and until that day arrives, feel they never will. Therefore they vote no to more building.—Reader.

Shocking

Nowadays when it seems fashionable in some circles to defy long-respected conventions, newspaper readers should be about shock-proof when they read some one's latest brain-wave. Makes one convinced such persons are slightly demented or else publicity-seeking. For example, take the story in the Victoria Times last week about the Harvard University psychiatrist proposing a course in U.S. schools and colleges, on drinking alcoholic beverages.

Surely this fellow cannot be serious. If he is, then most right-minded parents must wonder what is the value of trying to train their sons and daughters to be sober, upright and respectable, and avoid harmful habits.

Isn't there enough tragedy already, due to drinking alcohol? Enough broken homes, enough young boys and girls in trouble? But here comes this supposedly intelligent professor talking about teaching youngsters to hold their liquor; about giving youngest children "very weak drinks at first, increasing alcohol content for older students."

Shocking, to phrase it mildly.—C. J. Frowde, 3922 Cadboro Bay.

"IT SURE WAS NICE OF YA TO LET ME SHOW JOEY ALL THESE...
....JOEY? AW, JOEY, COME BACK HERE!...

Looking Back

From The Times of Jan. 19, 1906:

(From an editorial quoting the Toronto News): "If there is any one province that bids fair to rival Ontario in population and wealth it is British Columbia. Its position on the west coast is an extraordinary advantage. It will first feel the growth of Pacific and Oriental trade. It is generally expected that Japan will help develop the provinces of China. The population of that country is so large that a very small increase in the consumption of foreign goods by each individual will mean a large increase in the aggregate."

Canadians Spend $2 Billions Yearly On Tobacco, Liquor

The United Church Observer

A year ago the Canadian people spent $1,904,000,000 on smoking and drinking.

Of this $1,092,000,000 was spent on alcoholic beverages. Another $812,000,000 went for tobacco and smokers' accessories.

This is more than five times as much as we spent on home furnishing and five times what we spent on furniture. It is nearly double what homeowners spent on fuel, electricity and gas combined.

It's almost exactly three times what we spend for all boys' and men's clothing. It is more than 40 times as much as all the charitable contributions from all Canadian corporations.

We spend nearly four times as much on tobacco and liquor as on family and youth allowances. Our total bill for liquor and tobacco is 12 times as high as all the pensions for all the veterans of the First and Second World Wars.

19 Times Medicare

This is 19 times as much as a national medicare scheme would cost above present expenditures, according to a Toronto Star estimate of medicare costs Dec. 1, 1965.

It is approximately 47 times as much as it would cost to provide free tuition for all qualified Canadian university students.

The recent reports on poverty in Canada draw this wasteful trade to our attention. The beverage alcohol industry has a lot to answer for in this matter. For two centuries the Canadian Indian has been exploited by the alcohol industry. The poor and the weak continue to be exploited by the distillers and brewers. Every stockholder in such industries can think about that.

The $1.9 billion (much of which, of course, is recouped by governments through taxation) is only a portion of the real cost to society. No one can estimate the proportion of our astronomic costs of crime, highway accidents, absenteeism, fire destruction, that should be charged to alcohol.

Whenever we write about this sort of thing the scoffers dismiss our criticism and cow some of the critics by labelling us puritans, kill-joys, prohibitionists. This is not the question before us. Prohibition did not work and is an unnecessary infringement on the rights of individuals who drink and smoke temperately. Many good citizens, including many sincere Christians, enjoy alcohol and tobacco in moderation. Those who don't should neither seek to deny them their privilege, nor suggest that total abstainers or non-smokers are in any way superior to them.

But some new things have been added since tobacco was discovered and automobiles were built which should make responsible persons, be they moderate consumers of alcohol and tobacco or abstainers, co-operate in a common concern.

One is that there are about 250,000 alcoholics in Canada (228,115 in 1962, but they are increasing) directly hurting at least a million persons. Another is that excessive use of tobacco is a serious threat to health.

Did you wonder about that incessant beer advertising during the fall, as you watched football games with your boy? Do you ever think about it when you watch the hockey games Saturday night with your children?

Did you notice any inconsistency between the radio jingles urging you to drink more alcohol and the annual campaign to end the New Year's drunken driving? Do you ever wonder why beer advertising has become so blatant and so continuous?

It is because the revenues are enormous, the profits great, the shareholders numerous. Governments have become dependent, and some political parties reliant on it. Most newspapers, magazines and broadcasters feel they just have to have alcohol and tobacco advertising.

This is why we Canadians hear so little of these facts. No radio or TV commentator, no successful politician, no newspaper editor is likely to deal forthrightly with this subject. And even ministers in their pulpits and laymen at their work have become almost silent about one of the most paradoxical issues of our time.

Every responsible person knows that too many Canadians are drinking and smoking too much.

Constant Barrage

Yet we are all the objects of a constant, tasteless barrage of advertising from a trade that is concerned for profits, and apparently callous about the waste and suffering that result.

On the one hand we have government-supported addiction research. We are spending money, and some people are spending their lives, trying to control these excesses.

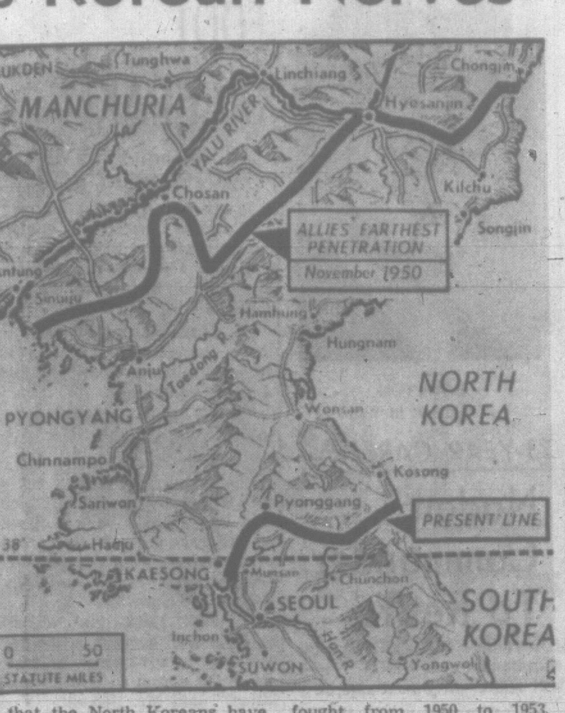
And on the other hand we have high-priced copywriters, and smooth-voiced announcers being used to get more and more people to drink and smoke more and more.

We see no hope for any effective education on addiction and intemperance as long as such advertising is permitted. We see no hope for temperance or moderation outside nationalization of the manufacture, distribution and sale of tobacco and alcohol products.

We believe tobacco and alcoholic beverages should be available for those who enjoy their use. But because the toll in efficiency and life is so great, we believe no person or industry has the right to promote their use for the sake of personal gain.

Viet Nam Jangles Korean Nerves

By RICHARD HALLORAN
The Washington Post



SEOUL — The intensified war in Viet Nam has caused a distinct tensing of mind and muscle here in Korea, the northern anchor of the Western Pacific defence line that runs from here through Okinawa and Taiwan to Southeast Asia.

In Korea, the sensitivity to incidents here has gone up all along the line, says a military source. Another adds, "What used to be considered a normal occurrence, we now have to look twice to see if it has a special meaning."

If the war in Viet Nam expands, the state of alert here will increase. Both Americans and Koreans think of their situation as an integral part of one struggle between the Communists and non-Communists in Asia.

Offers Lessons

Conversely, if peace should come to Viet Nam, the recent history of Korea will offer lessons on what the future holds. The Korean and Vietnamese wars will have been different and the peace agreements most likely will be different, but Korea sets a precedent for American commitments required to maintain a non-Communist Viet Nam.

The main change American military officers here have seen so far was a sharp rise in the number of infiltrators from North Korea last fall. By October, says one source, "we were alarmed by the incidents of terror against the Koreans and wondered when Americans would become targets."

Military sources here say they noticed an upgrading in quality and aggressiveness of agents trying to come across the 4,000-meter wide demilitarized zone that separates the opposing armies. They say Communist infiltrators are better trained, armed, and equipped, and are carrying radio receivers and transmitters.

Instead of melting away when accosted by an American or Korean patrol, the agents more often will try to fight their way through. Stopping these infiltrators has become the main job of forces here.

Military sources here say that so far they have not seen major movements or redeployment of the North Korean troops opposite them. Nor have they seen signs of Chinese troop movements from Manchuria across the Yalu River.

At the so-called negotiations at Panmunjom, Koreans and Americans say they haven't seen much change in the demeanor or line of their opposite numbers. Last July, the Chinese sent a new delegate, Ting Kan-ju who was challenged by the United Nations delegate, Major-Gen. Harry J. Sands, Jr., for lack of credentials.

Ting has refused to reveal his rank in the Chinese army, in line with the abolition of rank and insignia ordered by Mao Tse-tung. During the meetings, Ting sits at the right of North Korean Major-Gen. Pak Chung Kuk, indicating his influence in the Communist delegation.

The relative strength of the Communist and United Nations forces has changed gradually since 1950, military officials say. On the ground and at sea, the United Nations is clearly superior. In the air, however, the difference is less marked.

500,000 Men

The South Korean army numbers more than 500,000 men, grouped into 18 army and one marine divisions. The United States has about 50,000 men here, with most combat forces in the Second and Seventh divisions. Several other nations still maintain token forces.

On the other side, the North Koreans have about 340,000 men. But behind the Yalu are the massive Chinese armies.

Military sources here say that the North Koreans have more airplanes than the South Koreans, mostly MiG-15s and Il-28s all flown by North Koreans.

The South Koreans are still largely equipped with F86s, of Korean War fame, but are having their air force slowly modernized with F5s.

A point of some concern here is whether the United States will pull out some of its troops for duty in Viet Nam.

The Korean government vigorously opposes the suggestion, arguing that it would be an open invitation to the North Koreans to resume hostilities. The Koreans also say that the presence of the American troops gives Korea psychological support. An unmentioned benefit is the $60-million the maintenance of the troops here pours into the Korean economy.

American officials here are sensitive to Korean feelings on the subject of possible transfer of troops and are quick to assure that there are no plans for this.

Should the war in Viet Nam spread into a general war in Asia, Korea would most likely be the second front to be hit. American military officials do not expect a resumption of the same sort of war that was fought from 1950 to 1953. Instead, they expect to see guerrilla and terrorist action behind the lines.

The Communists could harass the United Nations forces without firing a shot. The Chinese could move troops across the Yalu under the pretext of holding manoeuvres, or without explanation at all. Even the most routine movement would be "alarming," says a military source. The Chinese would be within their rights to do this, so long as they do not exceed the number of troops they had in Korea on July 27, 1953, when the truce was signed.

If President Johnson's current peace offensive should be successful and the Communists are willing to discuss an end to the Viet Nam war, the Korean story gives some idea of what's coming. The talks to arrange the Korean truce took about two years before the shooting stopped and have been going on intermittently for the last 13 years without progress toward a political solution. Meantime, the United States has maintained at least 50,000 troops and logistics and headquarters establishment that gives every appearance of a permanent garrison.

Just the Beginning Of Battle in Asia

NEW YORK—James B. Reston, an associate editor of The New York Times, said here that the war in Viet Nam was just the beginning "of an enormous battle of Asia" that could go on until the year 2000.

Reston, in an interview on National Educational Television, said "that battle will go on for the rest of the century, and Viet Nam is not the end of it but the beginning."

"If we win in Viet Nam, the battle will still go on, and what I am afraid of is that we will try to score a great, smashing victory, thinking that will end it all, which it won't."

Reston said he thought the United States "began to get off the track" in Viet Nam when the late President John F. Kennedy decided in 1961 to increase American troop strength.

Reston said he spoke with Kennedy following Kennedy's talks with former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Vienna in the spring of 1961.

"He said, looking back on the Bay of Pigs fiasco, that Khrushchev has decided that anybody who was stupid enough to get involved in that situation was immature and anybody who didn't see it all the way through was timid and therefore could be bullied," Reston said.

"And Kennedy said to me then: 'We will never do anything with these people now, unless we make our power relative to them . . .' And it was at that time in order to make this power credible that he came home here, he increased the military budget by $6 billion, he sent the Rainbow Division to Germany and, most importand, the escalated in Viet Nam —not because the situation on the ground demanded it in Viet Nam, but he wanted the 12,000 men in Viet Nam at that time, because he wanted to prove a diplomatic point, not a military point.

Off the Track

"And that, I think," Reston said, "is where we began to get off the track, in my view."

Reston said he felt the United States could best pursue its policies by limiting the Viet Nam war, possibly through defending only the perimeter of Saigon and the coastal areas where most of the country's people live.

Reston also commented, during the interview, on President Johnson and goals in the presidency.

"If you said he couldn't fly from here to the Washington monument, he'd get up on the roof and start flapping his arms. He just wants everything. He wants to be loved, but wants to achieve whatever he sets out to achieve.'

Reston said "one of the great misconceptions about Johnson is the idea that "because he is not intellectual, he is not intelligent. He is an enormously intelligent man."

Reston said he spoke with Johnson in 1964 before the presidential election, and that Johnson told him: "You know, I want to do only one thing as president. I want to try to unite the American people. But I don't know whether we are far enough away from Appomattox that a Southern president can really unite the people of this country, particularly against this big eastern intellectual press.' They're trying to cut me up."

THE GALLUP POLL

Most Canadians Believe Relations With U.S. Good

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Canadians continue to be serene about our friendliness with the United States. A large majority feels that our relations have improved or remained the same over the past two years.

Only a small segment (8%) claims that our relations with the Americans have worsened, while 78% are satisfied that all is well between us. This same ratio of opinion is reflected right across the country.

The question: "In the last couple of years do you think Canada's relations with the United States have improved, become worse, or changed very little?"

	1955	Today
Improved	27%	33%
Became worse	6	8
Little change	56	45
No opinion	11	14
	100%	100%

In a regional breakdown today, it is shown that Canadians think pretty much the same across the country.

	Maritimes	Quebec	Ontario	West
Improved	33%	36%	34%	31%
Become worse	5	7	8	9
Little change	44	38	48	49

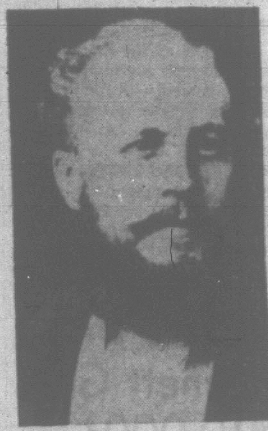
Founders of B.C.



Robert W. W. Carrall, MD.

When Canadians celebrate their national holiday on July 1, they should give part of the thanks to a pioneer British Columbia statesman, Dr. Robert W. W. Carrall.

He was one of the province's first three senators and it was his bill, 12 years after Confederation, which made the holiday official. There had been previous attempts, but many parts of Canada still opposed the national union and didn't see it as a cause of celebration. Passage of Carrall's bill was the first legal ruling that was accepted by banks and other commercial ventures. The "Act to Make the First Day of July a Public Holiday by the Name of Dominion Day" was passed May 15, 1879.

Robert Carrall was born near Woodstock, Ontario, in 1839. He was educated at Toronto and Montreal. Graduated from McGill as a doctor in 1859, he practised in Canada but soon found himself a surgeon in the northern army in the U.S. Civil War.

In 1866 he was back under the British flag, practising at Nanaimo. Two years later he moved to Williams Creek seeking Barkerville gold rush prosperity and he became Cariboo representative in the Legislative Council of the United Colony of British Columbia, remaining in office until 1871. He was an ardent unionist and in 1870 was a delegate to Ottawa for talks that led this province into Confederation in 1871. He was immediately appointed one of the first senators from B.C. He died in office in eastern Canada in 1879.

The Shrill Canadian Voice Of Anti-Labor Extremism

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Fisher

"Nearly 30 years ago Ernest Bevin referred to the shrill, predictable advocates of extreme authoritarian action against striking workers as the "brainless wonders of modern industrial society."

In Canada today they seem to be even shriller and even more predictable. They break out with each crisis in railway wage negotiations and another such crisis is almost upon us.

"Jail the leaders . . . Fine the union until it is broke . . . Fire the strikers and bring in sensible workers . . . Call out the troops." The refrains are familiar and lamentable. Why? Some of it is the apparatus of the press, struggling to present the news in an arena in which it is not sure of itself. This unsure approach seems to have three elements.

Firstly, the publishers and through them their editorials have the natural prejudice of management.

Secondly, the reporters, in the main, have a natural tendency to sympathize with the strikers but are conscious of the management bias of their proprietors and management. More important, they concentrate understandably upon incidents of violence and lawlessness because that is more exciting and newsworthy.

* * *

To this rich field of strike strife come the "brainless wonders" with their venom and malice, preaching hatred of labor unions and their leaders, making it almost impossible to engage in any reasonable discussion of industrial relations or of the severe internal problems of unions in which the general public must take a legitimate interest.

No one can condone violence on a picket line but anyone who seeks to understand it can surely do so. The picket line is a needed instrument in free industrial relations. It spawns hatred between the men who see their jobs taken by others and those who cross a picket line because their conception of principle differs or because of their sense of personal interest and responsibility or because of contract obligations.

I am not generalizing from the abstract here because I've had the epithets of Scab and Fink put to me from snarling lips this past year.

People who act habitually on principle or who, in particular circumstance, can afford to act on principle must judge a picket line on its merits. The major crossing of a picket line which has taken place in recent years was during the picketing by the Seafarers' International Union of Upper Lakes Shipping.

Then, it was organizers of the legitimate Canadian labor movement who sought to organize and protect the "scabs" who had crossed before them. The movement's judgment was that the SIU was hoodlum-led and in league with other companies.

* * *

In the same way each individual makes his own judgment according to his lights. The picket line remains, the hatred remains, the likelihood of incidents remains, and the impossibility of policing every action along the line remains. The "brainless wonders" would have these incidents invalidate the process of industrial democracy.

Further, they assert that every unlawful act by an individual is an act by the union and that all unlawful acts are on the union side. I would sentence these "brainless wonders" to a course of reading the documents filed before the Canada Labor Relations Board and provincial boards on unlawful activities of management to keep their employees from forming unions.

They should read the transcript of evidence before the Norris industrial inquiry at which the Canadian Labor Congress and just one solitary company—Upper Lakes Shipping—put forward a mass of evidence about violence along the waterfront. Then I would require them to write an essay on "Hal Banks and Canadian Ship Owners."

At the best of times, it is a dilemma we face when dealing with unions and their leaders. They seek a closer integration and a wider role in society. At the same time they surround themselves with an almost impenetrable wall.

Their sense of insecurity is high. They are constantly close to the battle line and tend to conduct their internal society like a nation at war. The "brainless wonders" feed their worst fears and magnify the problems of industrial relations.

Row Shaping Over '67 Show

Greater Victoria's Confederation - Centennial Committee is digging in to defend its decision to hire a United States company to handle the year-long celebrations in 1967.

The decision to hire the John B. Rogers Producing Company was made at the end of a 2½-hour session Tuesday after three individuals had outlined their plans for the committee.

Robert Rice appeared for the Rogers company, Peter Mannering for Bastion Theatre Studio, and George A. Hamilton for the company bearing his name.

Before the day was over Edward A. MacFayden, elected president of the Greater Victoria Celebrations Committee at Tuesday night's annual meeting, said he would do all in his power to prevent the U.S. company from producing shows here.

Mr. MacFayden said he would seek legal advice this week to see what could be done on an official basis.

INDOOR SHOW

In accepting the Rogers' company bid the committee stressed that it looked with favor on the Bastion Theatre proposals and said it would recommend to the professional organizer that he contact the theatrical group with the view to staging a proposed indoor show during 1967.

The local group led by Mr. Mannering had offered an outdoor pageant and an indoor stage production for a total cost of close to $40,000.

Mr. Mannering, who appeared before the committee, said there would be no revenue from the outdoor pageant which would cost $28,300 to produce, and that the indoor show would lose $6,000

The indoor stage show would cost between $12,000 and $26,000 to produce depending on the length of the run.

The Rogers Company forecasts a loss of $23,760 on its operation, a loss the committee is prepared to accept.

LOGGERS' SHOWS

On the preliminary Rogers' program were listed loggers' shows, a 10-day pageant, fun fairs and a dozen different "days" ranging from a young Canada Day to a Pioneers' Day.

In addition to running the 1967 show the Rogers' Company will also have a man in Victoria during 1966 to act as adviser and co-ordinator to local groups staging productions during British Columbia's birthday celebrations.

A third presentation was made by George A. Hamilton who offered the committee a $144,500 package which showed a paper profit of $30,000.

His shows included performances by the regimental band of the Black Watch, a circus, a dog show, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and various other attractions from the performing arts.

The Hamilton program was for 1966 only.

A fourth bid from a Calgary company was not discused.

In proposing that the Rogers' bid be accepted Coun. Arthur Mebs said he thought it would be better if the activities of both years were co-ordinated by the same firm.

The nod was given to the Rogers group on a consulting basis for 1966 and full time in 1967 "under terms to be negotiated."

Several committee members stressed that they would like to see the Bastion Theatre Studio strongly encouraged to stage its indoor show at McPherson Playhouse.

Committee chairman Ald. Mike Griffin said he was sure there would be more than enough money to back such a production.

Where Did Bennett Get $10,000?

A member of the Greater Victoria Celebrations Committee wants to know where Premier Bennett got the $10,000 in prize money he donated to the Kelowna Regatta.

Keith Smith, a veteran member of the long-established committee, said he wondered just which government pocket the outright grant came from.

"The premier has donated $10,000 to Kelowna for prize money and I think the Greater Victoria Celebrations Committee should ask just where it came from. We could use a similar grant here."

President Edward A. MacFayden said he would try to find out.

Preliminary discussions on the Victoria Day celebrations resulted in plans being laid to use the Crystal Garden for youth events during the weekend activities.

Other ideas included approaching the army to see if a four-day forced march contest could be held with units of the armed forces and civilian teams competing.

Winning team would march in the Victoria Day parade.

The committee will also approach the provincial government to see if the famous Pasadena float accompanied by the Beefeaters band would be available for the parade.

On the downtown front the Chamber of Commerce will be asked to organize merchants for a store window decorating contest and the manager of Woodward's Mayfair Shopping Centre will be asked to support a ban on all private vehicles in the parade marshalling area.

During the election of officers, which saw Mr. MacFadyen elected chairman, John Rafter won the vice-president's post.

Elected to the executive were Bryan Wright, Bob Bullivant, Tom Outteridge, Alex Johnson and Jack Dirom.

Premier Bennett Tuesday said the throne speech in Ottawa proves that the slow speed of Canada's economic expansion is the fault of the federal government.

"Canada has got to learn to drive the economic system at 70 of 80 miles an hour," he told a press conference.

"We've been too used to going 20. We shouldn't cut back and cut back."

His retort was aimed at a paraghaph in the speech which said there would be a cutback of federal projects in areas where private capital expansion was intensive as an anti-inflationary measure.

"I don't think that should apply in B.C. because, while our economy is advancing the fastest in the nation so is the population," said Mr. Bennett.

CUTBACK REJECTED

"We have more unemployment than some areas of Canada because of this influx of population . . . so there is no reason for any cutback in this province by the federal government."

The premier did not comment on the reference to a national medicare program and said much of the speech was not new.

His general description of the speech was "it's just milk and water" — recalling that in his boyhood children were given a hot water and milk substitute while adults drank coffee or tea after dinner.

He singled out one sentence which said the federal government, "while respecting fully the responsibilities of the provinces," is determined to maintain its constitutional role as a central authority.

"We find no fault with that," said Premier Bennett.

"But they haven't done that—respect the provinces' responsibilities—and I'm glad to hear they're going to.

"Most of the trouble in Canada has been caused by the federal government going beyond its field."

He said Ottawa had taken over income taxation as a war-time measure and had not relinquished it although the provinces were still stuck with responsibilities which the income tax was intended to finance.

ELECTORAL REVISIONS PLAN SOON

Premier Bennett Tuesday promised the legislature will be the first to know what is in the redistribution report.

"It will be filed in the Legislature forthwith," he told a press conference.

"If it's there at the opening (of the session Jan. 27), it will be filed on opening day.

"The government files the report and then the government makes its decision on the report."

The premier was answering a question as to whether the royal commission report, being prepared by Dr. Henry F. Angus for the government, would be filed with legislators before the government took a position on its contents.

TCA Crash Cause Still A Mystery

TORONTO (CP) — Air Commodore R. H. Bray, one of three commissioners who investigated the Ste. Therese, Que., air disaster that claimed 118 lives Nov. 29, 1963, says the cause of the crash will probably never be known with certainty.

Director of engineering for Computing Devices of Canada Ltd., he told members of the Canadian Aeronautics and Space Institute Tuesday night the cause of the crash is a mystery despite one of the most thorough and intense investigations in Canadian civil aviation history.

The Trans-Canada Air Lines (now Air Canada) DC-8F jet bound from Montreal to Toronto crashed minutes after takeoff at Ste. Therese.

Air Commodore Bray said all but one of the clues considered in the crash have been discounted.

The pitch-trim compensator on the aircraft may have malfunctioned, he said, causing the pilot to overcompensate for an apparent upward thrust and lose control.

BENNETT URGES CANADA

Follow B.C. to Roses

Premier Bennett Tuesday proposed Canada follow British Columbia's lead by sending floats and exhibits to next year's Rose Bowl parade to start the Confederation centennial year.

"They should put on a real showing, instead of half of the RCMP musical ride (as sent this year by B.C.) they should send the whole thing."

Mr. Bennett said the New Year's Day classic in Pasadena, Calif., is an international event and Canada should flood the parade with entries next year to reap a tourist bonanza and demonstrate its unity.

"Canada should pretty well dominate it. It will have a tremendous audience and it would show the world the Canadian unity that really exists."

CHARGE CAN'T BE LAID IN 'DELAYED' MURDER

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A man imprisoned for shooting a woman who died 4½ years later, apparently can't be charged with murder, says assistant district attorney Warren Shafer.

"After a year and a day, homicide is out of the question," he said.

Juan F. Fernandez was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon after his common-law wife, Carmen Madrid Alvarez, was shot in the neck in 1961. Until Tuesday when she died, she lay in hospital paralyzed from her broken neck down.

Fernandez had pleaded guilty to the assault charge and is in San Quentin State Prison.

. . . GRITS

they managed to alter the state of Canadian society.

But all this changed Nov. 8, 8.

It wasn't so much that these same political reformers—led by Walter Gordon—had recommended the unwanted general election and mapped out its dismal strategy. The real reason for their downfall was that the Canadian people remain totally unimpressed by what they have done. The maelstrom of activity that marked the first Pearson parliament—which saw the pasage of at least two dozen major pieces of legislation—had so little effect on the voters that they elected only two more Liberal MPs than they had in 1963, before any of these presumably beneficial laws had been passed.

Although more than a little of the blame must go to Lester Pearson's failure to articulate persuasively his party's accomplishments, it's obvious from this week's throne speech that the activists have been moved well out of the range of policy making.

Except for the pledge of increased aid to higher education, no new legislative initiatives are proposed in the entire document.

This doesn't necessarily mean, however that there's been a pronounced shift to the right in the ideological direction of the cabinet.

OBJECTIVES ONLY

The speech does not betray ideological content of any kind, right or left. It is a statement of objectives, not principles.

The only hint—and it's just a hint—that the Gordon forces haven't been entirely routed, is the one sentence: "You will be asked to approve legislation to establish a Canada Development Corporation."

Since Robert Winters, who leads the Liberal party's right-wing, was known to be dead set against this government-sponsored device to help repatriate the ownership of Canadian corporations, its inclusion is significant. (But it's a minor victory at best, because the Liberals have already admitted they don't accord the measure much priority.)

While no consistent political philosophy emerges from the current throne speech, there is evidence of the kind of approach that the Liberals intend to take in the months ahead. They seem to be returning to the conviction — which so strongly marked the Liberal administration of Louis St.-Laurent — that most problems facing Canada have administrative solutions.

SHOW PIECE

Apart from increased aid to education, the legislative education, the legislative "showpiece" of this session is to be the government's reorganization bill. The Liberals apparently believe that if only they can re-establish their once-vaunted reputation for administrative competence, the nation's difficulties will somehow solve themselves.

This might have been a viable approach to the problems of the simpler Canada of the immediate postwar years. But it will take compassion and insight, not just efficiency, to deal with the present-day tensions threatening to tear apart our confederation.

Judicial Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Cardin announced Wednesday a judicial inquiry into the conduct of Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Cross Into China

HONG KONG (AP) — Thousands of Hong Kong Chinese poured across the border into China Wednesday to spend lunar new year holidays with families and friends. British authorities predicted a record 850,000 Chinese would cross the border to China during the holiday.

Driver 'Shocked' By Her Own Actions

Magistrate William Ostler threatened jail terms Tuesday as a deterrent to serious cases of impaired driving.

He indicated in central court that stiffer sentences may be handed out after fining Daphne Hay, 928 Bay Street, $400 after she pleaded guilty to impaired driving through downtown Victoria Monday night.

Court was told the woman was seen driving south on Douglas with her lights out at 7:45 p.m.

She drove on the wrong side of the road after she crossed Queens Avenue causing oncoming traffic to scatter, court was told.

Police said two cars sought refuge in a service station driveway, two others pulled over to the wrong side of the road to avert a collision and another car pulled into the curb.

SKIDDED TO STOP

At this point the motorist skidded to a stop near Chatham, backed up, forcing a police vehicle to retreat 100 feet.

She then drove west on Chatham to Government and went through a red light at Pandora, police said.

The woman motorist, then parked her car in front of the Government Street liquor store, half on the curb and half on the road.

A breath test revealed a .17 per cent blood-alcohol reading.

"Does this recital shock you?" asked Magistrate Ostler after the evidence was read.

"Yes, sir," she replied.

"It shocks me," the magistrate continued.

"The increase of serious impaired driving cases in this area is so alarming nothing short of jail sentences is going to have any effect."

The woman was prohibited from driving anywhere in Canada for 18 months.

Studded Tires To Be Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Highway Safety Council will launch an investigation into the usefulness of studded tires.

The council's executive committee said following a meeting with its provincial managers that the tires are sold and used across Canada despite the fact their use is forbidden in all provinces except Alberta and British Columbia.

Some officials claim roads are damaged by the metal studs inserted in tire treads to prevent slipping on ice.

. . . INDIA

our inner strength is the greatest asset and it is this inner strength that has helped us through many obstacles and to solve many problems."

Mrs. Gandhi did not cast her vote, apparently in a gesture of staying out of the party quarrel that developed over her power bid.

Following Mrs. Gandhi's example, Desai did not cast his vote either.

Mrs. Gandhi is a member of the Rajya Sabha, the upper house of India's Parliament. Desai is a member of the Lok Sabha or lower house.

Of the 176 Congress party members of the upper house, 164 cast ballots.

Of 375 members of the lower house, 358 voted.

Eight members could not cast ballots because they had not paid their party dues. Others, ill or away from New Delhi, could not make the trip to the capital.

It was the first time in the history of this democratic-socialist nation of 480,000,000 people that a hard fought contest of this type had gone to the ballot.

Desai bid for power after Nehru's death but finally backed down and Shastri was chosen.

In a bid to save the party's unity, many leading Congress politicians shifted to Mrs. Gandhi when Desai publicly announced he would fight for the top job. Desai was regarded by many Congress party members as a potential liability at the polls during next year's general election.

The sudden shift to Mrs. Gandhi smashed the hopes of Nanda to get a permanent grip on the post. He served as acting leader after Nehru's death, as well as after Shastri's.

Another hopeful, Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan, quickly backed out of the race when Mrs. Gandhi began collecting public support.

The election today was actually for the Congress party's majority leader in Parliament. Under the Indian constitution, the majority leader automatically is asked by President Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan to form a new government.

The Congress party, with 551 members in Parliament, has a huge, unchallenged majority.

National Unity Stressed by Gov't

(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA—The Canadian government laid heavy stress in the Throne Speech on its resolve to maintain the constitutional responsibilities of the federal authority.

The speech said the government felt that the Canadian confederation must draw its vitality and strength from the mutual respect and co-operation of national and provincial governments.

"The Canadian people can be well served by their political institutions only if each element in our federal system is able to act effectively within its constitutional sphere," said the speech.

RESOLVED

It added, "while respecting fully the responsibility of the provinces, the government is equally resolved to maintain the constitutional responsibility of the federal authority."

The Throne Speech noted that the approach of the centennial of confederation made it of the utmost importance that Canadians in all parts of the country should look to Ottawa as its "true capital" where they can feel at home.

"To this end my government will continue to work toward the broadening of the bilingual character of the public service. The national capital should increasingly reflect the nature of the Canadian society.

JACK and JILL
COUGH SYRUP COUGHS COLDS

Pleasant-tasting Jack & Jill Cough Syrup with added Vitamin C Works wonders—children love it.

One of the most disturbing sounds a mother can hear is her child coughing at night. A nagging cough from a cold seems so much worse when it's irritating a child. The throat membranes of children are more sensitive, more easily hurt.

This is why W. K. Buckley spent years perfecting his special cough syrup for children. His time and trouble have been well rewarded. Today, Jack & Jill Cough Syrup helps more children's coughs than any other product in Canada. There are a number of very good reasons why Jack & Jill Cough Syrup is preferred by most Canadian Mothers.

The carefully selected ingredients in Jack & Jill Cough Syrup are double-acting. They relieve the congestion that causes so much trouble, and they relieve irritated throat membranes, making it easier for the child to swallow. Jack & Jill eases the irritation and lets your child rest comfortably.

Children like Jack & Jill. The mild, wild-cherry taste gives this cough syrup the pleasant flavour that children like so well. Jack & Jill Cough Syrup is both a treat and a treatment. And every dose of Jack & Jill contains added Vitamin C . . . the vitamin children specially need when they are feverish.

Jack & Jill Cough Syrup for children is sold everywhere. Ask for it by name.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Rolling Hills Set Pace

Rolling Hills sparked trading on the mining section of the Vancouver Stock Exchange shortly before noon today rising .33 to $1.63 on sales of 368,000 shares.

Kamloops was traded actively, increasing .08 to .67 on 212,000 shares. Dynasty sold 12,000 shares rising .25 to $18.

In the industrials, B.C. Telephone gained $2.50 to $72.50 and Pacific Coast Terminals increased $1 to $25.

Wall Street suffered a setback today as profit-taking and several recent big gainers took losses.

During trading Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average hit the 1,000 level but at no time during the half-hourly reports was the average higher than 994.37.

Heavy volume in speculative issues highlighted trading today at Toronto.

AT TORONTO Wiloo led the speculative list with a gain of 14 cents to $1.63 on more than 520,000 shares. Duvan added 6 at 26 on 486,000 shares; D'Eldona, which had been up 30 cents earlier in the day, was ahead 5 cents to $3.20 on more than 600,000 shares.

Among industrials, losses outnumbered gains with Canada Cement off 1½ to 48¾, CPR 1⅛ to 66⅛ and Canada Iron 1 to 67½. Massey-Ferguson and B.C. Telephone each gained ½ to 34⅜ and 73.

AT NEW YORK IBM lost 9, United Aircraft 3, Polaroid, Kennecott and Eastern Airlines 2 each and United Airlines 1.

General Motors backed away from an early gain exceeding a point and showed a fractional rise.

Rails speeded a decline amid talk of a possible strike March 31. Pennsylvania Railroad lost 2. Down 1 were Santa Fe, New York Central and Southern Pacific.

AT MONTREAL industrials were up among the senior groups as most sections moved fractionally higher in moderately active trading today.

AT LONDON the market was firm today on selective buying although most price movements were small. British funds were a stronger section than recently and advances were recorded in the medium and long-dated stocks.

General Motors jumped five points in dollar stocks and among Canadians to strengthen were Algoma, Abitibi, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas, and International Nickel.

Boat Splits In Crash Program

VANCOUVER (CP)—A tugboat that comes apart at the seams —intentionally—is speeding up construction of the High Arrow Dam on the Columbia River.

The tug, which has the resounding name of F.D.J.V. 104 and pushes instead of pulling, is designed to battle river currents in moving huge self-dumping barges of fill to the damsite.

The F.D.J.V. 104 was designed just last fall by marine architect E. A. Drake of Vancouver, owned and built by Dominion Bridge Co. in a crash campaign to replace inadequate tugs already plying the river.

The High Arrow's contractors require each of five barges to carry 300 tons of fill a distance of 2,000 feet with a turn-around time of 20 minutes.

The F.D.J.V. 104 is expected to keep the schedule by pushing the barges from behind. Its hull has two v-shaped tunnels, making the bottom look like the letter "W". Two deep keels permit the vessel to be run up easily on beach or sandbar. Twin rudders and outsize propellers are designed to push and steer one or two barges as well as the tug itself.

Built in two longitudinal sections, each eight feet wide, it has two separate engine rooms and watertight compartments, which can be transported separately by truck and bolted together at the destination.

Assembly or dissassembly takes less than a day.

Dominion Bridge reports another under construction, the F.D.J.V. 105, and the towboat industry is reported watching the behavior pattern closely with an eye to possible future use on the Fraser, Skeena and other B.C. rivers.

NEW SUBSIDY POLICY BLASTED BY PREMIER

Premier Bennett said Tuesday exclusion of provincial shipbuilding contracts from federal subsidies was aimed directly at B.C. by the Liberal government.

"I am asking officially through the press that the prime minister take a second look," he told reporters.

"It is a very shortsighted policy and completely unworthy of a government that says it believes in national unity."

Mr. Bennett said the government has plans for "one or two ships" to be added to the ferry fleet but he wouldn't say which routes they would serve.

"It (the Ottawa decision) won't hold that up but it may mean we won't start as early as we might have."

The premier said that no worthwhile provincial programs would be held up by any federal policy "no matter how stupid."

"It's too bad the federal government would rather give a subsidy to the CPR or some other private ship owner rather than the province," said Mr. Bennett.

HUSBAND, WALLACE

Grim Effects Predicted

Victoria shipyards today forecast grim effects on the B.C. shipbuilding industry if current federal subsidy proposals are approved by Parliament.

Harold Husband, president of Victoria Machinery Depot, said his yard "badly needs work for 1966 to keep the outfitting trades busy."

John Wallace, Yarrows Ltd. general manager, said the whole Canadian shipbuilding industry will suffer because overseas yards will tempt domestic buyers with their lower construction costs.

"It is apparently discrimination against the B.C. Ferries," Mr. Husband said, referring to the proposed 25 per cent subsidy that excludes provincial government ship contracts.

Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill Monday said the federal 35 per cent subsidy — frozen early in 1965—would be cut to 25 per cent for the next three years.

After that it will be dropped 2 per cent a year until 1972.

UNDERCUT COSTS

It applies across Canada and would not improve B.C.'s competitive position with eastern yards who are able to undercut western labor costs.

Mr. Wallace pointed out there is no duty on Canadian ships built in the U.K.

He said Japanese and other foreign shipyards are able to produce estimates lower than Canadian builders, despite duties.

"I am very disappointed in the reduction after nearly a year of uncertainty," Mr. Husband said.

"It is very questionable whether the purpose for which the subsidies were designed, that is to encourage Canadian rather than foreign-built ships, will be met."

He said proposed tariff changes also would operate to increase Canadian costs.

"If this ruling operates to stop further BC. Ferry orders, it will be very serious for B.C. shipbuilders," Mr. Husband said.

"At VMD we have no ship contracts."

Mr. Wallace said the 25 per cent subsidy would encourage B.C. owners to have large tugs, large barges and other vessels built here in light of there having been no subsidy at all since last year.

He said he did not understand why the proposals do not apply to provincial government vessels.

"It would appear that this was aimed at B.C.," he said, pointing out that the federal government operates major ferries on the east coast.

SUNSHINE TRADING SUSPENDED

VANCOUVER (CP)—Shares of Sunshine Comstock Mines Ltd. were suspended from trading Monday on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Jack Van Luven, president of the exchange, said Sunshine had failed to comply with the exchange's listing requirements. He said the suspension will be in effect until further notice and gave no indication when this would be.

Mr. Van Luven said the company filed a proposal for development not acceptable to the directors. He indicated the company had subsequently disregarded the ruling.

The president of the company is George Groves, of Armonk, N.Y.

Finishing Work Eyed

SALMON ARM (CP) — Canada is falling behind the U.S. and other countries in producing secondary wood products, a specialist from the federal department of industry said here on the weekend.

Dan Jellicoe told a public meeting interest must be developed in raw wood to help raise employment in the finishing end of the industry.

"We have almost entirely stopped the shipment of raw wood to the U.S. from Quebec to the benefit of that province," he said.

Mr. Jellicoe said a special seminar on woods products will be held in Kelowna March 16. Up to 150 persons, including persons involved in the lumber industry and bankers, are expected to attend.

A specialist from Los Angeles also will attend, Mr. Jellicoe said, because "the market there is a demanding and and we need a specialist to outline its requirements."

Gerry Gall, another federal spokesman, told the meeting the area must base future industry on its resources potential.

The north and sough Okanagan must operate as a single region because no centre in the valley is big enough to go it alone, he said.

CUTTING WOODEN "RIBBON" in front door of first completed dwelling in $4 million home-building program by Columbia Cellulose Co. is Mayor Peter Lester of Prince Rupert. Columbia sponsored the project to provide more than 200 all-electric residences to house new residents flocking to B.C. city as result of $80 million pulp mill now under construction. Copper Exports Under New Rules

OTTAWA (UPI)—Canada has introduced new regulations for overseas export of copper.

Trade Minister Winters announced today the regulations cover export of copper scrap, copper alloy scrap and copper bearing scrap.

Winters said the new regulations are a further step "to assist in maintaining orderly marketing in a situation of growing world shortage" and ensure an adequate supply of copper for Canadian users.

The government last Nov. 22 placed export control on Canadian copper ores, concentrates, matte, anodes, all refinery shapes, rolled copper rod, copper and copper base alloys in all mill forms and secondary ingot and copper scrap.

Since then all overseas exports of these materials have required an export permit.

Under the new regulations a quantative limit has been set (on a quarterly basis) on the amount of copper scrap materials which may be exported overseas.

The first quarter quotas will include materials for which export permits were issued from Jan. 1 to March 31, 1966.

The trade department said established exporters will receive individual quotas related or based on their overseas exports in a base period running from January, 1964, to July, 1965.

The department said the quotas will hold shipments to the level of the base period "and will represent a substantial reduction from recent levels."

Retains Third Place

TOKYO (Reuters)—Japan retained its place as the third largest steel producer in the world after the United States and Russia by turning out 41,170,000 metric tons of crude steel during 1965, the Japan Iron and Steel Federation has announced.

Strike Talks Resume

VANCOUVER (CP)—Talks were to resume here today in an effort to resolve the remaining stumbling block to settlement of a strike at British American Oil Co. marketing division.

The current round of negotiations began Tuesday but neither the company nor the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (CLC) would indicate progress, if any.

The only issue hindering settlement of the four-month dispute involves a company proposal to split the present single seniority list into three zonal seniority lists.

The unions has rejected this, contending that workers who supported the strike would be penalized in any future layoffs while those who did not strike would not be affected.

Fifty-nine of the 87 drivers and warehousemen in B.C. went on strike Sept. 14. Among them are eight men in Victoria and four in Nanaimo.

Probes Cost $32,000

TORONTO (CP)—Expenses incurred by Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd. in connection with two investigations of its stock activity in 1964 totalled almost $32,000, the company's annual report shows.

Included in the total is $11,633 for the indemnification of directors under the bylaws of the company for their counsels' fees. Other expenses listed in the report are $4,353 for transcripts and $945 for travel.

The investigations were by a commission of the attorney-general of Ontario and a royal commission under Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Higher Output Predicted For Cowichan

VANCOUVER (CP) — O. G. Macdonald, president and managing director of Cowichan Copper Co. Ltd., said in the company's annual report Tuesday the company should be able to pay off all its debts by the end of this year.

The prediction is based on continuation of world copper prices.

Mr. Macdonald forecast in his report an increased capacity for the next few years at the Jordan River mine, and a resumption at the Blue Grouse property at Cowichan Lake.

Cowichan Copper shut down its operations in December of 1963 following flooding of the Jordan River mine, and was out for two years.

BUILDING COSTS COULD SOA R EXECUTIVE WARNS

Skilled Tradesmen Needed

Construction in Canada faces further snowballing of costs unless something is done to supply more skilled tradesmen, an F. W. Woolworth executive said Tuesday.

"The biggest problem facing Canada (in the construction industry) now is the lack of skilled labor," said J. S. Spence, of Toronto, supervisor of construction for Woolworth's in Canada.

"This lack has the snowballing, detrimental effect of pushing up costs and means that contractors must go out and spend more to get men.

"The west may not have quite the same problem as the east, where Expo is draining off skilled tradesmen to Montreal," he said.

But the current booming development program in Canada will require more skilled men everywhere as it continues to expand, Mr. Spence said.

PARTIALLY OFFSET

Higher costs are being offset partially by production and technological advances within the industry, he said.

And improvements are such that quality and value are being maintanied, even though traditional methods are being abandoned.

Mr. Spence is here in connection with construction of a new Woolworth's department store between Douglas, Broad and View Streets, where the store's old property is now being razed.

The new building will not be as large as the Woolco store at Town and Country shopping centre, which is regarded as a full-size department store.

It will have two sales floors and an office-stock-food preparation area above.

As a department store, it will be a major departure from the traditional Woolworth concept.

"The five-and-dime store is long gone," Mr. Spence observed.

Woolworth's new building will have an impressive facade utilizing dolomite panels, arches and a sidewalk canopy with limited glass areas.

Contractor is G. H. Wheaton Ltd., which expects to complete construction by he fall.

DAMAGE COMPENSATION FOR B.C. FRUIT TREES

$4,000 Ceiling Angers Growers

PENTICTON (CP) — British Columbia fruit growers did an about-face Tuesday when they learned of a $4,000 ceiling on individual compensation for frost damage.

Delegates who earlier had drafted a resolution commending the federal and provincial governments for the assistance plan quickly withdrew their support on the floor of the B.C. Fruit Grower's Association convention.

Ordinary procedure at the convention was set aside and delegates substituted another motion seeking renegotiation of the assistance formula "on a realistic basis." The motion was approved swiftly.

Announcement of a joint assistance plan for growers whose trees were killed or damaged by December 1964 frosts had been made several months ago.

Tuesday, provincial agriculture minister Frank Richter told delegates that compensation would be limited to $4,000 at the rate of $400 an acre.

S. J. Land, director from the Okanagan Centre local of the association, said he could no longer support the resolution describing the federal-provincial compensation plan as "most useful and realistic." Mr. Land helped draft the resolution before the fruit growers learned of the $4,000 limit. "I was absolutely staggered to hear that a man with 10 acres will get the same compensation as the man with 40 or 50 acres," he said.

REVISION TWO YEARS OVERDUE

New Bank Act Changes Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — "Banking legislation and related proposals will be place before you."

With those 10 words the speech from the throne at the opening of the new Parliament Tuesday formally advised assembled MPs and senators to go to work on possibly their most complex and time-consuming task of the session.

The bank act, the main legislation on which the banking system operates in Canada and which gives the eight chartered banks their charters, is already two years overdue for its decennial revision. A draft revision was submitted to Parliament last year and now even that draw is being revised.

A government official said that one of the first items to be submitted to the new session will be an extension of the present act, probably to the end of this year, to enable Parliament to work at the revision without deadline pressures.

He said the new revision will be different from the one submitted last session, and that recommendations of a royal commission which made a two-year study of the field will be taken "fully into account."

REVISE QUEBEC ACT

In addition to that bulky bill, Parliament will be asked to revise the Quebec Savings Banks Act and make amendments to the Bank of Canada Act.

Work actually began in 1962 when a royal commission was appointed under Chief Justice Dana Porter of Ontario to undertake the first thorough examination of the banking and finance field in 30 years. It took two years to complete.

The Porter commission's recommendations were widely hailed by men in the banking and finance business, but won little acceptance by former finance minister Walter Gordon in the revision of the bank act he submitted to the Commons last year.

The commission recommended removing the ceiling of six per cent on interest the banks may charge, suggested lifting the ban on mortgage lending by the banks, called for full disclosure of interest rates charged creditors of all kinds, and urged that all institutions doing banking business be brought under uniform legislation. This would embrace the trust companies which now accept deposits from the public.

Interior Power Co. Gets Hydro Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Government-owned British Columbia Hydro confirmed Tuesday it had made an offer to purchase East Kootenay Power Co. Ltd., one of the few remaining private power utilities in the province. East Kootenay directors indicated they and Power Corp., a Montreal holding company, would accept the Hydro offer.

The offer, which would total $3,400,275, is conditional upon receipt of at least 90 per cent of the outstanding shares. Hydro will pay $275 for each of 9,201 preference shares and $29 for each of 30,000 common shares.

Power Corp. holds 4,361 preference and 19,003 common shares.

East Kootenay, incorporated in 1922, serves southeastern B.C. and a small portion of Alverta with two hydro plants and a steam plant with total generating capacity of 35,000 horsepower.

Purchase of East Kootenay by B.C. Hydro would leave West Kootenay Power and Light Co., a subsidiary of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., as the last major private power utility in the province.

Canada Iron Announces Stock Split

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada Iron Foundries Ltd. Tuesday announced that the quarterly dividend payable April 1 to shareholders of record March 1 will be 25 cents a subdivided share, a 50-per-cent increase over the quarterly dividend rate in effect since July, 1965.

The announcement was made at a special general meeting of shareholders called to sanction a three-for-one subdivision of Canada Iron common shares. The subdivision was approved and is to take effect Jan. 31.

Two additional shares are to be issued to shareholders at the close of business Jan. 28, giving them three shares for each one held before the subdivision.

President H. J. Lang reported 1965 net profit of $5,183,000 or $6.19 a share, compared with $3,536,000 or $4.15 a share in 1964.

Net sales reached $133,867,000 in 1965, compared with $112,402,000 in 1964.

Federal Ship Officers Join Merchant Guild

VANCOUVER (CP)— A Canadian Merchant Service Guild campaign to organize officers on federal government ships has been 100 per cent successful on the west coast, the guild secretary says.

Capt. E. W. Meadows, speaking at the guild's annual meeting here Monday, said almost all officers located on the west coast are now members of the guild.

"All masters, mates and engineers except for 12 in the Vancouver area and maybe 15 in the Northwest Territories — a maximum of 50—are now members," he said.

Capt. Hill Wilson, western branch president, said the campaign to organize officers on both coasts is under way in anticipation of the government's granting bargaining rights to federal employees.

EDUCATION WILL GET MORE MONEY

OTTAWA (CP)—A substantial increase in federal financial aid to universities for the 1966-67 academic year will be proposed to Parliament this session, the throne speech said Tuesday.

This "initial response" to the "acute financial difficulties" faced by universities and colleges would be followed up with other steps after discussion with the provinces.

The Bladen committee report on education last October recommended federal grants totalling at least $330,000,000 in the next fiscal year, rising to more than $500,000,000 by 1970. The current level is about $80,000,000 annually.

During the election campaign, Prime Minister Pearson said the government accepted the Bladen estimates that university enrolment would reach 461,000 in the 1975-76 academic year with total government spending at $1,704,000,000.

DISCUSSION NEEDED

Mr. Pearson said education is an investment that yields good returns but a federal response must come only after consultation with the provinces.

After announcing the government's plan to increase grants, the throne speech said the government will "convene a meeting to consider continuing action in a manner that recognizes differences in the educational systems and institutions of the provinces." It did not elaborate.

It said that although the government fully respects the jurisdiction of the provinces in education matters, it recognizes a "pressing obligation" to foster more effective development of human resources by aiding the expansion of higher education, and providing more opportunity for young persons to attend.

It reiterated past Liberal proposals to introduce a system of scholarships and bursaries, and said there will be amendments to the Student Loans Act.

Education was one of the major issues in the federal election campaign, with Opposition leader Diefenbaker calling for an increase in per capita grants to universities to $5 from $2 annually. The New Democratic Party advocated free tuition for university students.

In Montreal Monday, Quebec's Premier Lesage said his government intends to exercise its jurisdiction in all fields assigned to the province in the British North America Act.

He said his government would ask to opt out unconditionally from any federal program to provide further assistance to universities. Quebec wants its share of the money without having to give a commitment that it will be used for education, he said.

Death Penalty Vote 'Soon'

OTTAWA (CP)—A government promise first announced in December, 1964, for a free vote on capital punishment was repeated in the throne speech Tuesday.

"Arrangements will be made for you to decide the issue of capital punishment at an early date," the speech said.

The debate was postponed last year because of the pressure of business in the Commons, the summer recess and then dissolution of Parliament for the Nov. 8 election.

FOR CENTENNIAL

National Anthem Vote Possible

OTTAWA (CP)—The government will make another attempt, on the eve of the centennial of Confederation, to have O Canada adopted as the national anthem.

The throne speech, as it did last year, also proposes God Save the Queen as the royal anthem in Canada.

A Liberal promise in the 1963 election campaign was to propose a distinctive Canadian anthem within two years of taking office. The deadline expired last April 22.

But with the centennial year 11 months away, and the government evidently trying to instill a sense of unity among Canadians, vigorous efforts to adopt an anthem are expected in this session.

There were bitter debates in the Commons in 1964 on which English and French verions of O Canada's lyrics should be used.

SIDETRACKED

A government resolution on the two anthems was introduced May 28, 1964, but was sidetracked by a 33-day battle on a resolution for the maple leaf flag.

The flag was adopted and finally flown last February.

Reference to the anthems was made in the speech from the throne last year but wasn't debated during the session.

In neither speech has it been specified which version of O Canada lyrics will be proposed.

VERSIONS DIED OUT

The tune was composed in 1880 by Calixta Lavallee as a patriotic march to be played at a French-Canadian cultural meeting held that year in Quebec City.

The opening bars bear some resemblance to the Priests' March in Mozart's Magic Flute.

The French words were written the same year by Mr. Justice Sir Adolphe - Basile Routhier of Quebec's Superior Court.

Different English lyrics were written in 1908 by Robert Stanley Weir, another Quebec Superior Court justice. As dozens of other English versions died out, it gradually became accepted across Canada.

A government spokesman said Tuesday the proposal for the two anthems could be sent to a special House committee where the dispute over lyrics could be thrashed out.

'We'll Opt Out' Que. Comment On Federal Plan

(Times Quebec Bureau)

QUEBEC—"Opting out" was Quebec Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie's comment Tuesday on federal measures to aid higher education announced in the speech from the throne.

He said the province would opt out of the program of scholarships and bursaries to students in institutions of higher education.

Of the amendment to the student loan system he said that Quebec was already opting out of this program and would continue to do so.

He said that "established procedure" would be followed in the matter of increased federal grants to universities. The province would receive its share of federal funds by way of a fiscal compensation rather than by the direct grants from the federal government to universities in the province.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said that opting out was not just a matter of "principles or prejudice."

ESSENTIAL

He said that it was essential to have an integrated program of education.

In the matter of financial aid, he said, it would be "inconceivable" to have a federal system and a provincial system in competition with each other.

HARD BARGAINING FACES OTTAWA, PROVINCES

National Medicare Price Mounts

OTTAWA (CP)—A round of hard bargaining is in prospect for federal and provincial governments before a national medical care insurance program is placed before Parliament.

Federal authorities estimated Tuesday the price tag on the program may be as much as 20 per cent higher than originally anticipated. It probably will be at least $700,000,000 a year to cover all Canadians.

First real discussion on a national program is expected to take place at the end of this month when federal and provincial health ministers sit down behind closed doors to allocate the $500,000,000 fund offered by Ottawa to expand medical, dental and nursing training and research facilities.

Federal interest in medical care insurance was re-affirmed in the throne speech at the opening of Parliament Tuesday and the discussions to shape a national program were signalled as a prior step to legislative action.

Ontario, a key province in launching a national program, has already indicated dissatisfaction with medical care insurance proposals made public last July by Prime Minister Pearson.

But federal officials considered the difficulties being raised now are the usual negotiating points thrown out to feel out federal reaction.

For example, Premier John Robarts of Ontario said Monday a federal share of $14 per capita is too low. His government figures $20 per capita would be closer to reality.

Ottawa offered to pay half the average national per capita costs and, officials say, the current estimate is closer to $17 and may go higher.

JFK Brother-in-Law Leaves Peace Corps

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson announced Monday that Sargent Shriver was leaving the Peace Corps to devote full time to running the administration's war on poverty.

Shriver, who has headed the Peace Corps since it was launched by his brother-in-law, the late president John Kennedy, will be replaced by Jack Hood Vaughn, assistant secretary of state for Latin-American affairs.

NINE CITIES CONSIDERED

Portland in Running To Join AFL in 1967

HOUSTON (AP) — The American Football League shifted expansion gears today and announced plans for expansion by two additional teams for the 1967 season.

Commissioner Joe Foss, in announcing the plans, listed nine cities under consideration—Portland, Ore., Los Angeles, Anaheim, Calif., Chicago, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and New Orleans.

The commissioner said there was no particular significance to the fact the AFL would expand by two teams when it previously had been announced that the league planned to take in one team at a time until it became a 12-team league.

SPORTS DIARY

By SHIRLEY POVICH
(The Washington Post)

WASHINGTON — From the speaker's table at the Washington Touchdown Club dinner, Otto Graham glanced down the line toward the Baltimore Colts' second-string fullback and offered the suggestion, "Tom Matte should ask the Colts for 70,000 dollars next season."

The 2,000 celebrants clapped hands, but Graham's remarks brought one man to his feet in wild applause.

This was Matte himself. The husky, uninhibited 200-pounder was grinning and cheering at the whole idea that he was worth much more of the Baltimore team's money. With vigorous nods toward Graham and a wave from the spotlight that had searched him out, Matte was telling the assembly he was in hearty agreement with the speaker's remarks.

He was something the Colts had brewed in desperation an instant quarterback for their last three games of the season. With the Colts in despair after Johnny Unitas and Gary Cuozzo were hurt, it was reserve fullback-halfback Matte whom coach Don Shula fingered as the fellow who had played some quarterback in college five years before.

Matte lighted up the whole National Football League with his late-season heroics for the Colts. He got them into the Western Conference playoff against Green Bay Packers and almost got them home in that one, which was lost in sudden-death overtime. He was the most talked-about played in the NFL and then he devastated Dallas with his passes in the Runnerup Bowl.

Colts May Not Want the Job Back

He wasn't taking seriously any belief that he was more than a stand-in quarterback, awaiting the return of Unitas before relapsing into the anonymity of a No. 2 fullback who could also take a turn at halfback. Before the Runnerup Bowl, he had said: "This is the end of my three-game career as quarterback. They can have the job back."

But since the Colts' impressive victory over Dallas, with Matte throwing touchdown passes and otherwise performing like a professional at the job, neither he nor the Colts are certain that Matte's career as a quarterback is at an end. The clock might not have struck midnight as yet for the Colt's Cinderella man, who may have brought a new dimension to the job of quarterback.

The question that Matte answered in the Dallas game was: Could he hit a target with his passes? After all, it had been five years since he had quarterbacked at Ohio State, where passing quarterbacks were second-class citizens on Woody Hayes' power teams. And in practice with the Colts, Matte had confessed that his arm was so tired he had a fear it might drop off.

Specially Suited for Rollout-Style

He was on target with every kind of pass against Dallas amazingly so on his long pitches. And he demonstrated that his passing arm was no longer covered with rust. But what he was bringing to the job also was a rollout pattern for which he was specially suited, in contrast to the frail vessels who could get hurt as quarterbacks when they step out of the protective pocket.

Matte in his last game was more than the scrambling quarterback of the Fran Tarkenton type. He was the fullback who could get rocked by a tackle and survive, or shake off a tackler and pick up ground if he lacked receivers. He was inviting another look from Coach Shula and could line up with the quarterbacks next season.

The whole idea should please Matte, who has not been one of the high wage earners in the NFL and is aware that the quarterbacks can drive Cadillacs. Matte's skills my not cause Johnny Unitas to tremble at the security of his No. 1 quarterbacking job, but Unitas next fall may be very much aware that he has company in addition to young Gary Cuozzo.

Peep Sheets Will Tell Matte Story

Matte is scarcely destined for the National Football League's Hall of Fame at Canton, Ohio. No niche may be waiting him there, but he is already represented in Canton nevertheless. Dick McCann a curator of the hall, has already procured the peep sheets Matte taped to his wrists, and from which he called the plays. They will be on display under glass for future generations of football fans, to tell the Tom Matte story.

The Colts are giving Matte more thought as a quarterback for other reasons. The attrition on quarterbacks has been so increasingly heavy that only the rugged types can withstand the hurts. If the quarterbacks are to be targets of increased blitzing, well, those who have learned how to get hit have special value.

Matte played his college football at Ohio State, but actually he is a Pittsburgh boy. It has come out lately that he was born only two blocks from the same house in Pittsburgh that was the nativity of Johnny Unitas. There is no truth to the report that Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Colts, had seeded the area.

L.A. Dodgers Team of Year

By Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers, winners of 13 straight games in a late-season surge that enabled them to capture baseball's National League pennant, have been named the 1965 Team of the Year in the annual Associated Press roll.

The Dodgers, who also won the World Series, collected 102 first-place votes and 499 points in the balloting by 303 sports writers and sportscasters.

Michigan State's football team, champion of the Big Ten, was second with 55 first-place votes and 287 points. The UCLA Bruins, basketball's U.S. college titleholders, were third with 251 points followed by Boston Celtics, professional basketball champs, with 221.

TIMES' OPEN FEES . . . . . . JUMP $2 TO $5

Economic Boom Hits Golfers

Canada's booming economy is catching up to district golfers.

The Victoria District Golf Committee, at its annual meeting Tuesday night, approved entry fee increases for three tournaments, including the Times Island Open.

Golfers competing in the Times Island Open, which this year will open with the qualifying round March 27 at Uplands, now will have to pay a $5. entry instead of the customary $3.

Entrance for the 54-hole City Amateur has been increased from $4 to $5 and monthly medal rounds now will cost $2.50 instead of $1.50.

The Committee generally agreed the increases were long overdue. "The cost of prizes," noted secretary Leo Derman, "is considerably greater today than it was four or five years ago. In addition, the returns to the clubs, in the way of green fees, has been ridiculously low."

The increase in the Island Open fee is the first since the Times undertook sponsorship in 1955. The $3 entry fee has been in vogue for the past 10 years.

Each $2 of the Times' fee goes back to the club as green fee. The remaining $3 goes to the District Committee for junior development.

This year, the open championship, which will be defended by Laurie Carroll, will open with the 18-hole qualifying round at Uplands March 27. Match play rounds will be held April 3, 10, 17, 24 and May 1.

Other tournament dates set at Tuesday's meeting were: Centennial Foursomes, May 15, at Victoria Club; City Junior, May 29, at Victoria, and City Amateur, at Victoria June 5 and 12.

The committee, which returned Harry Young as chairman, also looked into the possibility of holding the 1966 B.C. Amateur in Victoria. B.C. Golf Association officials said today, however, the provincial event has already been awarded for 1966 but that Gorge Vale will be the host club for the 1968 championships.

The B.C. Amateur was last held in Victoria in 1962.

In addition to Young's return, the committee elected John Carlow as vice-president and re-elected Derman as secretary-treasurer. Committee chairmen named included Laurie Kerr, buttons; Joe Briggs, monthly medals; Gord Pellow, Inter-Club League, and Tony Ritchie, junior development committee.

'Junior Elgin Baylor' Makes Howie Feel Rich

By HAL MALONE

The stock of Victoria's Haida Chiefs reached a new high today. Exactly six-feet four-inches high.

Happy as a millionaire with a new oil well, Chiefs' coach Howie Tooby announced Victoria's senior basketball club has signed and received permission to play Glenn Westfall.

Who's he?

"Westfall," says Tooby, "is a sort of junior Elgin Baylor. Last time I saw him play his waist was even with the hoop when he went for a rebound."

U.S. Navy reservist due to be emancipated in August, Westfall will be with the Chiefs when they meet Vancouver's Ex-Byng band Saturday at Central Junior High.

The game, one of the few for the leagueless Chiefs this season, will be played at 9:15 p.m.

CHINOOKS PLAY, TOO

Victoria Chinooks, needing only a victory to wrap up the Intercity Junior League tiara, collide with Vancouver CYO at 8.

Tooby and the Chiefs became enamoured with Westfall the first time they saw him play. He scored 28 points and had more moves than an Egyptian belly dancer.

Only 23, he has said he will take up permanent residence in Victoria upon his discharge from the service.

The Chiefs had to get clearance from the B.C. Amateur Basketball Association to use Westfall. It came this week. For Tooby, desperately in need of a high-scoring, muscular ace, it was like having two Christmases in one year.

TOUCH AND SIZE

From all scouting reports, Westfall has both the touch and the size to put plasma in the Chiefs' attack.

As an Indiana schoolboy he averaged 14 points, hiked it to 18 in his first year in the service and boosted it again to 28 the following season. He comes on at 217 pounds which means that nothing short of Heaney's Cartage should readily move him.

Chiefs plan to bring Westfall up from Sandpoint naval base in Washington for all their exhibition games and the Island final against Alberni Athletics.

Predicting how that will turn out would test the acumen of any long-range forecaster. Tooby does not profess to fall in that category. Right now he's just happy to have Westfall in the basket. His basket.

Jonathan Takes Feature Match

Don Leo Jonathan grabbed the laurels in the feature bout of Tuesday night's professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena by taking two of three falls from Okiyama.

In other arguments, Wild Bill Dromo bested Ricky Hunter, "The Black Terror" defeated Tom Geohagen and Paddy Barret won from Pancho Lopez.

Fielder Is Flying . . . So Are Totems

(From CP Reports)

Guyle Fielder is scoring goals and Seattle Totems are suddenly looking like contenders in the Western Hockey League.

Fielder, who has collected seven WHL scoring titles mainly on his ability to earn assists on scoring plays, has found the scoring touch in recent games and the Totems have chalked up five straight victories, the last two on the road.

They picked up No. 5 at Baltimore Tuesday night in an interlocking game with the American League club and it was Fielder who got the Totems started on the way to victory.

He fired the opening goal early in the second period after Larry Hale intercepted a pass and slipped Guyle a pass for a 15-foot scoring shot.

Gerry Leonard made it 2-0 on a breakaway late in the period while Seattle was shorthanded and Bill Dineen wrapped up a 3-0 victory with a goal early in the final period.

Jim McLeod sparkled in the Seattle nets, making 26 saves, including 12 in a wide-open first period.

Victory by the Totems, who are now only two points behind the third-place Vancouver Canucks, gave the WHL a record of 19 wins, two ties and 18 losses in games with AHL teams.

At Quebec, Don Blackburn scored two goals to lead the Aces to a 7-3 victory over Buffalo Bisons in an American League game.

Aces were in command all the way as they led 3-0 at the end of the first period and 6-1 at the end of the second.

Other Quebec scorers were Terry Gray, Andre Lacroix, Bill Sutherland, Leon Rochefort and Red Berenson. Buffalo marksmen were Gerry Melnyk, Gerry Ouellette and Jack Stanfield.

Injuries Bruise Canuck Hopes

Like Victoria coach Frank Mario, Vancouver manager Max McNab can count the walking wounded on his club and estimate how the injuries are hurting his club in the Western Hockey League race.

McNab and the Canucks will be at Memorial Arena tonight for their seventh clash of the season with the Maple Leafs and the visitors might have two regulars on the sidelines.

Dave Duke, who had his nose re-arranged Sunday when smashed against the boards by Portland's Chuck Holmes, is a doubtful starter. And Bob Kabel is hobbling on an injured ankle.

Mario can beat that count by one. The Leafs have three aces on the injury brigade — Milan Marcetta, Sandy Hucul and Dick Lamoureux.

Duke may make it to the wars if McNab can obtain a football-type helmet which will not impair Dave's vision.

"They really made a mess of Duke's nose," McNab commented Tuesday. "They had to do a reconstruction job and there's a crack under the cheekbone, too."

Max has also been doing some other counting and the result is enough to make any general manager extremely unhappy.

His boys have played the Leafs six times this season and lost all of the games, including three at Vancouver where the Leafs went without a victory all of last season.

"If we had only won our home games against Victoria," McNab said, "the Leafs would have 45 points and we would have 43. But instead, the Leafs have 51 and we've got 37."

Those 51 points give the Victorians a four-point bulge over the runner-up Portland Buckaroos, who play tonight in San Francisco.

Max and Vancouver coach Bert Olmstead figure it's just about time the Maple Leaf string was ended. They'll try to do something about tonight, starting at 8:15.

Boss Bear Drops Suit —Validity Was Issue

CHICAGO (AP) — Owner-coach George Halas of Chicago Bears Tuesday dropped his breach of contract suit seeking to prevent Bear aide George Allen, 43, from becoming head coach of Los Angeles Rams.

Halas' action came immediately after opening remarks by Judge Cornelius Harrington, who said he found Allen's contract with the National Football League Bears extending through two more years was valid and binding.

The case had been continued from last Wednesday when the Bears sought an injunction restraining Allen from taking the Ram job which he agreed to accept Jan. 10.

Halas, disregarding objections by his own and Allen's attorneys, took the witness stand and said:

"Your Honor, I'm most pleased with your decision upholding the validity of the contract. Your important ruling will uphold the integrity between National Football League clubs and sanctity of contracts.

"Validity was the issue here and will prevent the breakdown of organized football and all sports.

"George Allen was a minor issue here. The validity of the contract was the real issue. Now I want to say, I am dropping the suit."

FORMER MAYOR'S PROMISE . . . . . . MAY BE IGNORED

Darkness Drops Over Babe Ruth World Series

The 1967 Babe Ruth World Series, considered a fait accompli for Victoria, was temporarily in the dark today because city officials say they can't turn the lights on in time at Royal Athletic Park.

Darkness developed when city officials pared $100,000 from the $516,000 park rebuilding budget. The slicing would permit installation of wiring but not power standards.

This means Royal Athletic would be useable only for day games. The Ruth Series, spread over a week, demands night games.

But parks commissioner Herbert Warren said Thursday, "unless they hold the tournament in the daytime, they'll have to scrap it."

Warren's bold position may be, at most, tenuous.

An aroused Wilf Sadler, Island director for Babe Ruth and the man behind Victoria's application for the series, said today, "I have a letter from city council, dated Oct. 14, 1965, assuring that adequate facilities would be available."

Mad enough to thwack somebody on the head with a Louisville Slugger, Sadler continued: "Rebuilding the park without adequate lighting is like building an arena and not putting ice in."

"We would never have proceeded with our application to Babe Ruth International if we had the slightest doubt the park wouldn't be ready.

"When two directors of Babe Ruth International visited Victoria, (former) Mayor Wilson assured them and me that everything would be in order.

"The publicity Victoria would gain from hosting the World Series is fantastic. If we began publicizing the series promotional material today we would never go through it all by the time the first game was played — and it's all stamped 'Victoria'."

Sadler fears, naturally, that Warren's latest proclamation will not be received with overwhelming joy by two Babe Ruth International officers scheduled to visit Victoria Thursday.

Their visit was to be the last before deciding irrevocably on the '67 tournament site. Fairbanks, Alaska, wants it, but Sadler's prodigious groundwork had greatly impressed Babe Ruth brass. Final confirmation of Victoria was expected to be a formality.

Meanwhile, Senior Amateur Baseball League officers, though not terribly delighted over going through the 1966 season in park under reconstruction, said they could play "under almost any conditions." The league plays early evening games which do not require lights.

Victoria Sports Council plans to meet with city officials next week to see if the league can operate during reconstruction of the park, scheduled to begin in April.

Sadler and Babe Ruth officials indicated today they won't wait until next week. They would like the right people to see the light now.

HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

When I was playing for the Kinsmen Red Wing peewee team in Saskatoon, Sask., when I was 10 years old, the players took the names of our National Hockey League counterparts with the Detroit Red Wings. There never was any question about whose name I took. I was "Syd Howe."

Now, 27 years later, I'm finally going to actually play on the same team with Syd Howe of Ottawa. I'm joining the Red Wing Alumni team, along with our manager, Sid Abel, for the game against the Montreal Old-Timers at the Montreal Forum this Friday night.

* * *

A week later, the same teams will play a return game in Detroit. Our old Red Wing "production line" of Abel, Ted Lindsay and myself is going to be reunited for this Old-Timers' game for the third straight year.

I never saw Syd Howe play, nor are we any relation. But I had his picture among the collection of 180 hockey players I assembled as a youngster.

Sid Abel, who played with him, says Syd was the "perfect hockey player." He played centre, left wing and defence, wherever he was needed, in his 16 seasons in the NHL, 1930-1946. He was with the Ottawa Senators three years, Philadelphia and St. Louis and his last 11 with Detroit, besides a year in the International League with Syracuse.

* * *

When he retired in 1946, he was the NHL's all-time point-scoring leader, Detroit's all-time leader. He had eclipsed the records of Nels Stewart, incuding scoring six goals in one game, still the record for hockey's modern era.

In turn, Montreal's Maurice (Rocket) Richard rewrote the scoring records. I outlasted the Rocket to top some of his marks. The Rocket is going to be reunited with members of Montreal's "punch line," Toe Blake and Elmer Lach, in the Old-Timers' games. So I'm looking forward to playing against them again and with Syd Howe for the first time.

Pollock Supports Roughness Denial By Beaver Squad

By The Canadian Press

Sherbrooke Beavers have drawn support in their denial that Canada's ambassador to Russia threatened to call off two of their games in Russia last week because of rough play.

Lloyd Pollock of Windsor, Ont., vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association who was in charge of the Beavers' tour of Europe, arrived back in Canada Tuesday with the team.

He said reports that Ambassador Robert Ford had rebuked the team for alleged misconduct and rough play during a game last Thursday in Kalinin 120 miles north of Moscow, came as a complete shock.

Players and officials of the Beavers, 1965 Allan Cup champions and winners of the Ahearne Cup series in Sweden last month, also denied they had been hauled up on the diplomatic carpet by Ford.

The team arrived home in Sherbrooke Tuesday night.

A report from Moscow Monday said that Ford had made a special appeal to the team last Friday to refrain from rough play. The appeal followed the game in Kalinin which the Beavers lost 15-4 to a Soviet Army team.

'NICE TO US'

The Beavers returned to Moscow for Friday and Sunday games against two other Russian teams and lost 8-1 and 6-5.

Pollock said that he and other officials travelling with the Beavers were invited to Ford's office last Friday afternoon.

"He was nice to us and the only comment he made about the previous night's game was that the Russian press had been very hard on us and it wasn't nice for diplomatic relations. He hoped the next two games would be good ones."

Pollock admitted the Beavers were edgy in the Kalinin game, but said that the refereeing was awful and that the Russian Army team included "at least six or seven players of their national team."

Raymond Bergeron, president of the Beavers, said Tuesday that Ford never mentioned rough play during the Friday visit.

Georges Roy, playing-coach and a star defenceman of the Beavers, said his club played rough hockey in Kalinin but that the Soviet team "played just as rough and the referees didn't know hockey."

Both were at the Friday meeting along with Pollock, Henri Crochetiere, president of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association and Len O'Donnell, president of the Quebec Senior League.

WEREN'T TOLD

"We were never told at any time to clean up our play or have the tour curtailed," Crochetiere said. "We discussed the game but the ambassador never asked what had happened at Kalinin the night before."

Roy, who said the Beavers were given a cooler reception in Russia than elsewhere in Europe, accused the Russians of starting the rough play in Kalinin. He said a Soviet player elbowed Sherbrooke goaltender Serge Aubrey when he went down to make a stop in the first minute of the game.

Roy added that each game in their 27-day tour was followed by a banquet or get-together, but "in Russia it was just hello and then goodbye after each game."

The external affairs department in Ottawa said Tuesday that Ford had not been sent specific instructions on the matter.

Following Sherbrooke's 6-5 loss to Moscow Spartak Sunday, the mass circulation newspaper Soviet Sport said the Canadians behavior "called forth deep and just indignation of the audience."

The game was relatively tame by Canadian standards but the Beavers were jeered by a crowd of 10,000 at the Moscow Sports Palace for what the customers considered unsportsmanlike conduct.

THIRTEENTH week of annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition was lucky one for plywood millworker Harold Melville. He captured men's tenpin honors by rapping the pins for 227-201-194—662 series in Sunday Commercial League at Mayfair Lanes. Victory makes Melville eligible for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs in May.

WILSON FIRES BACK

CAHA Breaks It's Own Rules Says Pat Boss

By ERNIE FEDORUK

The manager of Regina Pats today charged the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is "flaunting its own regulations" by permitting Francis Huck and Maurice Mott to play with the national team.

Del Wilson, in Victoria on a visit, was replying, in part, to charges by Nationals' coach Jackie McLeod that Saskatchewan Junior League teams were "pestering" and "bothering" his players.

"His players?" said Wilson, "That's quite funny. Huck and Mott are both signed on CAHA cards, Huck with Regina and Mott with Weyburn.

"These two boys, still eligible for another year of junior, have never been released by their teams. Therefore, technically, they're playing for two teams . . . contrary to CAHA regulations.

"McLeod is screaming like an eagle, but he doesn't tell the public the whole truth about the situation. This makes us (the SJHL) look like a bunch of farmers . . .

"Why don't you ask McLeod how he got Mott out of Weyburn. Then go ask Jack Shupe (coach of Weyburn) for his side of the story."

McLeod was quoted in a story out of Winnipeg that "NHL scouts" are continually "pestering" players with the national team without first approaching either himself or advisor Father David Bauer.

"Neither Bauer nor McLeod ever came to see (Regina coach) Bob Turner or myself before they 'drafted' Huck from the Pats. They went directly to Huck."

McLeod Straightens Out His Story

(McLeod later declared he was misquoted by The Canadian Press and that SJHL teams, not NHL scouts, were bothering his players.)

Wilson, who is also director of scouting for Montreal Canadiens, declared: "I'm glad for his sake that McLeod straightened that out. NHL scouts would be wasting their time talking to either Huck or Mott because their professional rights are already known.

"McLeod should have come right out and said it was Shupe and myself who talked to the two players in question. I went to Francis, at the request of the Regina executive, to see if he would play five games for us and thus qualify for the SJHL playoffs.

"After all, Huck still belongs to us, regardless of what McLeod and Bauer may think.

"Regina has an agreement with Gordon Juckes (CAHA secretary-manager), that if it were possible, Huck would play for the Pats. We're not sore losers. If Huck wants to play for the Nationals in the world tournament, he's welcome to go.

"But the team will be back in Canada (from world play) in time for playoffs, and that's where our interest lies. Is it asking too much for a guy to play a couple of games for the team that developed him?

Without Huck, Gate Receipts Down

"The Pats are down $6,000 in gate receipts up to this point of the season.

"I haven't seen McLeod, Bauer or the CAHA rushing in to say they'll make good. Don't forget, it was Huck who filled the rinks last year. Financially, it was the best season we ever had.

"McLeod also says we don't care a hoot about players' educations. Ask McLeod who paid for Huck's tutition and books for his term in Campion College. Also ask McLeod who paid for a special tutor the year before in order to help Huck get into college.

"Regina did.

"McLeod calls the situation ridiculous. The only ridiculous thing is the national team.

"There's a young fellow, just out of junior, in Drummondville. His name is Andre Lageux, and he's a better right winger than anyone McLeod has. Why wasn't he invited to try out for the team?"

PAUL POCE TRACK COACH

Four New Officials For Canadian Team

TORONTO (CP)—Four new officials have been selected to coach and manage Canada's track and field team at the British Commonwealth Games in Jamaica this August.

Neil Farrell of Hamilton, honorary secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, announced Tuesday that Paul Poce of Toronto was selected as track coach, Ian Hume of Montreal as field coach, Dick Harding of Montreal as track manager and Mrs. Jo Kennedy of Winnipeg as assistant manager.

The track and field team will be picked after the combined Canadian championships and British Empire Games in Edmonton this July.

PERCIVAL PASSED UP

Poce, 41, coach of the Toronto Olympic Club, who coached Canadian track stars Abigail Hoffman and Dave Ellis, said he intends to start preliminary work immediately by contacting all Canadian track prospects.

Hume is the coach of Joan Hendry of Montreal, a pentathlon specialist who finished fourth in the Canadian championships in 1964 and did not compete in the competition last year.

It came as a surprise in some quarters that Hume was selected as field coach instead of Lloyd Percival of Toronto, a long-time figure in Canadian track and field.

Among track and field officials who were surprised Percival was not named coach was Kent Twigg of Toronto, former chairman of track and field for the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and one of the sport's most knowledgeable men.

"I'm not a Percival booster," Twigg said Tuesday, "but I thought he might be selected this time. Lloyd has a lot to contribute and I think it's about time we took advantage of his contribution."

Skiing Expands From Evolution To Revolution

BAD GASTIEN, Austria (AP)—Take a close look at the races of the 1966 Alpine Skiing Association, because competition may never be the same again.

This longest season in skiing history started in December and will end next August with the 1966 world championships at Portillo, Chile.

What up to now has been the evolution of Alpine skiing could suddenly turn into a revolution with the slalom and giant slalom changed drastically and the downhill eliminated.

The first steps were taken by the powerful council of the International Skiing Federation (FIS) at Mamaia, Romania, last year because officials felt changes in seeding procedures for the slalom and giant slalom were necessary with the increased numbers of first rate skiers, especially among Canadian and United States competitors.

The situation has been especially bad in the giant slalom with its long trails that cannot be as well prepared as those in the slalom. Some times it takes only six or seven skiers to pass over giant slalom trails to make them virtually unbeatable for those who follow.

Seedings traditionally have been made on the basis of placings in the past season and in early events of the present one, but in modern slalom competition victory can be gained by a margin of only hundredths of seconds.

A couple of losses that close and you can find yourself dropped into a secondary grouping with virtually no chance of getting back into the primary group where only the top 15 or so entrants have any real chance of winning.

DOWNHILL WORRIES

It is the dangerous and deadly downhill event that really has the officials worried, however, even with new rules that require courses to be levelled and cleared of all obstructions and establishment of an FIS subcommittee charged with approving all international courses prior to a race and with the power to sanction offending organizers.

Clearing and levelling the courses has only made them faster and there is a strong body of opinion forming that wants the whole event done away with.

Changes have already started with the experimental elimination of one of the "gate" poles in the slalom—received with mixed reaction—and suggestions that the giant slalom be run in either two heats, with the order of start reversed in each, or in heats, semifinals and finals just like a track meet.

Bobsledders Honored

ROME (AP) — The Italian postal ministry will issue a two-stamp series to mark the world bobsledding championships in Cortina d'Ampezzo Jan. 29-Feb. 6. The stamps will have face values of 40 lire (6.4 cents) and 90 lire (14.4 cents). They will show a bobsled track.

Arthur Mayse

For as long as I can remember, various elected and self-appointed spokesmen have been urging us to be good Canadians.

This practically all of us try earnestly to accomplish. We have struggled to think nationally instead of sectionally. We have asked ourselves, even on quite minor questions, "Will this be good for Canada?"

It hasn't been easy, especially in the periods when Quebec was fussing and fuming her loudest, and those damnation back-Easters were stubbornly refusing to recognize the existence of anyone west of Lakehead except at income tax time.

In spite of these irritations, and ignoring minor backslidings, we have worked hard at the project, and would be in a fair way to succeeding if it weren't for one major obstacle.

This is the doubtful example provided for us by the very people who should be showing us how to become bona fide, certified, corrosion-proof, rust-resistant, good Canadians.

★

Mind, I'm not charging that Mr. Pearson, Mr. Diefenbaker and those who sit with them in our Parliament are bad Canadians.

What I suggest is that they have let our party system of politics get badly out of hand. Canadianism as I once understood it seems to be wandering lost in the fog generated by the clash of rampant Liberalism against militant Conservatism.

This was particularly evident during the last federal session.

Think back, if you will. What and how much was accomplished for Canada during those weeks and months during which the ship of state pitched, yawed and, rolled in the tide-rips of party controversy?

Some legislation, to be sure. But not nearly enough; and the result, as indicated by Tuesday's speech from the throne, is a work pileup that Parliament will be tripping over and picking its way around for a long time to come.

I'm all for reasoned and sensible opposition, and our parliamentary system couldn't function without it. However, when it becomes a mere frivolous attempt to flimflam the taxpayer into believing that your Conservative — or Liberal — is the Almighty's only honest man, reason goes out the window.

★

As a Canadian who is fed up with putting his shoulder to the national wheel, ony to find some joker heaving from the opposite direction, I think that for the good of our mutual country, it's high time we scaled these runaway party animosities and loyalties down to manageable size.

A hard-fought political campaign is a very fine thing, but must it continue as guerrilla warfare through an entire session as it did last year?

Well, another session is now upon us, its opening pomp and circumstance relegated to yesterday, the work waiting to be done.

The list of tasks is long and complex, and the hopes, fortunes and futures of Canadians from one coast to the other ride on the way this newly-elected Parliament handles its duties.

Its members can throw a numbing block into education, or legislate measures which will help underwrite the expanded universities and vocational schools we so badly need.

They can work wisely for the farmer both east and west, or hang him up with his needs unresolved.

They can do much toward regaining the respect of our provinces for the central authority, and they can help check the trend toward regional blocs and principalities which stands as our gravest internal threat.

But none of these needs is likely to be met as it should be, if party warfare continues to hamper and even hamstring Parliament at work.

Victorians Protest Hiring of U.S. Firm

By JIM HUME

Times' City Hall Reporter

With its decision to hire an American company less than 24 hours old, the Greater Victoria Confederation-Centennial Committee is already feeling the lash of public criticism.

The committee decided on Tuesday to hire the John B. Rogers Producing Company of Ohio to stage the main events of 1967 and to act as consultant-co-ordinator of the events of 1966. (See Page 6.)

Committee members did not expect the decision to be popular. And they were correct.

Local entertainer Fred Usher this morning criticized the lack of appreciation for local talent.

"The Rogers company did a nice job in 1962," Mr. Usher said. "They put on a good pageant. But the underestimating of local talent in this city is shocking.

PEOPLE ASTOUNDED

"Under Peter Mannering the Lights Up revue at McPherson Playhouse astounded people. They just didn't know we had that kind of talent in the city.

"As to the 1967 pageant and other activities, we could have done it locally and successfully."

Mrs. Nel Horth, Deep Cove, past president of the Peninsula Players, echoed Mr. Usher's thinking.

"With all the local talent available their is no earthly reason why we couldn't handle the matter ourselves," she said.

"After all it is our centennial and there was no need at all to go out of the city to find someone to organize it for us.

LOCAL TALENT

"What it amounts to is that an outside organization has been called in to run the show. Undoubtedly they will use local talent in their productions after they have picked the brains of local organizations which could have put on the entire thing in the first place."

L. J. Wallace, provincial chairman of Confederation-Centennial projects, said he had no comment on the committee's decision.

"We have 360 committees in the province, each one, with complete autonomy. We do not comment either way on their decisions," he said.

Defeated bidder for the 1966 contract George A. Hamilton who claims to be the only Canadian in the pageant and big show organizational business, had a different criticism.

GRAVE MISTAKE

"The Rogers company is good," he said. "Very good in pageants. But your committee has made a grave mistake in making 1967 the big year instead of 1966.

"In 1967 British Columbia will be competing with all of Canada for the tourist dollar. In 1966 it has the stage to itself.

Vancouver is planning a huge pageant in 1967. If it goes ahead Victoria and the Rogers Company are going to find it a hard act to follow."

Peter Mannering took the rejection of the Bastion Theatre Studio philosophically but with disappointment.

"It is an embarrassment to me that they don't believe productions like this can be done by Canadians," he said.

"It would appear that Canadian talent will never be permitted to initiate productions.

STRATFORD TOO

"Victoria isn't alone in this. At Stratford, Ontario, the entire thing was set up, sets designed, plays directed by English people.

"The talent is here in Canada. It could have been done, if not by us then by other Canadians.

"This is one time, a Canadian centennial project, when it should be done by Canadians."

Mr. Mannering said the Bastion group would be more than willing to stage its indoor production during 1967 as part of the over-all celebration program.

"We would have no hesitation in staging the proposed indoor production — as long as the people realize that performers have to be paid," he said.

WALTER DODSWORTH
. . . he wasn't there

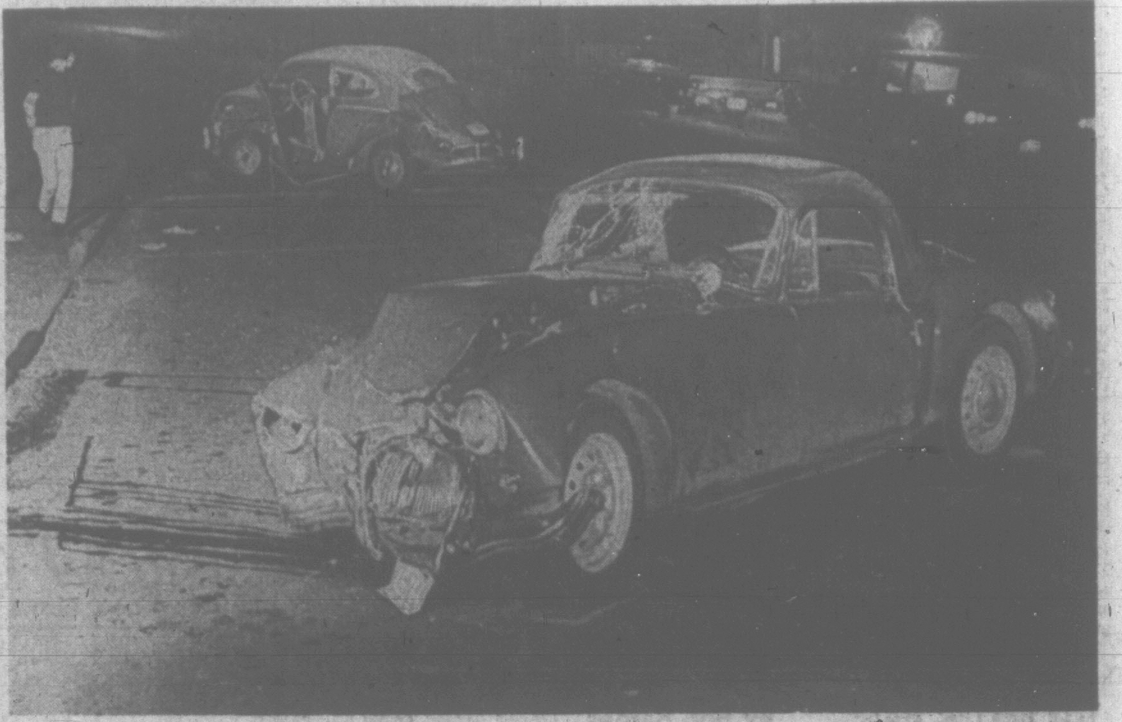
DECISION MAY CHANGE

Greater Victoria Centennial Society president Walter Dodsworth said today the decision to hire professional organizers for local celebrations is not final.

"I was not at the meeting (Tuesday) but I know there is considerable feeling about this among the people of Greater Victoria.

"As president of the society I would have to put my name to a contract to seal the bargain, and I'm not signing anything without the backing of the intermunicipal committee."

He said intermunicipal representatives will discuss the matter early in February.



FATAL ACCIDENT occurred shortly after midnight at this intersection of Lampson and Craigflower. Man driving small car in rear was killed when he was thrown out of car after collision with sports roadster at front, Esquimalt police said. (Jim Ryan Photo.)

Midnight Collision Kills Shift Worker

A 54-year-old Saanich man was killed just after midnight as he drove home from work.

Bror Nels Granewall, owner of Berryland Farm on Patricia Bay Highway, was killed in a two-car collision at the intersection of Lampson and Craigflower.

He was on his way home to 5630 Alderley Road after working the 4-to-12 shift as a rigger at Yarrows Shipyard.

Driver of the other vehicle involved was William G. Owen, 28, of 336 Newport, an unemployed logger.

The accident occurred about five minutes after midnight. Mr. Granewall was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital by Esquimalt police and was pronounced dead at 12:25 .m. today.

AT INTERSECTION

Esquimalt police said the accident occurred when Mr. Granewall's car, a light imported model, pulled out of Lampson on to Craigflower.

The car driven by Mr. Owen was proceeding east on Craigflower and the collision between the two vehicles took place in the middle of the intersection.

The Granewall vehicle was pushed 37 feet east on Craigflower and came to rest at the side of the road. Mr. Granewall was thrown out and his body was found on the sidewalk.

The Granewall car was destroyed in the collision and police said Owen's car is probably a total write-off. Traffic was light at the time of the collision.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has ordered a post mortem examination. Date for an inquest will be set later.

FROM SWEDEN

Mr. Granewall came to Canada from Sweden 15 years ago. He operated Berryland Farm, a place familiar to many Victoria people who have driven out to the farm's roadside stall in past years to buy fruit and vegetables.

The dead man is survived by his wife and five children. He worked during winter months in recent years at Yarrows.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later after the inquest date has been set.

CITY MAN DIES IN FALL

A 47-year-old Victoria man was killed in an industrial accident Tuesday at a pulp and paper mill at Duncan Bay, two miles north of Campbell River.

Frank Harold Phipps, 3895 Cedar Hill Road, died of multiple head injuries about one and a half hours after he fell 18 feet to a concrete floor at the site of an addition to the Elk Falls Ltd. mill. The company is a Crown Zellerbach subsidiary.

A company spokesman said Mr. Phipps had only been on the job seven days.

"He apparently tripped, slipped or fell through a guard rail down the shaft. None of the other 300 workmen actually saw him fall."

Mr. Phipps was an employee of Mathias and Nicol Installations Ltd., a Vancouver company which has been doing contract work at the pulp mill site for just over a year.

He is survived by the widow and one son.

AFTER YEAR-LONG NEGOTIATIONS

Mill Workers Get Pay Hike

More than 5,000 skilled workers in the coast lumber industry will receive wage increases following rate revision agreements in Vancouver today.

The figures will apply to a number of Victoria mill workers, but an exact figure was not available this morning.

Negotiations have continued for the past year between Forest Industrial Relations, representing 135 companies, and the International Woodworkers of America, with a membership of 25,000 on the coast.

Delays in reaching agreement caused unrest in various parts of the coast. Recently, boom men in Vancouver walked out in protest.

Both FIR and IWA will recommend acceptance to their member companies and union locals.

Fifteen categories in sawmills, including boom men and first aid attendants, plus six categories in logging are involved in the latest increases. Their wages now range from $2.54 to $3.87 an hour.

Earlier, planermen and a number of logging categories were raised.

The latest rate revisions provide increases for skilled categories ranging from 10 cents to 25 cents an hour effective at the beginning of the year.

Mill boom men will gain a flat 10 cents and boat operators 12 cents an hour. A joint study will now be made to revise the job of boom men "in accordance with their job and responsibilities," said the IWA.

Agreement was also reached today on the millwright apprenticeship training program. Upon successful completion of his training, a journeyman millwright will receive a certificate and an additional 21 cents an hour.

Training for the new program will combine on-job tuition plus institutional study.

National Society Sets Meeting Here

The Canadian Cancer Society will hold its annual meeting in Victoria June 23 to 25.

Attending will be Dr. Reynaud Lemieux of Quebec City, president of the society; Dr. O. H. Warwick of London, Ont., president of the National Cancer Institute, and Dr. Robert Taylor, of Toronto, executive vice-president of both the institute and the society.

Industry Body Urged To 'Reduce Frictions'

The building trade unions in British Columbia today called on the provincial government for the establishment of a human relations committee in the industry.

The recommendation for such a committee, established under the labor department and representing unions and employers, was made in a brief by the B.C. Building and Construction Trades Council.

The council represents all building trades councils in the province, whose affiliated unions represent about 40,000 men.

The brief was presented to Labor Minister Leslie Peterson by a delegation of 12 headed by Al Medley of Vancouver, president of the provincial council.

The standing committee would:

- Consider current problems in the industry generally;
- Anticipate future needs of industry and trades;
- Exchange views on social and economic trends;
- Establish meaningful contact outside collective bargaining;
- Exchange and develop ideas related to manpower, skills and future requirements.

GREATER SCOPE

The committee would be greater in scope than the automation committee set up after the oil industry dispute last fall.

The B.C. Building and Construction Trades Council said a "fuller understanding" may well be achieved of all facets of industrial and trade union problems through such a committee.

Sub-committees could be formed of persons representing related kinds of industry—construction, transportation, logging, manufacturing and so on.

"In the broadest terms such committees could inquire into areas of friction with the view to recommending ameliorative steps," said the brief.

The brief added that the time has come to advance the interests of the industry and union members "by other than the piecemeal, seesaw means heretofore a feature of the labor-management relationship."

REPLY

Much of the brief was taken up with a reply to one presented to the government last month by the Vancouver Construction Association.

The brief said 95 per cent of all mystery pickets are concentrated "on non-union projects with sub-standard working conditions and contractors, paying sub-standard wages. These mystery pickets are for organizational purposes."

The unions also attacked the construction association for saying B.C. is plagued with costly strikes.

SIX DISPUTES

In 1964, the construction industry lost "a grand total" of 5,462 days in six disputes, or three per cent of the total days lost through strikes.

The total time lost throughout the province due to all strikes in 1964 was 181,784 working days, or 0.147 per cent of the total time worked.

But in the preceding year, just over 1 million working days were lost because of compensable accidents. In 1964 the figure was 1.1 million days.

Court Hearing

Preliminary hearing has been set for Feb. 7 for Larry Alan Preston, charged in connection with a break-in at Standard Furniture last fall.

Preston elected trial by judge and jury in a hearing in central court Tuesday afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please inform me as to how Canada got its name and by whom it was named? A.B.M.

A. The term derived from the Huron-Iroquois work "kanata" meaning village or community.

First white man to use it was Jacques Cartier in a narrative written in 1534.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

BUT NO TRACE REPORTED

Search Stepped Up for Youths

Time was running out today for three young Victoria hunters missing since Saturday.

A sea and air hunt was intensified at dawn today as hope faded for the three hunting chums.

They were last seen midnight Saturday when they cast off from Oak Bay Marina in a 12-foot open boat.

Their destination was Chatham Island, two miles offshore. They were to have hunted for brant and returned Sunday night.

But nothing has been seen or heard of them since.

Missing are Dennis Powell, 19, of 1240 Newport; Ronald Hynds, 18, 2428 Dalhousie, and Wade Squire, 17, of 2741 Dewdney.

Said an RCMP marine officer: "The time element is against them. Even if they made it to an island it would be pretty grim."

Around 10 a.m., a Dakota spotter aircraft from RCAF Comox, radioed a report of wreckage spotted north of Discovery Passage.

NO CONNECTION

The pleasure craft Sea Deuce from Oak Bay Marina was sent to investigate, only to report that the wreckage was a piece of plywood.

It had no connection with the missing boat.

Also spotting over the area was the department of transport helicopter from Pat Bay.

Later in the morning, civil defence chartered three private aircraft from Pat Bay and sent them up.

Three local flyers, Joe Howroyd, Charles Watts and Roy Parrett, manned the planes.

Other private planes, along with a navy tracker aircraft from Pat Bay, were already combing an extensive area from south of San Juan Island to the northern Gulf Islands.

An armada of vessels, large and small, plied between the myriad of tiny islands, any one of which the boys could have been washed up on.

RCMP are working on the theory that the boys were washed north.

If this theory is right, the boys would end up in the Discovery Passage area.

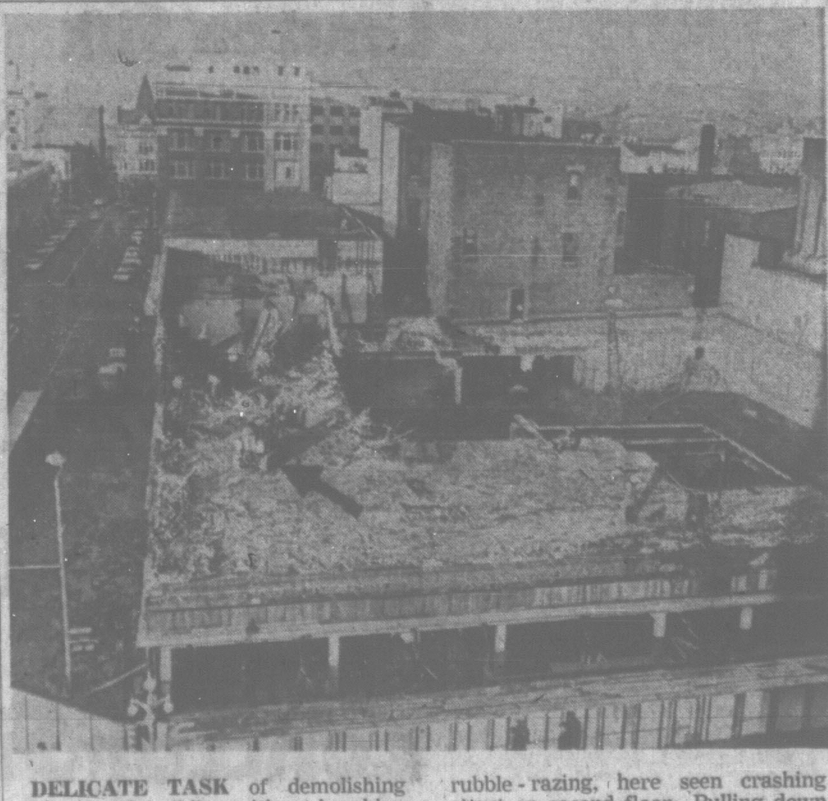
The police patrol boats Victoria and Sidney used their skiffs to search close inshore.

Meanwhile, the coast guard vessels Racer and Ready continued a search of the area.

MORE BOATS

They were aided by another government vessel, The Snipe, and several private pleasure craft.

If nothing turns up today, the search will go on Thursday.



DELICATE TASK of demolishing Woolworth building without breaking up neighboring businesses is undertaken by Chew Excavating for G. H. Wheaton. Not-so-gentle tractor—like bulldozer in china shop—does interior rubble-razing, here seen crashing about on second floor. Pulling down old brick walls and blasting deeper basement will take about two months because of extra caution required. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

SHOPPING GUIDE

Bedroom Organizers Of Sturdy Plastic

By Penny Saver

Every girl loves a nice, dainty-looking bedroom. Yet, a girl's bedroom is sometimes the hardest room in the house to keep that way. The dresser, in particular, seems to be strewn with lipstick tubes by the dozen, hair spray dispensers, hand lotions, perfumes, and heaven knows what else. One day, the room can look tidy and neat, but when daughter comes home again, pressed for time, the room regains its haphazard state. Bathrooms, too, seems to be collectors for bottles and dispensers of every variety.

In one store, I found items that will help remedy this situation. A rectangular, heavy-plastic box, with six holes of one-half inch diameter in the lid, is a lipstick holder. It is available in a soft, powder blue color, with plastic flowers and gold sparkles decorating the surface. The box itself is very attractive, and will serve to keep all the tubes in one place, instead of all over the dresser. This item sells for $2.98.

Safety pins and bobby pins collect everywhere. Pin trays, made of the same plastic as the lipstick holders, sell for $2.98. They're highlighted with the same design.

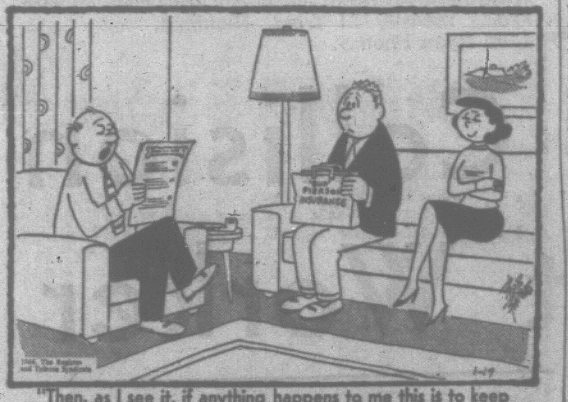
Another piece to add to this set is a hand lotion dispenser. Complete with the plunger, this sells for the [illegible] price.

Lamps are a boon to any room in the house. One unique little lamp in this store is priced at $5.49.

The base of the lamp is a wooden shoe. The shoe is in full sail, depicting, of course, the old legend of the Flying Dutchman. The legendry, spectral ship is believed to be a bad omen when seen by sailors, so the story goes, but the only omen that it can bring to your home is complimentary comments by all your guests.

Interested? Remember, Penny's number is 382-3131. She'll tell you where to shop.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"Then, as I see it, if anything happens to me this is to keep her second husband from having to work."

TODAY'S RECIPE

MEAT BALLS IN GINGER SAUCE

One pound minced beef, ¼ cup chopped onion, ¾ cup soft, stale bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 1 egg, beaten; ¼ cup apple juice, 1 can (10-ounce) consomme, ⅓ cup water, 1 teaspoon brown sugar, ¼ cup raisins, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, ½ cup ginger cookie crumbs.

Mix beef, onion, bread crumbs and seasonings. Add egg and apple juice. Mix lightly, then shape into 30 meat balls, about 1-inch in diameter.

Combine consomme and water in frying pan. Bring to a boil and stir in remaining ingredients to make sauce. Add meat balls and simmer, uncovered over low heat for 10 to 15 minutes.

Turn meat balls, baste with sauce and continue simmering 10 to 15 minutes longer, basting occasionally. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Serve with spaghetti or noodles.

POLAR BEAR WAS ANYTHING BUT BARE

WHIPSNADE, England (CP)—Maya, a female polar bear at this famous parkland zoo, has been getting special treatment for three months because keepers thought she was expecting cubs. Now a bear expert has told them all female polar bears put on so much fat each winter it is almost impossible to tell whether they are pregnant or not.

This exercise is excellent for the waist and the upper back hips (those little pads of fat in the back just below the waistline). Sit on the floor with your knees straight and your feet separated. Trunk should be erect. Raise your arms sideward, shoulder height. Twist so that you can touch the fingers of your right hand to your left toe. Raise your trunk and lift your ribcage. This time touch the fingers of your left hand to your right toe. Raise trunk and continue, alternating. It is important to keep your knees stiff throughout the exercise. If you can't touch your toes, reach as far toward them as you can.

WHY GROW OLD?

Don't Forget Your Hair During Reconditioning Period

This is the eighth article in which I bring you my Eight-Week Beauty Improvement Plan. Those of you who are working toward a loss of 15 to 20 pounds in eight weeks are now well-launched on that program. Yesterday I urged you to give your complexion, as well as your figure, special attention to see how much you can improve it in eight weeks' time.

Lowman

Today let's think of your hair. I don't have to sell you on the idea that your hair can make all the difference in the world in the way you look. Every woman knows this. It acts as a frame for your face and your hairdo can minimize defects and glamorize lovely features or do just the opposite.

The hair, like the complexion, will benefit by my Beauty Improvement Plan but it too would profit by some special care. The condition of the hair is important to good looks and to successful permanents and hair styling.

If your hair and scalp are very dry, you should give yourself hot oil shampoos, or use one of the splendid conditioners on the market. There are many good ones. If you wish to try hot oil treatments, do it this way. Part the hair all over the head progressively and rub warm olive oil along the parts. When you have covered the entire scalp wrap a damp hot bath towel around your head. Leave it on until it begins to cool and then heat the towel again and repeat several times.

Daily massage is equally important to the oily and the dry scalp because it tends to normalize the action of the little oil glands in the scalp. Why not treat your head to a daily or nightly massage for eight weeks? When you massage your scalp do it in the following manner.

Spread the fingers out on the scalp. Keep the fingers in place as you rotate the hands. Change the position of the hands until you have covered the entire scalp. Press down with the fingers and make the scalp really move. This stirs up circulation and is beautifying to the hair. Add regular complexion and hair care to your regime of calorie counting and exercise for eight weeks! You will be surprised by the change in your appearance.

Supply, Staff, Stockpile Key to Service's Success

TORONTO (CP)—For a women's organization planning to open a thrift shop as a money-raising venture, almost any sort of premises will do—from a room to a store.

More important is a healthy stockpile of merchandise, assurance of a continuing supply, and a staff that can be counted on.

Mrs. John Goldie, chairman of the Toronto Junior League's 40-year-old thrift shop, suggests starting to collect merchandise at least a year in advance of opening.

"Then you need a lot of willing bodies, a place for your shop and advertising at the start. The best place is probably a downtown area where the things you sell are needed. Even though the shop makes a profit, it is a service."

The only display equipment required is a few shelves and racks. Mrs. Goldie recommends selling from bins. For example, a bin with children's underwear priced at 25 cents an item will be quickly sold out.

DEAR ABBY . . .

To Quote Further!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have been married seven months and our only quarrels have been over my husband's refusal to take my part against his parents when they are in the wrong. We live in a one-room apartment with a pull-down bed. The church we attend is on the corner of our block. My husband's parents attend the early morning mass there every Sunday. We attend a later mass, but his parents have started coming to our apartment right after early morning mass. I work six days a week and Sunday morning is the only morning I can sleep a little bit later, but my in-laws calling on us before 7:30 a.m., it is impossible. Also I look terrible when I first get up and I'm embarrassed to receive guests that way.

Last Sunday my in-laws woke me up again. I ran into the bathroom and locked the door. My mother-in-law demanded that I come right out and apologize for my "childish" behavior. My husband didn't take my part against his mother and I think he should have. Another time his father opened some mail, addressed to me, and my husband didn't say a word. When I complain about his folks he says, "Remember Exodus XX, 12, the Fifth Commandment: Honor thy father and thy mother." Thanking you in advance for any advice you can give me, I am,

Very truly yours,
IN-LAW TROUBLE.

DEAR TROUBLE: Your inlaws are rude and inconsiderate and your husband should set them straight. And since your husband quotes Scriptures, ask him to read Genesis II, 24: "And therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife."

DEAR ABBY I would like your opinion of the business executive (or professional man) who has pictures of his wife and family prominently displayed on his desk. No one else is interested, and if he has forgotten what his family looks like, he should take a better look at them when he gets home. I never know what to say when I am confronted with a "gallery" of pictures. I suppose one is expected to say something complimentary, but I find myself fighting the urge to speak the truth.

EXECUTIVE (RETIRED)

DEAR EXECUTIVE: The reasons for "family galleries" on office desks are many and varied. Some are there because the man himself likes to look at them. Others are there because the man's wife has put them there. Some are there because the man is proud of his family and wants to crow a little. And some are there for "protection." (I'm told that occasionally a woman needs to be reminded that her doctor, dentist or lawyer is a family man.)

Feel at Loss in Small Kitchen . . .

. . . Restrict Efforts to Barbecues

THESE MALE CHEFS ADMIT WIVES' SUPERIORITY AS HOME COOKS

CALGARY (CP)—Chefs welcome meals prepared by their wives.

And frequently they claim she is the best cook in the family.

Mike Southam, president of the Calgary Academy of Chefs, says his home kitchen baffles him.

"I'm at a complete loss when trying to prepare a meal in our kitchen. I just can't cope with the small utensils or ingredients."

A specialist in seafood dishes, Mr. Southam says the only cooking he does at home is outdoor barbecuing, "Anything else I steer clear of."

Mr. Southam not only appreciates having meals prepared for him by his wife, he says without hesitation that Mrs. Southam is the best cook domestically.

With more than 30 years' experience in professional cooking, Einar Nielsen, instructor at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, says his wife knows as much about cooking as he does.

"After 35 years of marriage, a little of my experience has rubbed off on her," he laughs. Mrs. Nielsen does most of the cooking in their household.

Wallace Dalquist, assistant steward at the Calgary provincial jail, credits his wife with his culinary career.

"If she hadn't let me use her kitchen a great deal I wouldn't be a chef today," he says.

"Now my wife says I just get in the way when I try to help her—but I do help out with baking breads and rolls."

Paul Mastalir, food service director at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, doesn't hesitate when asked who is the best cook in the house.

"My wife, of course."

Crash Kills Nurse's Aide

DUNCAN—A 59-year-old Duncan woman was killed in a head-on crash on Government Street just before midnight Tuesday.

Dead is Mrs. Dorothy Eileen Johansen of Menzies Road.

RCMP said today she was apparently driving north on Government Street and was on the brow of the hill near Centennial Heights subdivision when her car collided with a CPR tractor-trailer unit.

Driver of the truck, Kenneth Johnstone, Parksville, escaped injury.

Mrs. Johansen was dead on arrival at hospital.

She was believed to have been alone at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Johansen was a nurses' aide at the Salvation Army Mary Moore Home, Cobble Hill.

Mrs. Johansen is survived by a grown son and daughter.

Coroner Dr. Robert R. Wilson said an inquest will be held.

Police were investigating the possibility the woman may have suffered a heart attack prior to the accident. An autopsy was to be conducted later today.

INDIAN ATTACKS DUNCAN LAWYERS

DUNCAN—Chief Mike Underwood of the Cowichan Indian Band Tuesday night accused Duncan lawyers of having "no guts."

"It seems impossible to get a lawyer to present our case," he told a joint meeting of the band and city council.

"We approached one man and was told he was afraid to face city council.

"He would not come here tonight," said Chief Underwood.

The Indians are seeking tax easements for work done on reserve roads and installation of water and sewer services into Cowichan Way without cost to them.

Planning consultant and Vancouver Alderman Robert A. Williams appeared as the Indian's spokesman at Tuesday's meeting.

He claimed that the comparatively high taxes on commercial properties on Cowichan Way subdivision tended to subsidize costs of the city proper.

The band asked why the city would not install water and sewer services without taking a 40 per cent share of the cost from the Indians.

Mr. Williams said: "The band share must come from trust funds which are the property of all Cowichan Indians, even though they gain nothing from the subdivision revenue."

Mayor Dobson said he was amazed at the band questioning the right of council to assess reserve property.

He said the band should be taking a share of the money going to individual Indian lessees.

"I told you at a previous meeting to take all the taxes and do the work yourself," Mayor Dobson told Chief Underwood."

The band and city council then decided to refer recent differences to negotiation in committee.

Last Chance For Dogs

Summonses may be served to Central Saanich residents who have disregarded warnings that the deadline for purchase of dog licences was Jan. 15.

Council Tuesday night decided to crack down on tardy licence purchasers and instructed the municipal animal controller to take firm action.

Animal control bylaw aimed specifically at dogs has been in effect for two years and councillors now feel that ignorance of the law is no excuse.

Municipal Clerk Fred Durrand said there may be over 200 unlicenced dogs in Central Saanich. About 160 dog licences have been sold so far this year.

Hermit Woodworker Not Easy to Find

COURTENAY—The spiritual leader of a group of hermits living on a tract of land 13 miles north of here is searching for a woodworker to join the community.

The leader, Father James Winandy, has received many applications from prospective hermits, but none so far have been qualified to re-work the hand-carved altar which was given to the group from St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral in Victoria last August.

The 100-year-old altar was presented to the group by Bishop Remi De Roo because it had become outmoded under the Catholic Church's new liturgy.

Painstaking Work

The hermits, four priests and four laymen, plan to re-work the wood into liturgical objects such as book stands, smaller altars and crucifixes.

It is the first hermitage to be recognized by the Western Church in several centuries.

Bishop De Roo will assist Father Winandy in screening the many applications, but he said it is unlikely the community will ever accept more than 12 members.

The present members are from widely diversified backgrounds and all parts of the world. All are former monks.

Complete Solitude

Bishop De Roo said some of the things considered in screening applicants are his ability to set up a personal spiritual program, ability to live in complete solitude and his ability to relate generally to the group.

"The only time the hermits have communal services is on the feast of their patron, St. John and during Holy Week at Easter."

Bishop De Roo pointed out the same rules apply to the hermits as other Roman Catholics.

He said since the hermits moved to Vancouver Island last August they have been largely at work establishing their separate residences.

"We wish nothing more than to be hermits," says their statute, "fully and exclusively, therefore, to devote our lives wholly to God in the meditation of His word, prayer, mortification and the gradual appeasement of all our earthly desires."

Guest speaker at the meeting was Father Harold McIntee, assistant at St. Edwards Roman Catholic Church at Duncan. A member of the Order of Oblate Fathers, he spent five years in the Chilcotin country before coming to the Cowichan Valley two years ago.

Installing officer was Reg Attwell of Nanaimo, president of the AOTS district council for V.I.

ON SWIMMING POOL

Council Overrules Vote

Construction of an unheated swimming pool as a local centennial project was approved by Central Saanich council Tuesday despite a 59.8 per cent "No" vote by ratepayers in an unofficial ballot.

However, in approving the project, council strongly recommended to the centennial committee that the pool be heated if financially feasible.

Questionnaire replies at last night's meeting defeated the proposed project 560 to 376.

Introducing the motion to approve the project, Coun. Philip Benn said: "This vote was only taken as a guide for council and it is not decisive. If half of those people who voted 'no' had attended the public meetings the results would have been different."

Councillors Margaret Salt and Charles Mollard did not agree.

UNDEMOCRATIC

"I feel that we are getting away from democratic action in not considering the wishes of the majority of the ratepayers," Coun. Mollard said, "and I could not vote for this."

An unheated pool was approved by a narrow margin at a Brentwood meeting and approval would have been greater if the vote had been taken on a heated pool, Coun. Benn suggested. Heated pool was approved by ratepayers at a Saanichton meeting Monday.

Coun. Tom Michell said he thought more favorable replies would have been received if the questionnaire had asked ratepayers for their opinion of a heated pool.

But he did not propose that ballots be destroyed unopened and a second questionnaire sent out as he suggested at the Saanichton meeting.

COST: $36,000

Cost of the 30x60 pool is estimated at $36,000. In the motion opposed by Councillors Salt and Mollard, council recommends a heating unit be included if possible in this figure. If this is not possible, the centennial committee could raise additional funds to cover the unit, it is suggested.

Committee Chairman Albert Vickers welcomed the decision and commented, "We will do our utmost to see it is a heated pool."

CIGARETTE MACHINE STOLEN

CROFTON—Cigarette machines are often the victims of break-ins.

But Sunday morning thieves stole the machine from Crofton Hotel lobby.

Manager Ray Carter said: "We first noticed it missing about noon Sunday but it could have been stolen anytime after 1 a.m. Sunday.

The heavy machine was well stocked.

French Workshop Set for Sooke

SOOKE—Central Vancouver Island teachers will be guests here Saturday for a French language workshop at Belmont Senior Secondary School.

Delegates from Qualicum, Chemainus, Duncan and Nanaimo as well as Lower Island schools are expected to attend.

A speaker will be Jean-Pierre Mentha, department of modern languages at the University of Victoria.

FINES LEVIED

689 Students Withhold $56

By SUE PELLAND

As of Tuesday afternoon, 689 University of Victoria students had withheld $56 of their second term fees.

Saturday was the final day for payment and $10 late fines are now being levied on students still paying.

An additional 88 students are still owing part or all of their second term tuition.

Students who are withholding $56 of their fees are protesting tuition rises which they say are presenting a financial barrier to higher education.

The students' council, which originally pledged 1,500 students to withholding, is asking students not to pay their fees until Jan. 27, the day the legislature opens.

They say this would spotlight their campaign to have the provincial government provide greater financial assistance to the universities.

Letters were sent Tuesday to delinquent students saying that if fees are not paid in full by Jan. 21 the registrar will be informed and immediate steps taken to enforce calendar regulations.

According to the university calendar, these students could be expelled for non-payment of fees.

The students' council has told students that the time lapse between the 21 and 27 is not great enough to allow for expulsion.

They have told students they will pay $10 late fines for students withholding their fees. This could amount to $7,000.

The council announced its intention Sunday night to negotiate a bank loan to pay this fine for students.

They plan to pay this back with funds raised from a national appeal to other universities for financial assistance.

The appeal is to be launched this week.

Council has said, that if necessary, it will take monies out of Alma Mater funds to pay the remaining debt.

Peterson Favors Lower Fees

Education Minister Leslie Peterson told University of Victoria students Tuesday he would like to see university fees lowered, though he does not favor eliminating them.

Speaking to a large audience which included university president Dr. Malcolm Taylor, Mr. Peterson said he would recommend student assistance through bursaries to eliminate the financial barriers to higher education.

"It's certainly possible to eliminate fees completely," he said. "The question is whether it's desirable."

Asked if he thought student fees had reached a plateau, Mr. Peterson said the universities, being autonomous, set the fee level where they wish.

"But I would hope that fees be lowered," he said, and later told students: "I hope the universities receive substantially increased operating grants."

He said greater importance is being placed on the economic value of education and referred to the recent report of Canada's Economic Council.

"I think they are anxious to give education that priority," said Mr. Peterson.

He said national expansion is threatened by a shortage of professional men and women.

"But we have a ceiling on how much we can spend," he added.

Bookmaking Charge Dropped

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood Tuesday in central court used a legal technicality to have his client acquittted of recording bets.

He was defending Walter L. M. Chrane, 976 Humbolt, charged last August with recording bets.

Mr. Owen-Flood argued the charge was a nullity because it alleged two separate offences in the one information.

The charge read: ". . . did unlawfully use or knowingly allow a place under his control to be used . . ." for recording bets.

There is a difference between using a place for recording bets and allowing someone else to use it, Mr. Owen-Flood said.

Magistrate William Ostler ruled the charge was not a nullity but was a bad charge because of the duplication.

Bids This Year On 174-Bed Psychiatric Unit

Years-long planning of a 174-bed psychiatric hospital for Victoria is entering its last lap and tenders should be called before the year is out, Public Works Minister W. N. Chant said Tuesday.

Site for the $6 million project was selected about two years ago on Lee Avenue, east of Royal Jubilee Hospital, but so far there has been no demolition of the existing houses.

"Planning has been going on for quite a long time because it is a highly complicated building," Mr. Chant said.

"However, it is moving right along now. We are not ready to put it out to tender at present but we will be later this year."

Prolonged Nuisance To Be Ended

The smoke nuisance at Plumper Bay, scheduled to end by Jan. 1, will definitely cease by the end of the month, Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health has been told.

Bad weather in December delayed construction of a wharf near the beehive burners operated by Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd.

Waste products from the sawmills are to be taken by barge to Port Angeles for disposal.

Beehive burners, which create the smoke, will cease operation by the end of January, the board was told.

The board had previously set the Jan. 1 deadline for end of the smoke nuisance, but has accepted the sawmill company's reason for the extension.

TO RESIGN THURSDAY

Record Reign By Menzies Ends

CANBERRA (CP) — Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies of Australia, senior government chief in the British Commonwealth, today formally told the federal cabinet he is retiring after 16 years in office.

Informed sources said he will tender his official resignation to the governor - general, Lord Casey, Thursday.

Menzies, 71, did not disclose whether he also intends to give up his seat in Parliament.

To meet constitutional requirements, Menzies' successor as head of the ruling Liberal-Country party coalition government, Federal Treasurer Harold Holt, was not expected to be sworn in until next Tuesday, the sources said.

Menzies also announced today the retirement of Senator Shane Paltridge, defence minister and government leader in the Senate.

Paltridge entered hospital in Perth Tuesday night where his condition today was reported to be serious. He is suffering from chest cancer.

Menzies, son of a country storekeeper and grandson of a Scottish miner, gave up a lucrative law practice to enter state politics in 1928.

TAKES LEADERSHIP

When he entered federal Parliament the next year, Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons selected him as attorney - general. When Lyons died in 1939, Menzies succeeded him.

He resigned in 1941 when he lost the support of two independents who had helped to keep him in power. A month later the United Australia party lost an election to Labor and Menzies became leader of the Opposition.

He started his current record term in office in 1949 when his newly - organized Liberal party beat out Labor and checked its plans to nationalize industry.

Menzies, six-foot-two and a skilled orator, was a booster of close ties with Britain.

"I have a respect for the rights of the top dog and no use for the foolish doctrine of equality between the active and the idle, the intelligent and the dull, the frugal and the improvident," he once said.

He evolved his conservative views in his youth when his grandfather, John Sampson, tried to make a staunch Labor man out of him. Sampson was a union organizer.

WINS MANY HONORS

Menzies holds scores of decorations, honorary degrees and titles. But he is most fond of the knighthood of the Order of the Thistle, conferred on him by the Queen in 1963.

This is the highest Scottish order and Menzies is proud of his ancestry. "I am a reasonably bigoted descendant of the Scottish race," he said.

Menzies put himself through university law school on scholarships and at the age of 34 became the youngest king's counsel in Australia's history.

POLITE, BUT FIRM

Procedure Once Boring To Newly Named Speaker

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Lucien Lamoureux, the new Speaker of the House of Commons, is a gentle - spoken lawyer whose Gallic charm tends to conceal a crisp decisiveness.

"In his quiet, polite way," says an opposition member, "he sometimes gives the impression of bending under pressure. But he's firm, believe me."

Mr. Lamoureux, 45-year-old MP for the Eastern Ontario riding of Stormont, has been tested under fire and the Commons is not getting an unkown quantity. As deputy Speaker in the last Parliament, he occupied the chair through some of the more testy debates, and he managed to emerge without raising the wrath of any group.

LAMOUREUX
. . . tested under fire

Because of his apparent success at the job, his eletion as Speaker was not unexpected. Since former Speaker Alan Macnaughton decided not to seek re - election in Montreal Mount Royal, it was considered a foregone conclusion that Mr. Lamoureux, a Cornwall lawyer, would move into the rich panelled quarters behind the Speaker's chair—and into the chair itself.

BORED BY PROCEDURE

In some ways it's ironic that he should occupy the procedural nerve centre of the Commons, because until his appointment as deputy Speaker nothing bored Mr. Lamoureux so much as procedure.

"Frankly," he says, "I always thought procedure in itself was a rather dull subject. As a lawyer, I found it dull."

But the Ottawa native had little difficulty in handling his university courses, complete with procedural training. He went through the University of Ottawa and Osgoode Hall for a master of arts degree and his law degree.

Then for nine years he was the executive assistant to Lionel Chevrier, Liberal transport minister prior to the government's defeat in 1957. After this he moved to Cornwall to enjoy "a pleasant life" as a small-city lawyer.

Mr. Lamoureux entered the Commons in 1962 in a rare deferred election, held on July 16, four weeks after the June 18 general election. The deferment was due to death of the Liberal candidate two days after official nomination day. Mr. Lamoureux was nominated by the Liberals and won by 70 votes over his Conservative opponent.

BECAME INTERESTED

When he was appointed deputy Speaker, Mr. Lamoureux had to throw himself completely into procedure. For several months he read little else but Commons rules.

"It was rather dry reading, but then I took a liking to it, and I must say I enjoy it now. After a while you start moving with a group of people who have an interest in this type of thing."

With his perfectly-knotted tie, crisply-pressed suit and unwrinkled robes, Mr. Lamoureux is a natty figure in the huge leather-backed Speaker's chair. He listens attentively to every member, sometimes tapping his left fingers on the arm rest when the debate is not moving the way he would like. Before jumping up to call a member to order he will shuffle his shiny black shoes on the green-carpeted footrest.

He has no dramatics, no tendency to wisecrack his way through difficult situations. "I know the honorable member is doing so unconsciously," he'll say, "but perhaps he has wandered just a bit from the subject matter, and perhaps we can work our way back to the matter under discussion."

Mr. Lamoureux has never missed a Commons sitting. He has seldom missed two weekly visits to his Stormont riding, 75 miles away. He always jumps in his car at 6 p.m. Wednesday and spends the evening at home before returning to Ottawa Thursday morning. And he's in his riding from Friday evening until Monday morning.

But he sees little of his wife and four children while there. Stoutly refusing to accept any constituency engagements during House sitting hours, he accepts them for weekends and Wednesday evenings.

"When I am home, I always make myself available to my constituents."

During his free moments in Ottawa—where he lives at a downtown hotel — Mr. Lamoureux writes letters to his constituents. They literally pour out of his office. "I can think of more reasons to write letters—I can keep my two secretaries busy producing them."

QUESTION PERIOD TOUGH

"The job of deputy Speaker was very strenuous physically, and you have to keep on your toes mentally. I have found that if I do my homework I can have a pretty good idea of what procedural arguments might arise."

Generally, he has found the daily question period to be the toughest to handle, although the complicated procedural arguments usually arise elsewhere.

In one case last year, while Mr. Macnaughton was away, Mr. Lamoureux had his ruling appealed while he was acting as chairman of the whole House. The appeal was made to the Speaker—who was Mr. Lamoureux.

"I resolved that it was a very judicious ruling," he recalls, while allowing that the situation was "a bit ridiculous."

He says that was one occasion when members could have embarrassed him. But no one did.

After going through the last Parliament in the detached role of deputy Speaker, Mr. Lamoureux was asked whether this affected his election campaign.

"No, I don't think so. I am not really a partisan politician and I am not the type who goes out and attacks an opponent. I think my campaign was objective."

What does he miss about his pre-parliamentary days when he was a small-city lawyer.

"I had time to go home for lunch then," he says.

INDIRA 'BORN TO RULE' INDIA'S 480 MILLION PEOPLE

By ADRIENNE FARRELL

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Mrs. Indira Gandhi — India's first woman prime minister — can hold her own with anyone in the tough world of politics and international diplomacy.

It is a way of life that has been instilled into this gracious, 48-year-old widow since childhood.

Her friends say that as the daughttr of the late Jawaharlal Nehru — independent India's first prime minister—she was born to rule India's 480,000,000 people.

MRS. GANDHI
. . . can hold her own

They recall how, as a young girl, she imitated her father by standing on a table and "haranguing" the servants.

Later, when her father became prime minister, she was plunged into the hard reality of a life of public service as his hostess and travelling companion on missions abroad.

She has helped shape the policies of the ruling Congress party in which she has been a dominating figure.

Slim, dark-eyed with finely-cut features, Mrs. Gandhi inherits her father's aristocratic bearing. Their family is of Brahmin caste, highest in the Hindu system.

But Mrs. Gandhi inherited her father's agnosticism and secularism which is more likely to win the confidence of India's Moslems.

STAY NON-ALIGNED

Also she is somewhat to the left of her father in political thinking. As prime minister she can be expected to continue the non-aligned policy that India has followed since independence.

Born Nov. 19, 1917, Mrs. Gandhi went to a convent school and finished her schooling in Switzerland and at Somerville College, Oxford.

In 1942 she married Feroze Gandhi, a member of Parliament—no relation to Mohandas K. Gandhi—despite her father's opposition.

A few months after her marriage she and her husband went to Kashmir where they were soon arrested by British authorities. Mrs. Gandhi spent some time in a local jail for political prisoners.

She has two sons, Rajiv, born in 1944, and Snjay, born in 1946. For 12 years while they were growing up she stepped aside from political life to devote herself to them.

Feroze Gandhi died of a heart attack in 1960.

IS COSMOPOLITAN

Like her father, Mrs. Gandhi epitomizes Indian good living and good taste combined with cosmopolitanism. Every kind of food—Indian, French, Chinese, Mexican—is served at her table.

In dress, she favors hand-woven saris of silk or cotton with a short-sleeved blouse. She likes bright colors.

She has her father's love of reading and both Indian and Western music.

Mrs. Gandhi joined the Congress party in 1955 and was elected party president in 1959. She joined the cabinet for the first time after her father's death as minister of information and broadcasting, the post she held until now.

"I do not like politics," she said not long ago. "I do not like being in the public eye."

Recently she told an interviewer she would like to devote her time to research and anthropology. But as prime minister, the frail woman will be grappling with India's food shortage and regional rivalries, a shaky truce with Pakistan and China's belligerence, among many other problems.

HAD CHANCE BEFORE

Mrs. Gandhi probably could have had the job of prime minister when her father died in May, 1964. His successor, Lal Bahadur Shastri, offered to support her but she told him:

"I am not modest enough to say that I cannot handle the job, but I am not conceited enough to say that others cannot handle it."

When Mrs. Gandhi became president of the Congress party, she told a reporter party leaders had bullied her into taking the post. Later she said she found it an exhilarating and exasperating experience. Nehru said he was concerned about her health—she has undergone treatment for a back ailment and other illnesses.

Now the problems that beset Nehru—and after him the diminutive Shastri—rest on the shoulders of Nehru's five-foot-five daughter, the first woman to serve as chief of government of a major nation. The only previous woman prime minister is Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, who served in Ceylon, India's small island neighbor, 1960-65.

Married Names Puzzle Foreigners

NEW DELHI (AP) — The married names of India's new prime minister, Indira Gandhi, and her famous aunt, Vijayalakshmi Pandit, often puzzle foreigners. Was Mrs. Gandhi related to the late Mohandas K. Gandhi, the architect of Indian independence? And how did her aunt get the name Pandit?

Mrs. Gandhi was married to Feroze Gandhi, a Lucknow businessman who was no relation to Mohandas. Mrs. Pandit was married to a lawyer and Sanskrit scholar named Ranjit Pandit.

Pandit in the Hindu religion means teacher or preceptor, but it was Ranjit Pandit's surname. To add to the confusion, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru—Mrs. Gandhi's father and Mrs. Pandit's brother — was a pandit by birthright because his forbear were Kashmiri Brahmins, the highest of the high. Nehru for years used the title of pandit.

In the family, Mrs. Pandit was known as "Nan" and Mrs. Gandhi was called "Indu" (Moon) by her father.

NASSAU (CP) — The Bahamas will change from sterling to decimal currency May 25, it was announced Monday. Finance Minister Sir Stafford Sands said the Bahamian dollar, equivalent to seven shillings sterling ($1.05 Canadian), will become the official currency on that date but sterling will remain legal tender until Nov. 25.

Tolmie Park Plans To Cost $30,000

Saanich will prepare a beautification plan for the top of Mount Tolmie, a major lookout point in Greater Victoria.

The plan will be prepared by engineer Neville Life and parks superintendent Bert Richman. It would be submitted to the Capital Improvement District Commission.

Mr. Richman told the parks and recreation committee Tuesday night the cost would be about $30,000.

The roof of the new reservoir could be used for parking and some rock cleared to provide a 360-degree view, he said.

He also said the defence department has indicated it will remove a building from the mountain top.

"The top part certainly needs improving," said Coun. Edith Gunning.

Reeve Hugh Curtis said CIDC "will probably look favorably at this."

FOUR FREEDOMS

Intriguing Question ... And the Answer

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Columnists live on the reactions and opinions of their readers. Letters they receive from time to time expressing agreement for blame are read with interest. That is, if they are signed with the name of the writer.

Forbes

Communications that come unsigned, no matter how pithy, are usually tossed in the waste-paper basket.

Normally that is what would have happened to a letter that came to me recently with no name, no address and no date.

Written in bold black ink on the folded sheet of paper were two sentences: "What kind of world do we want?" and then "Answer that one, if you can."

* * *

Those sentences intrigued me. Instead of throwing the letter away immediately I left it opened on my desk where the writing attracted me back every once in awhile to the question.

I would say that the answer is to be found in the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms listed there — "Freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear."

At the same time I would point out that if these freedoms are to work they must be extended to all peoples of the world, without distinction of race.

Even the casual observer of world events has come to realize that neither peace nor freedom can be secured and stabilized unless they can be shared by all mankind.

* * *

Today, the world is shorn of distances and of privacy by the inquisitive advances of science. Countries with different aims and visions have become partners through the urgencies of industrial progress. Fear, want and unrest is rife.

And yet slowly but surely a new dream of independence, advancement and self-fulfilment is finding universal words.

In such a world the existence of different races must logically be viewed as a mere fact and not as a problem.

The human races have been here a long time. They are here to stay. The problem is not their existence but their co-existence with ultimately equal stakes in freedom, peace and progress.

* * *

I believe the problems to be resolved before we reach the goals suggested fall into two fields—one human, of people seen as individuals with a soul and a body, the other technical, of their country and at what level it shall exist.

For each of these fields there is a special tool that will produce results: understanding where the need is human and assistance where the need is technical.

Those who know world affairs far better than I do will tell you that in these and all other problems of human rights, education is the road to the kind of world we want just as it is the road to new responsibilities.

You cannot combine different civilizations without difficulty but a thorough knowledge on each side of the other's culture and civilization is a wonderful tool in working towards that end.

* * *

A friend of mine, who happens to live in Africa, points up this fact very forcefully in the following words:

"One's own country is only a part of the big jig-saw puzzle called World. And for that World there are the same rules and regulations as for one's own country . . . knowledge provides the basic factors for world planning, based on understanding and logical conclusions."

We are still learing the difficult lesson of how to live together. Indeed, in a more complex world this has become a more complex problem and it will take all the patience, the ingenuity and the careful study we can give it to find its solution.

Find it we must, however, if men and women are to be given their opportunity to live as complete human beings, free to think, to express themselves and to worship in their own way in a world set free from fear and want.

And, if we are to have the kind of world we want!

Symphony Seeks Increased Per Capita Grant

Victoria Symphony Society has asked the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee to increase its annual per capita grant from three cents to five.

Victoria city now donates five cents per capita but lower grants from surrounding municipalities bring the average down to three cents per head of population.

If the appeal is granted the symphony the increased grant would give the society an extra $3,200 a year.

The grant application will be given further study along with other grant applications at a special meeting of the Intermunicipal Committee.

Socity president Jack Barraclough told the committee that this year the society's chamber music group hoped to tour various areas of the province.

Magistrate Delays Decision Until Jan. 26

Magistrate William Ostler Tuesday reserved judgment until Jan. 26 on a charge of assault against Kenneth Roy, 2501 Wark.

Roy's counsel, Digby Keir, objected to an attempt by the Crown to introduce rebuttal evidence.

Mr. Keir said the Crown had closed its case when prosecutor Peter Birkett called Sgt. John Rickerby to the stand to give rebuttal evidence.

Magistrate Ostler upheld the objection.

Roy had pleaded not guilty to assaulting Const. James Ramsay Nov. 27 by striking him over the head with his crutch or crutches.

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

Go to the Phoenix Theatre on the University of Victoria's Gordon Head Campus this week and next, prepared to be deligted, dazzled, amused and—now and then—puzzled.

The Campus Players' production of Fry's witty, sophisticated and subtle play has been given a brilliant, inventive interpretation by its director, Gil Bunch.

It has many aesthetic delights, not the least of which is the quality imparted by its airily classic setting, the bold use of white as its theme color coupled with clever lighting.

There is a contrapuntal working of themes in this comedy of human relations. Superficially, it concerns the Duke and his mistresses, his antagonistic son, and the sudden impact of young, forthright beauty when Perpetua, his estate manager's daughter, returns from America.

LIFE AND LOVE

But the story is secondary to Fry's perceptive commentary on youth and age and the perpetual renewal of life and love.

It is expressed with vivid symbolism and in language that flows and flashes, continually impaling one's attention with its images.

Unfortunately the one serious flaw in the production on Tuesday's opening performance, was that too many lines were unintelligible.

Ineffectual diction and rapidity of speech were mostly to blame but when one of the worst offenders, Gudrun Langkilde-Lauesen, had her longest speech, some over-direction was also involved.

SWOOPING, DASHING

The speech might have been one of the most beautiful in the play but most people would never know this. The actress's diction would have had to be acute to overcome the distraction of her swoopings and dashes about the stage during its course.

Aside from this fault, the young actress has convincing amounts of charm and wit in her performance and moves delightfully.

Mr. Bunch has a fine feeling for style, rhythm and tempo. He made splendid use of pauses and long, sweeping phrases. As far as style was concerned, it was clear in the overall concept but uneven in execution.

Carl Hare's smooth sophistication, the moments of depth, the polished gestures, their perfect economy; John Getgood's quite fabulous characterization as the girl's father, with its overtones of pathos (even though it got out of hand rather seriously in the first act), and Jennifer Chaster's finely shaded performance — these were all gems.

One of the production's delightful discoveries was newcomer Bruce Sharp, whose elegance, restraint, timing and projection gave him a special magnetism. Two other performances that will linger in memory were given by Mary Getgood and Reg Terry.

Laplanders Coming To Canada?

TAERNA, Sweden (Reuters) Lapps relying on reindeer and fish for their livelihood in Swedish Lapland are unhappy. They want to emigrate to Scotland or Canada.

"The state power board plans to build a reservoir that would kill fish in Lake Gaeutan and also divide reindeer grazing grounds," says Folke Johansson, the village ombudsman of Taerna.

"So we have asked the government to investigate the possibility of the village acquiring permission to tend reindeer in Scotland, Greenland, Canada or some other suitable place abroad."

Division of the grazing pastures would make reindeer herding impossible, he added.

U.S. Ship for Malta

VALETTA (AP)—The Maltese and U.S. governments have concluded negotiations for a U.S. Navy repair ship to be based in Malta. The Cadmus arrived in Malta Monday for a two-month trial period. Anyone who has played outdoor games with the Army, under the pseudonym of "simulated warfare," will get some belly laughs out of this wild and wacky U.S. sponsored English comedy.

Terry-Thomas is delightfully mincing as the type of Army officer who talks to Other Ranks as if they were new recruits to a Sunday school. And Wilfred Hyde-White — so ponderously concerned for "the men"—is clearly a gentleman of the old basic training school.

Otherwise the characters in this film have little in common with real life and have no purpose other than to amuse.

* * *

Lionel Jeffries, trailing his kilt out of one scrape into another, is too preposterous even to be a parody of the Scotsman in England. And Bernard Cribbens, as a kooky sergeant, is never more than a gag man who interrupts the show at regular intervals.

The exception is James Robertson Justice who makes a brief but welcome appearance as a cantankerous, small-town librarian.

The rest of the cast meander their way through a maze of highly improbable situations and never really come to life.

Major Terry-Thomas, a psychological officer with the British Army Medical Corps, prepares a 48-hour initiative test, which is really a kind of scavenger hunt.

Officers, NCOs and Other Ranks are required to roam London in search of such unmilitary objects as an electric hare from a greyhound racing course, a lock of hair from a sexy pop singer, the Lutine bell from Lloyd's Exchange and a famous rose from the botanical gardens at Kew, Surrey.

* * *

A representative of the U.S. Air Force (Michael Callan) is injected into the contest (presumably as an aid to capturing the dollar market), and he cuts a gallant figure amid the amiable imbecilities of the English comedians.

Needless to say, the American wins the contest and then gives a sailor's farewell to the British Army as he takes off for a Paris honeymoon with glamor girl Patricia Viterbo.

It's all good fun and well in the English tradition of making fun of the English—but isn't the American image being pushed a little too far?

Liquor Charge Laid

Two youths were fined $35 each when they pleaded guilty in central court Monday to having liquor in their possession.

Caught Dec. 24 by police were Larry Mitchell, 611 Fernhill, who had a part-full bottle of whisky with him, and Frederick Nohels, 19, HMCS Naden, who had a case of beer in his car.

Opening lead—♥ 6.

Jim: "It was certainly present. Last week I mentioned the hand in the final match in which the location of the king of spades determined two of the three places on the team. On the other hand, luck tends to equalize and I doubt anyone can credit luck for making the team or charge luck for not making it. Everyone had plenty of chances to pick up International Match Points."

Oswald: "Nevertheless it's still disheartening when you really have bad luck. Here is a hand on which the normal bidding is shown in the box. South wound up as declarer at four spades. There was nothing to the play. South would win the heart opening in dummy and lead the queen of spades. The best defence would be to duck but most defenders would rise with the ace. In any event the trumps would be drawn sooner or later and a successful club finesse would produce a small slam."

Jim: "I see why you are driving at luck. Two South players decided to open one spade. This is poor tactics in general because you are starting an attack without enough ammunition. I am sure each South player was quite unhappy when his partner forced him into a slam contract but the finesse worked at six just as well as at four, and these lucky slam bidders were rewarded with 12 IMPs each."

Oswald: "That's just the point. The opening spade bid was unsound. The final slam contract was also unsound. There was no play for it without the club finesse and the hand would really have collapsed if suits had broken badly for declarer.

BEST PLAN I'VE SEEN

For the busy executive and his family — a new home with an excellent plan — so designed that traffic doesn't trek through the formal areas unless you desire. A den near the entrance keeps business guests of father away from the bridge tables mother might have in the living room. There's a family room for the younger set. Also there's a large basement that can be developed into a recreation room or more bedrooms. Come and see this excellently finished home with the outstanding plan in Upper Lansdowne. Asking $33,900. Call WILF DAVIS, 388-4271, or Res. 658-3276.

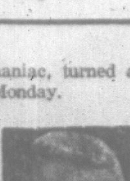
Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Jerry Lewis, a self-admitted egomaniac, turned a seldom seen sober side to the viewer Monday.



Stephen

"Jerry Lewis Uncensored" was the first of a two-part interview conducted by David Susskind on "Something Different" on Channel 5.

Lewis produced some interesting and some strange ideas during the hour-long interview.

His childhood, described as one which left a "dark, bleak scar" on his life because travelling with his show-business parents prevented proper schooling. He dropped out of school at 16.

Today, the internationally-known clown has 350-400 suits on his clothes racks. Added to the wardrobe are a couple of hundred pairs of shoes and about a gross of shirts. These are supposed to compensate for the days when his only clothes consisted of a "heavy tweed suit with two pairs of pants which steamed after a rain."

His success allowed him to pay $500,000 cash for the three-acre L. B. Mayer estate in Bel Air, Calif.

"What a wonderful feeling," he opined, "not to have to pay it out on time."

The funnyman expressed many of his philosophies, some cockeyed from this point of view, and played everything in a humble, low-keyed manner.

The hour was really a refreshing diversion. The next part of the interview will be seen next Monday. Fortunately, we've been invited out for the evening.

* * *

ABC-TV is moving into the field of twice-weekly movies in prime-time. This speculation follows a deal closed by the network with Seven Arts for a group of past feature film releases at a cost of more than $10,500,000.

The block consists of pictures never before seen on TV and reruns. Some of the titles are "Can-Can," with Frank Sinatra and Shirley MacLaine; "Ulysses," starring Kirk Douglas; "The Young Lions," with Marlon Brando, Dean Martin and Montgomery Clift, and "Take Her, She's Mine," with James Stewart . . . The Oscar-winning film, "I Want to Live" with Susan Hayward, will be CBC-TV's Great Movie Jan. 28.

Demands of France Keep ECM in Crisis

LUXEMBOURG (AP)—France's five Common Market partners fear many more months of serious crisis lie ahead for the European Economic Community unless President de Gaulle's government is willing to make some concessions.

Delegates privately expressed concern over the future of European unity after a two-day meeting that ended in disagreement on a French proposal that most of them viewed as more of an ultimatum.

French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville made an offer of limited co-operation with the other five members, provided that each member retain a veto on major questions. He also insisted steps be taken to trim the powers of the market's executive commission, which de Gaulle fears may turn into a super-government.

The ministers agreed to meet here again Jan. 28-29 for another try, but it was felt success or failure depends largely on France.

Premier Pierre Werner of Luxembourg will report Thursday to the European Parliament in Strasbourg on the ministers' failure to solve the six-month-long crisis resulting from France's boycott of the community's meetings.

The other five EEC members are West Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Ice, Snow Covers Europe

LONDON (AP)—Bitter winds from Siberia spread ice and snow over much of Europe today. Britain was warned to prepare for a long cold spell lasting perhaps 30 days.

Temperatures in eastern England dropped to 12 degrees during the night, the coldest in three years. Thousands of industrial workers in the Midlands faced layoffs because gas supplies were inadequate to keep factories moving.

In Norway temperatures went down to 40 below zero in some inland districts.

Blinding snow storms closed airports in Norway's far north.

Most of the Bothnian Gulf on Sweden's east coast was closed to shipping.

In West Germany, temperatures dropped to nine below, but the forecast was for snow and rising temperatures.

The cold brought dense fog to much of Britain. The Automobile Association warned that ice patches had made roads dangerous throughout the country.

federal authority is apparently going to continue."

Mr. Douglas said although scholarships and new financial assistance for universities are pledged, there is no indication this aid will be sufficient to eliminate tuition fees.

"We think this is necessary if we are to provide the kind of training needed to increase productivity."

Another defect was a qualification on the promised national medical care insurance plan indicating the plan will be set up after discussions with the provinces. He is fearful some provinces may throw roadblocks in the way, holding up the plan

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the speech was "a consolidation of what should have been done in the last three years."

"There's hardly a new item. If every item is to proceed it will take us through the centennial year."

He was disappointed the speech contained no reference to provisional rules used during the last session and which he hopes will be used in this one.

He also was disappointed there was no reference to broadcasting and the recommendations of the Fowler committee report.

By and large every item in the speech needs attention, "but does the government have its program ready?" There was a need for a schedule of priorities.

Mr. Caouette said that "as usual, the speech is full of empty rhetoric."

"It talks about unprecedented prosperity, then calls for a war on poverty—a flagrant contradiction."

Mr. Caouette added the government has retreated on the Fulton-Favreau constitutional formula and dropped the proposal altogether.

The Creditistes would oppose any direct federal aid to education, since this was a provincial field. Before contributing a proposed $25,000,000 to the Asian bank, the government should lend money to the provinces and municipalities.

Samaritan Grocer Gets Help

NEW YORK (AP)—Offers of help began pouring in this week for a 56-year-old Puerto Rican grocer who said he was shunned because he helped a white policeman under attack by a Negro mob.

Enrique Negron, lost his business in the Bronx. He said neighbors called him "cop lover" and "Nigger hater." His savings dwindled to $300.

Newspaper stories about his plight aroused the concern of New Yorkers.

Negron said he has been offered jobs by the Staten Island ferry and Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. A former seaman, he said he would probably accept an offer from the National Maritime Union to return to sea.

Meantime, the Small Business Administration said it was willing to offer Negron a $15,000 loan with up to 15 years to pay. The federal agency said Negron would not have to put up collateral because his character is "unquestionable."

"Thank God and everybody," Negron said. 'Now at least I have some hope."

$15,452 AWARDED WOMAN RIDER

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia Supreme Court judge confirmed Tuesday a jury award of $15,452 to a woman who fell from a rented horse.

Damages were assessed against Richmond Rodeo Riding Ltd., which rented the horse to Mrs. Pauline Collins. The horse bolted and Mrs. Collins suffered a severe spinal injury when she was thrown to the ground.

The jury had ruled earlier the stable owners were 75 per cent liable because they gave Mrs. Collins, an inexperienced rider, a horse that was beyond her ability to handle.

Mrs. Collins was held 25 per cent to blame for accepting a horse she had difficulty mounting.

Crash Victim Seen Improving

Mrs. Helen M. Trousil, 10980 Chalet, Sidney, is in improved condition at St. Joseph's Hospital after receiving serious injuries in an auto accident Sunday.

A hospital spokesman said the woman is in "fair" condition, and is out of the intensive care ward.

Mrs. Trousil sustained chest, face and leg injuries when her car struck a lamp standard at Douglas and Quadra.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

WATER HYACINTH

Million $ $ Headache From Pretty Flower

ROME (AP)—Man's love for a pretty flower has given three continents a multi-million-dollar headache. It is rapidly getting worse with no real cure in sight.

The problem is the beautiful water hyacinth, with a garden lover transplanted from its native South America to his pool in Louisiana. Then it was taken just as innocently to South Africa, expanded into The Congo and somehow, between 1956 and 1958, reached the Sudanese portion of the Nile.

It has become such a ruinous, river-clogging menace that Louisiana and Florida have to finance costly eradication campaigns. More than $1,700,000 a year is being spent along the Nile alone to keep the fast-spreading plant from breaking through control points in the Sudan and infesting Egypt's lower Nile. It has also started choking fish ponds in East Pakistan.

Representatives of 18 African nations have appealed to the UN food and agriculture organization to help fight the flower.

PRETTY AND PROLIFIC

The water hyacinth looks like a gardener's joy with 10-inch spikes of blue-mauve or pale lilac delicately held above swaying rosettes of big, green, rounded leaves.

But it spreads so fast from drifting seed and spreading tendrils that no pool can hold it.

First it chokes off the landings. Then it breaks into floating islands, growing ever larger until navigation even by canoe is impossible. It sneaks up irrigation canals and clogs pumps.

The food and agriculture organization reported that along 1,000 miles of the Nile, the clogging plant extends down 30 feet, consuming oxygen from the water so that fish cannot live.

Board Still Seeing Little Pink Elephants

Members of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health are still seeing little pink elephants — on the shelves of local stores.

The pink elephants, as well as ice balls and baby teething rings, are water-filled novelties banned recently because of a high bacteria count.

The public was warned away from the novelties before Christmas, and most stores co-operated and withdrew them from stock.

But the ice balls and pink elephants have been seen again on local shelves, it was revealed at a board of health meeting Monday afternoon.

Said Saanich councillor Mrs. Edith Gunning: "I've seen them out within the last few days."

Board chairman R. G. Lee, reeve of central Saanich, said that "little can be done" about their appearance, although he deplores the fact that they are still around.

The board cannot force local store owners to take the merchandise off their shelves.

If appearance of any others is reported, the board will approach the store owner and "suggest he withdraw them," it was decided.

Creation of a new regional board of health and how it would effect the present board also came up for discussion at the meeting.

After an in camera discussion of the move, the board passed a motion that new terms of reference for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board be drawn up for early submission.

At the same meeting Reeve Lee was re-elected chairman of the board, and Greater Victoria school trustee Mrs. A. B. Thompson was elected vice-chairman for 1966.

Board Unhappy

Failure of the Oak Bay fluoridation referendum last month has been scored by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

At a meeting Monday the board passed a motion "expressing its disappointment."

The motion was proposed by Oak Bay councillor Dr. H. R. Carter, a longtime fluoridation backer, and was passed unanimously.

BRIDGE RESULTS

Winners of the second game in the Monday masters duplicate bridge club's six-week series played at Broughton clubrooms were: 1, Frances Newall and Les Isaacson; 2, Harry Brown and George Morgan; 3, Gwen Graham and Freda Small; 4, Dora Duprau and Sadie McPherson.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy snds a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Kay Schnuelle, age 12, of Indianapolis, Ind., for her question:

What are tent caterpillars?

Tent caterpillars and webworms do immense damage in our parks and orchards, forests and gardens. We study them along with other insects in the science of entomology. Tree lovers rate them as pests, but Andy's entomologist friend enjoys observing their silk-spinning activities.

Some butterfly caterpillars and moth caterpillars are spinners. Each wormy grub spins a single thread of fine white silk, trailing it behind him as he goes. A caterpillar, as a rule, is a self-centred character who goes off to live a greedy life of his own as soon as he hatches from an egg. The spinners, however, tend to meet in groups of 50 or more for self-protection.

Tent caterpillars tend to return to a general headquarters at night. Their community bunk covers a fork of small twigs high in a leafy tree. As they crawl around among the stalks and angles, each wormy grub leaves behind a silken thread. The countless threads stick together and form sheets of silken fabric that hang among the twigs like gauzy white tents.

These small caterpillars are black with blue-green or yellow marks down their spines and fuzzy brown fringes along their sides. There are several species of the American tent caterpillar and no region is free from at least one type. The little wretches devour the foliage of park and garden trees, of forests and orchards. Each morning they crawl away from their tents to gorge themselves on leaves. The greedy little monsters can defoliate a whole cherry tree and even strip the tender leaves from an entire orchard.

Eggs Hatch In Spring

The adult insect is a small moth of dull yellow. Come fall, she selects a tree and lays a mass of small brown eggs on its twigs. When the caterpillars hatch in the spring, they are surrounded by tender young leaves of their favorite food. They gorge themselves for about six weeks; then they use their gauzy threads to wind themselves in silken cocoons. The quiet pupa stage ends after three weeks. The pesky critters emerge as adult moths, ready to mate and lay eggs that will hatch next spring.

We can declare war on tent caterpillars at any season of the year. On summer evenings, they can be gathered up in their tents and burned. Later in the year the cocoons and eggs can be destroyed. Orchards can be sprayed with insecticides to wipe out each yearly generation of these destructive tent caterpillars.

FIRST IN MAJOR NATION

Woman Chosen To Lead India

Nehru Daughter Prime Minister

NEW DELHI (CP)—Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of the late Jawaharlal Nehru, was elected today to be India's third prime minister, the first woman in modern times to head the government of a major nation.

See Story Page 27

India's ruling Congress party automatically elevated Mrs. Gandhi to prime minister by electing her leader of its majority faction in Parliament.

Thus to the shoulders of this 48-year-old widow fell India's immense problems — problems which her father wrestled with for 17 years until his death in 1964 and which his successor, Lal Bahadur Shastri, attacked vigorously until a heart attack killed him Jan. 11.

Mrs. Gandhi went to her victory wearing a red rosebud pinned to her shawl, just as her father wore a red rose daily throughout the tumultuous years after independence in 1947.

Mrs. Gandhi polled 355 votes to 169 for her only challenger, rightwing leader Morarji Desai. Two votes were invalid.

Cheering erupted in Parliament's central hall when a party official, G .S. Pathak, announced the results of the secret ballot.

As the Nehru family once again took command in India, Mrs. Gandhi moved quickly to heal any damage done to party unity by the hectic political manoeuvring that followed Shastri's death.

'We Need Everybody's Blessing'

"I want your blessing," she told Desai as balloting began.

The stern, 69-year-old Desai replied:

"Who am I to give you blessing? We need everybody's blessing."

Victory for Mrs. Gandhi, who learned politics at her father's side, not only resumed the Nehru era after Shastri's 19-month interval, it also passed the nation's leadership to the second generation of Indian politicians.

Until today, India has been governed by the early freedom fighters who waged Mohandas K. Gandhi's "peace resistance" campaign to gain independence from Britain.

Mrs. Gandhi was part of that movement but played only a minor role. However, the survivors of her father's generation, notably Congress party President Kumaraswami Kamaraj, crushed most opposition to Mrs. Gandhi and thus will continue to have a say—perhaps a strong say—in national affairs.

Mrs. Gandhi is the 20th century's second woman prime minister. The other was Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon, the tiny island nation of 10,000,000 people off the southern tip of India. Elected in 1960, she was defeated in elections early last year.

A new prime minister could hardly face more serious problems than Mrs. Gandhi does.

There is widespread hunger in India and a near famine is expected in the coming months.

The dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir, which has set the two countries at war twice in 17 years, still festers. India's 480,000,000 people are still divided along religious and sectional lines. The national economy is in chaos. Neighboring China is a constant threat.

Gulzari Lal Nanda, sworn in as acting prime minister last Tuesday after Shastri's death in Tashkent, Russia, went to tender his government's resignation to President Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan and inform him of Mrs. Gandhi's election.

The president asked Mrs. Gandhi to form a new government.

Desai pledged his full co-operation to the new prime minister.

Mrs. Gandhi, weeping as she spoke, said in her acceptance speech:

"I am indebted to all members of the party including those who voted for and against me and I solicit their support in the great tasks lying ahead of us.

"Of all the resources we have,

Counter Spy Chief Replaced

(See story Page 3)

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government today replaced its counter espionage chief following the affair of a kidnapped Moroccan politician.

The government charged the abduction of Mehdi Ben Barka, a left wing Moroccan opposition leader, on a Paris street in October was organized abroad with the complicity of certain French secret agents.

The announcement was made in a communique issued after a cabinet meeting presided over by President de Gaulle

The communique said Ben Barka's abduction was "a criminal enterprise organized from abroad and which benefited from certain connivances on the part of French secret agents or police."

Following the cabinet meeting, a government spokesman said Gen. Paul Jacquier was being replaced as head of the counter-espionage service.

Gen. Eugene Guibaud, a career officer who once served as military intelligence chief in Saigon, was named to replace Jacquier.

The spokesman also said the counter-espionage service, formerly attached to the office of the prime minister, now will be placed directly under the armed forces minister.

One member of the counter-espionage service, Antoine Lopez, is under arrest and has been charged in connection with Ben Barka's disappearance.

Lopez' immediate superior in the counter-espionage service, Marcel Leroy, was suspended Tuesday.

Ben Barka, an exiled leftist Moroccan leader, was kidnapped Oct. 29 and has not been seen since then.

KILLED BY BULLET

A Paris gangster, Georges Figon, who had said he saw Ben Barka murdered — was found dead with a bullet in his head in an apartment on the fashionable Avenue de Wagram Monday after police went there to arrest him.

Justice department officials said Figon killed himself.

MLA Held In Quebec Payoffs

QUEBEC (CP) — Marcellin Laroche, 46, Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly for Portneuf, was charged today with accepting benefits from a person dealing with the provincial government.

Mr. Laroche was charged with 16 counts involving a total sum of $15,260.

He was charged under section 102 of the Criminal Code with having exacted from businessmen in the District of Portneuf returns for himself, and also for other persons.

The charge says the businessmen had received provincial government contracts.

Mr. Laroche was first elected to the assembly in 1960. He lives in Pont Rouge.

Section 102 says:

"Everyone commits an offence who directly or indirectly, being an official or employee of the government, demands, accepts or offers or agrees to accept from a person who has dealings with the government a commission, reward, advantage or benefit of any kind . . ."

ORGANIZER INVOLVED

Mr. Laroche also is charged with having conspired with a Portneuf Liberal organizer to commit some of the alleged offences.

The organizer is named as Guy Renaud of Donnacona, who himself is charged with 14 counts of conspiring with Mr. Laroche.

The alleged offences were said by the charge to have been committed between Jan. 1, 1961, and Nov. 30, 1965.

Of the counts in the main charge against Mr. Laroche, 14 involve benefits to himself, two involve benefits to others

The charges were filed before Sessions Judge Alphonse Garon, who then summoned the two charged men to appear before him by Jan. 29.

The complaint against Mr. Laroche was signed by Omer Auclair, special investigator for the Quebec Provincial Police.

The businessmen from whom the money is alleged to have been exacted were involved in farm - improvement projects at the time.

Dief Says He'll Try To Dump Government

OTTAWA (CP)—Three opposition party leaders slammed the government Tuesday for making no mention of pension increases in the Three Speech and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker promised an early non-confidence motion on the issue.

All leaders criticized the speech for containing little but leftovers from the last Parliament. They used adjectives such as puny, pallid, pedestrian and ineffective to denounce it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a non-confidence motion is the only course open to the opposition to pressure the government into increasing old age pensions to $100 a month from $75, even if this means defeat of the government in the Commons.

He criticized other leaders, particularly T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party, for trying to find some way other than a non-confidence motion to express their views on pensions.

Defeat of the government wouldn't necessarily mean another election, he said. Prime Minister Pearson could recommend to Governor-General Vanier that another party be allowed to try to form a government.

Mr. Douglas said last weekend only certain votes should be taken as non-confidence in the government. He wants pensions increased but not at the cost of another election.

INCREASE NEEDED

Mr. Douglas and Creditiste Leader Caouette also criticized the speech for containing no pension increases. Mr. Caouette said he was disappointed there was no reference about any increase in family allowance payments.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the only new measures in the speech were increased aid to universities, which his party would support, and the reorganization of government departments.

"One wonders what the government has been doing in the 200 days since Parliament sat," he said. "It was a pallid photostat of the last speech which couldn't be implemented because the government decided to go to the country."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the brief reference in the speech to the government's desire to find a way to amend the British North America Act in Canada indicated that the Fulton-Favreau formula "is as dead as a dodo."

The formula to move the BNA act to Canada and set up an amending procedure was approved by nine provinces, but Quebec decided against approving it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the speech gave no indication that the government is going to discontinue its "give-away attitude" on national unity questions. "The weakening of the

IN TAIPEI

'Explosive' Fire Claims Hostesses

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI) — Fire raced today through a five-storey building housing a theatre and nightclub and trapped 50 cabaret girls on the upper floor with heavy loss of life.

Some of the victims died in an elevator which jammed as they tried to flee.

Police said they had found the bodies of 25 of the girls on the fourth and fifth floors and that a number of others were still trapped on the elevator jammed between the third and fourth floors by a power failure. A fireman and a restaurant employee also were killed.

The fire broke out around 1:50 p.m. in the kitchen of a restaurant in the building which houses a theatre, restaurant, and the Metropolitan Club where the hostesses worked. The girls were on the top floor to collect Chinese New Year bonuses when disaster struck.

Mrs. Virginia Felix told RCMP she awoke to find the house filled with smoke and flames and managed to escape with a three-year-old daughter, Diedre Lynn. They jumped out a window.

Sanctions Studied Against Students

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec education department is studying the possibility of imposing sanctions on thousands of technical and vocational school students across the province who have been "striking" since Monday in protest against an extension of their school year.

Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie mentioned some of the possibilities at a press conference Tuesday.

He said the government could withdraw the $10-a-month allowance paid to parents of 16- and 17-year-old students and suspend payments of the second half of 1965-66 bursaries and student loans.

The education minister said he was "scandalized" by the fact that some teachers had encouraged the student walkout, and reproached parents "for having failed to live up to their responsibilities."

He took a firm stand on the new school calendar, some 2½ weeks longer than last year's, which provoked the student "strike."

There was no question of any change. "The new school calendar is essential for academic and pedagogical reasons." It was adopted after consultation with teachers' groups representing schools across the province.

GRITS SHOW LITTLE ZEST FOR MEETING BASIC ISSUES

By PETER NEWMAN

OTTAWA—The Speech from the Throne which opened Canada's 27th Parliament may not do much to illuminate the nation's future, but it does cast a pale clear light on the present state of the Liberal Party of Canada.

The party portrait drawn by this declaration of parliamentary plans is that of a group of well-intentioned men with little zest for dealing head-on with Canada's basic problems.

The throne speech reflects accurately the changes which have taken place within the Liberal party since it was first elected to office nearly three years ago.

Lester Pearson opened his stewardship then with the ringing declaration that his time in office would "excite the daring, test the strong and give new promise to the timid."

That, too, was an accurate reflection of the mood of the moment; everything seemed possible in that faraway time of brave beginnings.

The Liberal party was then firmly in the control of its left-wing activists and despite the many pratfalls that followed.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada topped its 1965 fund-raising goal by $100,250, Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova said in her year-end review today.

The USC executive director announced that contributions of $500,250 swept aside the goal of $400,000 Friendship Dollars for the needy in India, Korea, Hong Kong, Greece, France, the Gaza Strip, Syria, Italy and Austria.

The agency collected a grand total of $966,250 in 1965.

THREE-YEAR-OLD FOUND ON ABANDONED FARM

Town Will Bury 'Little Boy Blue'

MONROE, Mich. (UPI)—Unless someone can identify him, a three-year-old boy will be buried in this southern Michigan town later this week known only as "Little Boy Blue."

The boy, clad in a blue quilted ski jacket, red shirt, black corduroy pants and blue socks, was found by a rabbit hunter in an outhouse on an abandoned farm near here.

An autopsy revealed the lad had been beaten to death.

Authorities said their best clue collapsed today. A label inside the boy's shirt was found to be that of a brand carried by three discount chains with stores throughout the nation.

Detective Sgt. Patrick Lyons of the Michigan State Police said laboratory tests on the boy's clothing failed to disclose anything of help in the investigation.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation assigned an agent to help local authorities in the investigation.

No one has claimed the boy. His description? Brown hair, 35 inches tall, 25 pounds with that sturdy, well-fed look.

Police theorize no one has claimed the boy because those who know him may be his murderer or murderers. They believe either the parents slew the boy or they are dead themselves.

Shortly after the body was discovered last Saturday, police sent out a nationwide alert for an identification of the lad.

A color photograph of the boy's clothing and its description have been distributed to other law enforcement agencies, so far to no avail.

Monroe County Sheriff Charles G. Harrington said of the mystery child, "he was neat, but his clothes were dirty. He didn't look like he came from a first class family. The clothes were fairly good, but dirty."

When the body was found the jacket was zippered and the hood was on the boy's head—an indication, authorities said, the boy had been well cared for and well trained. Also it was an indication, they said, the lad was not struggling at the time of his death.

By the middle of this week only two divorced fathers had come to take a look at the boy on the possibility he may have been a son. He wasn't.

Meantime, the little body was being held at Mercy Hospital.

Monroe County officials will bury the body in a few days unless a loved one shows to give "Little Boy Blue" a proper burial.

VANCOUVER—Mike Chernoff, 39, heeded a half-heard siren song early Tuesday morning—and spent the following 10 hours trapped on the roof of a bank.

Chernoff, former resident of Grand Forks, B.C., said he saw several persons enter the building just after midnight Monday and thought there was a party in progress.

"I followed them in because I had nothing else to do. Then I heard music so I tried to track it down."

He stepped through a door which closed and locked behind him, leaving him stranded on the roof, seven storeys up.

Ten hours later he dropped a rock, with a note attached near two girls leaving the building on a coffee break.

The sounds which lured Chernoff came from the building's piped-music system.

LOS ANGELES—"When I die I want artificial flowers, jitterbug music and a bottle of vodka at my grave."

That quip to a bartender—made only in a spirit of fun last Saturday—proved an exit line for Mark Twain's last direct descendant, Nina Clemens Gabrilowitsch, 55.

The sprightly granddaughter of the author of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn novels was found dead Saturday, the coroner's office reported Tuesday. She was the daughter of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony at the time of his death in 1936.

Her room contained several bottles of pills and alcohol, police said.

She called herself Nina Clemens, joking that she couldn't pronounce Gabrilowitsch (Gab-ril-o'-vitch).

Miss Clemens lived on, and generally spent, a $1,500 monthly allowance from a $2,000,000 share of Twain's estate.

The firm, George Wimpey and Company, has about 200 men building a fuel plant at Doncaster. It discovered that on Sundays they were taking more than their usual half-hour lunch break in a nearby miners' club.

A company spokesman said:

"It was no good closing our eyes to the situation or sacking good workers who return late. So we arranged that they could have an extra half-hour added to their lunch break—without pay."

NEW YORK—Verbosity lead to the arrest here of a suspected bank robber,

His note said: "This is a stickup. Do just like this note says and you will be all right. Put 10s, 20s and 50s in a bag and don't push no buttons. I have someone at your house and if I don't get away he will know what to do and you will get hurt. Also we have been keeping an eye on you for the past two weeks. So hurry."

By the time teller John O'Brien finished reading the 68-word note, 12 persons had lined up behind the would-be robber and the guard came over to tell them to move to other wickets.

O'Brien shouted to the guard and he grabbed John Marshall, 36.

Saanich Reconsiders Municipal Handouts

How much can a municipal government give in the form of grants?

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis suggested to the Intermunicipal Committee Tuesday that the end of the line had almost been reached.

"The whole grant picture is causing Saanich council grave concern," he said. "Last year Saanich could not see its way clear to contribute to a specific grant and Victoria picked up the tab. This is passing the buck in the worst way and caused great embarrassment to me."

Looking at requests for grants from Goodwill Enterprises, the Dominion Drama Festival, the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and the Maritime Museum, Reeve Curtis sighed "and this is only the second week in January."

Other bids for grants already before the committee come from baseball and basketball organizations, the Left-Handed Golfers Association and various other community groups.

The committee decided to shelve them all until a special meeting could be called to review the entire grant system and to decide what should be done.

"I'm not just crying wolf," Reeve Curtis said. "I am just expressing concern about the amounts being asked. We need a meeting to bring in a full report on grants.

HOME GARDEN

Plant Now In Dryland Gardens

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

Gardeners in many parts of this general area have soil which drains freely after winter rains. With them even snow is only an unpleasant memory.

Soil which loses water rapidly and does not remain sticky for long, is suitable now for continuing the planting of trees and shrubs halted by the snow and rain.

The advantages of planting now are that the moisture needed for new root formation is in the soil and likely to be for several weeks; and nearly a season is gained by this early start.

Soil which drains quickly also warms quickly under the sun's rays, and no-one who works briskly outdoors on a sunny day even in January can doubt the warmth from the sun already.

Heathers are one of the most delightful groups of plants to add to a garden during winter. They like a sunny, open location, where the winter-blooming varieties may even repay you by attracting the stray hummingbird who has gambled with fate by remaining here.

Shrubs and trees which lose their leaves for winter may still be planted in well drained locations, since the soil can be worked back closely around the roots.

Staking is as necessary as in fall planting.

Plants of the conifer group, sold with a complete rootball of soil, help to give instant effects as do the broadleaved type of everygreen shrub.

The latter also give the double value of flowers in season as well as foliage all the year.

It is no empty promise that gardening is a year around hobby in this general area, since the variation in topography and soils add up to a similar variation in the little climates of the individual gardens.

In many cases, there is no need to wait for spring—plant it now.

Mile From Home, Woman Dies Walking In Cold

DAWSON CREEK (CP)—An attempt to walk a little more than a mile to her home from her husband's stalled truck, resulted in death for Mrs. Wilfred Hackett, 57-year-old resident of the Dawson Creek area.

Police said she was in a truck with her husband when they bogged down in a snow bank. The husband left her in the vehicle and started walking for help. When he returned, she was missing and her body was found later, about ¾ of a mile from their farm home.

Police said she apparently started walking in the 25-degree below weather and became lost in the drifting snow and darkness.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

An extensive high pressure area off the Washington coast continues to dominate the weather over southwestern B.C. Under the influence of this high skies will remain generally clear over the area. A series of weak Pacific disturbances moving toward the Charlottes will give cloudy skies to the north coastal districts with a few showers or showers of mixed rain and snow. In the interior the Arctic air continues to slowly edge southward. It is expected to reach the coastal mountains tonight and stall. Snow flurries will progress southward with the cold air.

INTERMUNICIPAL AIM

Cost-Sharing Probe Urged on Province

A government committee to hear the financing problems of municipalities was requested Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Before formal presentation to the government the request, presented in the form of resolution by Oak Bay, needs the approval of individual municipal governments.

But committee members from Saanich, Victoria, Esquimalt and Central Saanich left no doubt that their sympathy was with the strongly worded resolution worded by Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox.

Noting that provincial and federal governments continuously renegotiate the responsibility of various social programs, the resolution said a "glaring defect in this system is the position of local government."

PROPERTY LOADED

Reeve Cox, absent from Tuesday's meeting, said in the resolution's preamble that local governments are "required to provide (for social programs) out of the real property tax."

He submitted, in modern society this is no longer a reflection of the property owners' ability to pay substantial sums of money for such programs as education, health and hospital construction."

Adding that an objective study of the problem is urgently required in British Columbia, the resolution called for the immediate establishment of a select committee to hear the municipal point of view.

The inter-municipal committee in a unanimous vote agreed that the government should be "earnestly requested . . . to establish during the 1966 session of the legislature a select committee."

It would hear representations from municipalities and municipal organizations on the general question of sharing social legislation programs.

Costs of education, health and hospital construction would get particular attention.

The special committee would recommend to the legislature "a course of action for the immediate and equitable solution of these problems."

HOSPITAL PLAN

Earlier the committee had discussed a proposal by Coun. Frances Elford, Oak Bay, that a meeting of mayors and reeves be called to discuss hospital needs with the hospital planning board.

She said that prior to the recent defeated hospital referendum no meeting were called and the issues were not clear. disagrd.

Reeve Hugh Curtis, Saanich disagreed.

"I think the issues were pretty well understood," he said. "I don't think this was voted on my an uninformed electorate. I think it was voted on by an electorate that took a firm position."

CURTIS IN FAVOR

He, and other municipal leaders, said they could only speak as individuals on Reeve Cox's resolution but they agreed that it was a move to be supported.

"Saanich council will decide whether or not to support the resolution, but I shall certainly do all in my power to persuade them to vote unanimously in its favor," he said.

Mayor A. W. Toone said he would be more than happy to take the resolution to Victoria city council for approval.

After ratification and possible amendment by various municipalities the resolution will be forwarded to the government, if possible prior to the opening of the legislature later this month.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

For as long as I can remember, various elected and self-appointed spokesmen have been urging us to be good Canadians.

This, practically all of us try earnestly to accomplish. We have struggled to think nationally instead of sectionally. We have asked ourselves, even on quite minor questions, "Will this be good for Canada?"

It hasn't been easy, especially in the periods when Quebec was fussing and fuming her loudest, and those damnation back-Easters were stubbornly refusing to recognize the existence of anyone west of Lakehead except at income tax time.

In spite of these irritations, and ignoring minor backslidings, we have worked hard at the project, and would be in a fair way to succeeding if it weren't for one major obstacle.

This is the doubtful example provided for us by the very people who should be showing us how to become bona fide, certified, corrosion-proof, rust-resistant, good Canadians.

★

Mind, I'm not charging that Mr. Pearson, Mr. Diefenbaker and those who sit with them in our Parliament are bad Canadians.

What I suggest is that they have let our party system of politics get badly out of hand. Canadianism as I once understood it seems to be wandering lost in the fog generated by the clash of rampant Liberalism against militant Conservatism.

This was particularly evident during the last federal session.

Think back, if you will. What and how much was accomplished for Canada during those weeks and months during which the ship of state pitched, yawed and, rolled in the tide-rips of party controversy?

Some legislation, to be sure. But not nearly enough; and the result, as indicated by Tuesday's speech from the throne, is a work pileup that Parliament will be tripping over and picking its way around for a long time to come.

I'm all for reasoned and sensible opposition, and our parliamentary system couldn't function without it. However, when it becomes a mere frivolous attempt to flim-flam the taxpayer into believing that your Conservative — or Liberal — is the Almighty's only honest man, reason goes out the window.

★

As a Canadian who is fed up with putting his shoulder to the national wheel, ony to find some joker heaving from the opposite direction, I think that for the good of our mutual country, it's high time we scaled these runaway party animosities and loyalties down to manageable size.

A hard-fought political campaign is a very fine thing, but must it continue as guerrilla warfare through an entire session as it did last year?

Well, another session is now upon us, its opening pomp and circumstance relegated to yesterday, the work waiting to be done.

The list of tasks is long and complex, and the hopes, fortunes and futures of Canadians from one coast to the other ride on the way this newly-elected Parliament handles its duties.

Its members can throw a numbing block into education, or legislate measures which will help underwrite the expanded universities and vocational schools we so badly need.

They can work wisely for the farmer both east and west, or hang him up with his needs unresolved.

They can do much toward regaining the respect of our provinces for the central authority, and they can help check the trend toward regional blocs and principalities which stands as our gravest internal threat.

But none of these needs is likely to be met as it should be, if party warfare continues to hamper and even hamstring Parliament at work.

Victorians Protest Hiring of U.S. Firm

By JIM HUME

Times' City Hall Reporter

With its decision to hire an American company less than 24 hours old, the Greater Victoria Confederation-Centennial Committee is already feeling the lash of public criticism.

The committee decided on Tuesday to hire the John B. Rogers Producing Company of Ohio to stage the main events of 1967 and to act as consultant-co-ordinator of the events of 1966. (See Page 6.)

Committee members did not expect the decision to be popular. And they were correct.

Local entertainer Fred Usher this morning criticized the lack of appreciation for local talent.

"The Rogers company did a nice job in 1962," Mr. Usher said. "They put on a good pageant. But the underestimating of local talent in this city is shocking.

PEOPLE ASTOUNDED

"Under Peter Mannering the Lights Up revue at McPherson Playhouse astounded people. They just didn't know we had that kind of talent in the city.

"As to the 1967 pagent and other activities, we could have done it locally and successfully."

Mrs. Nel Horth, Deep Cove, past president of the Peninsula Players, echoed Mr. Usher's thinking.

"With all the local talent available their is no earthly reason why we couldn't handle the matter ourselves," she said.

"After all it is our centennial and there was no need at all to go out of the city to find someone to organize it for us.

LOCAL TALENT

"What it amounts to is that an outside organization has been called in to run the show. Undoubtedly they will use local talent in their productions after they have picked the brains of local organizations which could have put on the entire thing in the first place."

L. J. Wallace, provincial chairman of Confederation-Centennial projects, said he had no comment on the committee's decision.

"We have 360 committees in the province, each one with complete autonomy. We do not comment either way on their decisions," he said.

Defeated bidder for the 1966 contract George A. Hamilton who claims to be the only Canadian in the pageant and big show organizational business, had a different criticism.

GRAVE MISTAKE

"The Rogers company is good," he said. "Very good in pageants. But your committee has made a grave mistake in making 1967 the big year instead of 1966.

"In 1967 British Columbia will be competing with all of Canada for the tourist dollar. In 1966 it has the stage to itself.

Vancouver is planning a huge pageant in 1967. If it goes ahead Victoria and the Rogers Company are going to find it a hard act to follow."

Peter Mannering took the rejection of the Bastion Theatre Studio philosophically but with disappointment.

"It is an embarrassment to me that they don't believe productions like this can be done by Canadians," he said.

"It would appear that Canadian talent will never be permitted to initiate productions.

STRATFORD TOO

"Victoria isn't alone in this. At Stratford, Ontario, the entire thing was set up, sets designed, plays directed by English people.

"The talent is here in Canada. It could have been done, if not by us then by other Canadians.

"This is one time, a Canadian centennial project, when it should be done by Canadians."

Mr. Mannering said the Bastion group would be more than willing to stage its indoor production during 1967 as part of the over-all celebration program.

"We would have no hesitation in staging the proposed indoor production — as long as the people realize that performers have to be paid," he said.

WALTER DODSWORTH
. . . he wasn't there

DECISION MAY CHANGE

Greater Victoria Centennial Society president Walter Dodsworth said today the decision to hire professional organizers for local celebrations is not final.

"I was not at the meeting (Tuesday) but I know there is considerable feeling about this among the people of Greater Victoria.

"As president of the society I would have to put my name to a contract to seal the bargain, and I'm not signing anything without the backing of the intermunicipal committee."

He said intermunicipal representatives will discuss the matter early in February.

Industry Body Urged To 'Reduce Frictions'

The building trade unions in British Columbia today called on the provincial government for the establishment of a human relations committee in the industry.

The recommendation for such a committee, established under the labor department and representing unions and employers, was made in a brief by the B.C. Building and Construction Trades Council.

The council represents all building trades councils in the province, whose affiliated unions represent about 40,000 men.

The brief was presented to Labor Minister Leslie Peterson by a delegation of 12 headed by Al Medley of Vancouver, president of the provincial council.

The standing committee would:

- Consider current problems in the industry generally;
- Anticipate future needs of industry and trades;
- Exchange views on social and economic trends;
- Establish meaningful contact outside collective bargaining;
- Exchange and develop ideas related to manpower, skills and future requirements.

GREATER SCOPE

The committee would be greater in scope than the automation committee set up after the oil industry dispute last fall.

The B.C. Building and Construction Trades Council said a "fuller understanding" may well be achieved of all facets of industrial and trade union problems through such a committee.

Sub-committees could be formed of persons representing related kinds of industry—construction, transportation, logging, manufacturing and so on.

"In the broadest terms such committees could inquire into areas of friction with the view to recommending ameliorative steps," said the brief.

The brief added that the time has come to advance the interests of the industry and union members "by other than the piecemeal, seesaw means heretofore a feature of the labor-management relationship."

REPLY

Much of the brief was taken up with a reply to one presented to the government last month by the Vancouver Construction Association.

The brief said 95 per cent of all mystery pickets are concentrated "on non-union projects with sub-standard working conditions and contractors, paying sub-standard wages. These mystery pickets are for organizational purposes."

The unions also attacked the construction association for saying B.C. is plagued with costly strikes.

SIX DISPUTES

In 1964, the construction industry lost "a grand total" of 5,462 days in six disputes, or three per cent of the total days lost through strikes.

The total time lost throughout the province due to all strikes in 1964 was 181,784 working days, or 0.147 per cent of the total time worked.

But in the preceding year, just over 1 million working days were lost because of compensable accidents. In 1964 the figure was 1.1 million days.

BUT NO TRACE REPORTED

Search Stepped Up for Youths

Time was running out today for three young Victoria hunters missing since Saturday.

A sea and air hunt was intensified at dawn today as hope faded for the three hunting chums.

They were last seen midnight Saturday when they cast off from Oak Bay Marina in a 12-foot open boat.

Their destination was Chatham Island, two miles offshore. They were to have hunted for brant and returned Sunday night.

But nothing has been seen or heard of them since.

Missing are Dennis Powell, 19, of 1240 Newport; Ronald Hynds, 18, 2428 Dalhousie, and Wade Squire, 17, of 2741 Dewdney.

Said an RCMP marine officer: "The time element is against them. Even if they made it to an island it would be pretty grim."

Around 10 a.m., a Dakota spotter aircraft from RCAF Comox, radioed a report of wreckage spotted north of Discovery Passage.

NO CONNECTION

The pleasure craft Sea Deuce from Oak Bay Marina was sent to investigate, only to report that the wreckage was a piece of plywood.

It had no connection with the missing boat.

Also spotting over the area was the department of transport helicopter from Pat Bay.

Later in the morning, civil defence chartered three private aircraft from Pat Bay and sent them up.

Three local flyers, Joe Howroyd, Charles Watts and Roy Parrett, manned the planes.

Other private planes, along with a navy tracker aircraft from Pat Bay, were already combing an extensive area from south of San Juan Island to the northern Gulf Islands.

An armada of vessels, large and small, plied between the myriad of tiny islands, any one of which the boys could have been washed up on.

RCMP are working on the theory that the boys were washed north.

If his theory is right, the boys would end up in the Discovery Passage area.

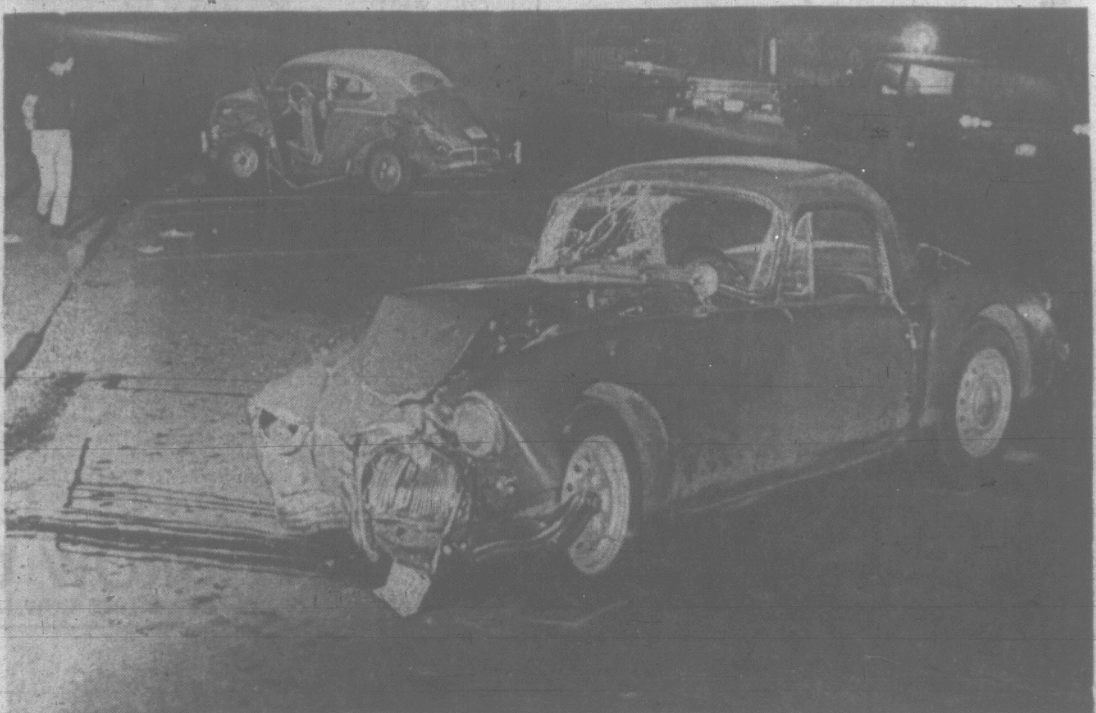
The police patrol boats Victoria and Sidney used their skiffs to search close inshore.

Meanwhile, the coast guard vessels Racer and Ready continued a search of the area.

MORE BOATS

They were aided by another government vessel, The Snipe, and several private pleasure craft.

If nothing turns up today, the search will go on Thursday.



FATAL ACCIDENT occurred shortly after midnight at this intersection of Lampson and Craigflower. Man driving small car in rear was killed when he was thrown out of car after collision with sports roadster at front, Esquimalt police said. (Jim Ryan Photo.)

Midnight Collision Kills Shift Worker

A 54-year-old Saanich man was killed just after midnight as he drove home from work.

Bror Nels Granewall, owner of Berryland Farm on Patricia Bay Highway, was killed in a two-car collision at the intersection of Lampson and Craigflower.

He was on his way home to 5630 Alderley Road after working the 4-to-12 shift as a rigger at Yarrows Shipyard.

Driver of the other vehicle involved was William G. Owen, 28, of 336 Newport, an unemployed logger.

The accident occurred about five minutes after midnight. Mr. Granewall was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital by Esquimalt police and was pronounced dead at 12:25 a.m. today.

AT INTERSECTION

Esquimalt police said the accident occurred when Mr. Granewall's car, a light imported model, pulled out of Lampson on to Craigflower.

The car driven by Mr. Owen was proceeding east on Craigflower and the collision between the two vehicles took place in the middle of the intersection.

The Granewall vehicle was pushed 37 feet east on Craigflower and came to rest at the side of the road. Mr. Granewall was thrown out and his body was found on the sidewalk.

The Granewall car was destroyed in the collision and police said Owen's car is probably a total write-off. Traffic was light at the time of the collision.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has ordered a post mortem examination. Date for an inquest will be set later.

FROM SWEDEN

Mr. Granewall came to Canada from Sweden 15 years ago. He operated Berryland Farm, a place familiar to many Victoria people who have driven out to the farm's roadside stall in past years to buy fruit and vegetables.

The dead man is survived by his wife and five children. He worked during winter months in recent years at Yarrows.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later after the inquest date has been set.

Court Hearing

Preliminary hearing has been set for Feb. 7 for Larry Alan Preston, charged in connection with a break-in at Standard Furniture last fall.

Preston elected trial by judge and jury in a hearing in central court Tuesday afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please inform me as to how Canada got its name and by whom it was named? A.B.M.

A. The term derived from the Huron-Iroquois work "kanata" meaning village or community.

First white man to use it was Jacques Cartier in a narrative written in 1534.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

CITY MAN DIES IN FALL

A 47-year-old Victoria man was killed in an industrial accident Tuesday at a pulp and paper mill at Duncan Bay, two miles north of Campbell River.

Frank Harold Phipps, 3895 Cedar Hill Road, died of multiple head injuries about one and a half hours after he fell 18 feet to a concrete floor at the site of an addition to the Elk Falls Ltd. mill. The company is a Crown Zellerbach subsidiary.

A company spokesman said Mr. Phipps had only been on the job seven days.

"He apparently tripped, slipped or fell through a guard rail down the shaft. None of the other 300 workmen actually saw him fall."

Mr. Phipps was an employee of Mathias and Nicol Installations Ltd., a Vancouver company which has been doing contract work at the pulp mill site for just over a year.

He is survived by the widow and one son.

AFTER YEAR-LONG NEGOTIATIONS

Mill Workers Get Pay Hike

More than 5,000 skilled workers in the coast lumber industry will receive wage increases following rate revision agreements in Vancouver today.

The figures will apply to a number of Victoria mill workers, but an exact figure was not available this morning.

Negotiations have continued for the past year between Forest Industrial Relations, representing 135 companies, and the International Woodworkers of America, with a membership of 25,000 on the coast.

Delays in reaching agreement caused unrest in various parts of the coast. Recently, boom men in Vancouver walked out in protest.

Both FIR and IWA will recommend acceptance to their member companies and union locals.

Fifteen categories in sawmills, including boom men and first aid attendants, plus six categories in logging are involved in the latest increases. Their wages now range from $2.54 to $3.87 an hour.

Earlier, planermen and a number of logging categories were raised.

The latest rate revisions provide increases for skilled categories ranging from 10 cents to 25 cents an hour effective at the beginning of the year.

Mill boom men will gain a flat 10 cents and boat operators 12 cents an hour. A joint study will now be made to revise the job of boom men "in accordance with their job and responsibilities," said the IWA.

Agreement was also reached today on the millwright apprenticeship training program. Upon successful completion of his training, a journeyman millwright will receive a certificate and an additional 21 cents an hour.

Training for the new program will combine on-job tuition plus institutional study.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Bedroom Organizers Of Sturdy Plastic

By Penny Saver

Every girl loves a nice, dainty-looking bedroom. Yet, a girl's bedroom is sometimes the hardest room in the house to keep that way. The dresser, in particular, seems to be strewn with lipstick tubes by the dozen, hair spray dispensers, hand lotions, perfumes, and heaven knows what else. One day, the room can look tidy and neat, but when daughter comes home again, pressed for time, the room regains its haphazard state. Bathrooms, too, seems to be collectors for bottles and dispensers of every variety.

In one store, I found items that will help remedy this situation. A rectangular, heavy-plastic box, with six holes of one-half inch diameter in the lid, is a lipstick holder. It is available in a soft, powder blue color, with plastic flowers and gold sparkles decorating the surface. The box itself is very attractive, and will serve to keep all the tubes in one place, instead of all over the dresser. This item sells for $2.98.

Safety pins and bobby pins collect everywhere. Pin trays, made of the same plastic as the lipstick holders, sell for $2.98. They're highlighted with the same design.

Another piece to add to this set is a hand lotion dispenser. Complete with the plunger, this sells for the same price.

Lamps are a boon to any room in the house. One unique little lamp in this store is priced at $5.49.

The base of the lamp is a wooden shoe. The shoe is in full sail, depicting, of course, the old legend of the Flying Dutchman. The legendry, spectral ship is believed to be a bad omen when seen by sailors, so the story goes, but the only omen that it can bring to your home is complimentary comments by all your guests.

Interested? Remember, Penny's number is 382-3131. She'll tell you where to shop.

MEAT BALLS IN GINGER SAUCE

One pound minced beef, ¼ cup chopped onion, ¾ cup soft, stale bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 1 egg, beaten; ¼ cup apple juice, 1 can (10-ounce) consomme, ½ cup water, 1 teaspoon brown sugar, ¼ cup raisins, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, ½ cup ginger cookie crumbs.

Mix beef, onion, bread crumbs and seasonings. Add egg and apple juice. Mix lightly, then shape into 30 meat balls, about 1-inch in diameter.

Combine consomme and water in frying pan. Bring to a boil and stir in remaining ingredients to make sauce. Add meat balls and simmer, uncovered over low heat for 10 to 15 minutes.

Turn meat balls, baste with sauce and continue simmering 10 to 15 minutes longer, basting occasionally. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Serve with spaghetti or noodles.

Don't Forget Your Hair During Reconditioning Period

This is the eighth article in which I bring you my Eight-Week Beauty Improvement Plan. Those of you who are working toward a loss of 15 to 20 pounds in eight weeks are now well-launched on that program. Yesterday I urged you to give your complexion, as well as your figure, special attention to see how much you can improve it in eight weeks' time.

Lowman

Today let's think of your hair. I don't have to sell you on the idea that your hair can make all the difference in the world in the way you look. Every woman knows this. It acts as a frame for your face and your hairdo can minimize defects and glamorize lovely features or do just the opposite.

The hair, like the complexion, will benefit by my Beauty Improvement Plan but it too would profit by some special care. The condition of the hair is important to good looks and to successful permanents and hair styling.

If your hair and scalp are very dry, you should give yourself hot oil shampoos, or use one of the splendid conditioners on the market. There are many good ones. If you wish to try hot oil treatments, do it this way. Part the hair all over the head progressively and rub warm olive oil along the parts. When you have covered the entire scalp wrap a damp hot bath towel around your head. Leave it on until it begins to cool and then heat the towel again and repeat several times.

Daily massage is equally important to the oily and the dry scalp because it tends to normalize the action of the little oil glands in the scalp. Why not treat your head to a daily or nightly massage for eight weeks? When you massage your scalp do it in the following manner.

Spread the fingers out on the scalp. Keep the fingers in place as you rotate the hands. Change the position of the hands until you have covered the entire scalp. Press down with the fingers and make the scalp really move. This stirs up circulation and is beautifying to the hair. Add regular complexion and hair care to your regime of calorie counting and exercise for eight weeks! You will be surprised by the change in your appearance.

Supply, Staff, Stockpile Key to Service's Success

TORONTO (CP)—For a women's organization planning to open a thrift shop as a money-raising venture, almost any sort of premises will do—from a room to a store.

More important is a healthy stockpile of merchandise, assurance of a continuing supply, and a staff that can be counted on.

Mrs. John Goldie, chairman of the Toronto Junior League's 40-year-old thrift shop, suggests starting to collect merchandise at least a year in advance of opening.

"Then you need a lot of willing bodies, a place for your shop and advertising at the start. The best place is probably a downtown area where the things you sell are needed. Even though the shop makes a profit, it is a service."

The only display equipment required is a few shelves and racks. Mrs. Goldie recommends selling from bins. For example, a bin with children's underwear priced at 25 cents an item will be quickly sold out.

ESCORTED by acting Prime Minister Nanda, Mrs. Indira Gandhi arrives at Central Hall in New Delhi today where Parliament elected her the new prime minister of India. Mrs. Gandhi, 48, is the daughter of the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru. (AP Wirephoto.)

FIRST IN MAJOR NATION

Woman Chosen To Lead India

Nehru Daughter Prime Minister

NEW DELHI (CP)—Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of the late Jawaharlal Nehru, was elected today to be India's third prime minister, the first woman in modern times to head the government of a major nation.

India's ruling Congress party automatically elevated Mrs. Gandhi to prime minister by electing her leader of its majority faction in Parliament.

Thus to the shoulders of this 48-year-old widow fell India's immense problems — problems which her father wrestled with for 17 years until his death in 1964 and which his successor, Lal Bahadur Shastri, attacked vigorously until a heart attack killed him Jan. 11.

Mrs. Gandhi went to her victory wearing a red rosebud pinned to her shawl, just as her father wore a red rose daily throughout the tumultuous years after independence in 1947.

See Story Page 27

Mrs. Gandhi polled 355 votes to 169 for her only challenger, rightwing leader Morarji Desai. Two votes were invalid.

Cheering erupted in Parliament's central hall when a party official, G. S. Pathak, announced the results of the secret ballot.

As the Nehru family once again took command in India, Mrs. Gandhi moved quickly to heal any damage done to party unity by the hectic political manoeuvring that followed Shastri's death.

'We Need Everybody's Blessing'

"I want your blessing," she told Desai as balloting began.

The stern, 69-year-old Desai replied:

"Who am I to give you blessing? We need everybody's blessing."

Victory for Mrs. Gandhi, who learned politics at her father's side, not only resumed the Nehru era after Shastri's 19-month interval, it also passed the nation's leadership to the second generation of Indian politicians.

Until today, India has been governed by the early freedom fighters who waged Mohandas K. Gandhi's "peace resistance" campaign to gain independence from Britain.

Mrs. Gandhi was part of that movement but played only a minor role. However, the survivors of her father's generation, notably Congress party President Kumaraswami Kamaraj, crushed most opposition to Mrs. Gandhi and thus will continue to have a say—perhaps a strong say—in national affairs.

Mrs. Gandhi is the 20th century's second woman prime minister. The other was Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon, the tiny island nation of 10,000,000 people off the southern tip of India. Elected in 1960, she was defeated in elections early last year.

A new prime minister could hardly face more serious problems than Mrs. Gandhi does.

There is widespread hunger in India and a near famine is expected in the coming months.

The dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir, which has set the two countries at war twice in 17 years, still festers. India's 480,000,000 people are still divided along religious and sectional lines. The national economy is in chaos. Neighboring China is a constant threat.

Gulzari Lal Nanda, sworn in as acting prime minister last Tuesday after Shastri's death in Tashkent, Russia, went to tender his government's resignation to President Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan and inform him of Mrs. Gandhi's election.

The president asked Mrs. Gandhi to form a new government.

Desai pledged his full co-operation to the new prime minister.

Mrs. Gandhi, weeping as she spoke, said in her acceptance speech:

"I am indebted to all members of the party including those who voted for and against me and I solicit their support in the great tasks lying ahead of us.

"Of all the resources we have,

Dief Says He'll Try To Dump Government

OTTAWA (CP)—Three opposition party leaders slammed the government Tuesday for making no mention of pension increases in the throne speech and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker promised an early non-confidence motion on the issue.

All leaders criticized the speech for containing little but leftovers from the last Parliament. They used adjectives such as puny, pallid, pedestrian and ineffective to denounce it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a non-confidence motion is the only course open to the opposition to pressure the government into increasing old age pensions to $100 a month from $75, even if this means defeat of the government in the Commons.

He criticized other leaders, particularly T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party, for trying to find some way other than a non-confidence motion to express their views on pensions.

Defeat of the government wouldn't necessarily mean another election, he said. Prime Minister Pearson could recommend to Governor-General Vanier that another party be allowed to try to form a government.

Mr. Douglas said last weekend only certain votes should be taken as non-confidence in the government. He wants pensions increased but not at the cost of another election.

INCREASE NEEDED

Mr. Douglas and Creditiste Leader Caouette also criticized the speech for containing no pension increases. Mr. Caouette said he was disappointed there was no reference about any increase in family allowance payments.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the only new measures in the speech were increased aid to universities, which his party would support, and the reorganization of government departments.

"One wonders what the government has been doing in the 200 days since Parliament sat," he said. "It was a pallid photostat of the last speech which couldn't be implemented because the government decided to go to the country."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the brief reference in the speech to the government's desire to find a way to amend the British North America Act in Canada indicated that the Fulton-Favreau formula "is as dead as a dodo."

The formula to move the BNA act to Canada and set up an amending procedure was approved by nine provinces, but Quebec decided against approving it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the speech gave no indication that the government is going to discontinue its "give-away attitude" on national unity questions. "The weakening of the

Sanctions Studied Against Students

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec education department is studying the possibility of imposing sanctions on thousands of technical and vocational school students across the province who have been "striking" since Monday in protest against an extension of their school year.

Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie mentioned some of the possibilities at a press conference Tuesday.

He said the government could withdraw the $10-a-month allowance paid to parents of 16- and 17-year-old students and suspend payments of the second half of 1965-66 bursaries and student loans.

The education minister said he was "scandalized" by the fact that some teachers had encouraged the student walkout, and reproached parents "for having failed to live up to their responsibilities."

He took a firm stand on the new school calendar, some 2½ weeks longer than last year's, which provoked the student "strike."

There was no question of any change. "The new school calendar is essential for academic and pedagogical reasons." It was adopted after consultation with teachers' groups representing schools across the province.

GRITS SHOW LITTLE ZEST FOR MEETING BASIC ISSUES

By PETER NEWMAN

OTTAWA—The Speech from the Throne which opened Canada's 27th Parliament may not do much to illuminate the nation's future, but it does cast a pale clear light on the present state of the Liberal Party of Canada.

The party portrait drawn by this declaration of parliamentary plans is that of a group of well-intentioned men with little zest for dealing head-on with Canada's basic problems.

The throne speech reflects accurately the changes which have taken place within the Liberal party since it was first elected to office nearly three years ago.

Lester Pearson opened his stewardship then with the ringing declaration that his time in office would "excite the daring, test the strong and give new promise to the timid."

That, too, was an accurate reflection of the mood of the moment; everything seemed possible in that faraway time of brave beginnings.

The Liberal party was then firmly in the control of its left-wing activists and despite the many pratfalls that followed,

'Explosive' Fire Claims Hostesses

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI) — Fire raced today through a five-storey building housing a theatre and nightclub and trapped 50 cabaret girls on the upper floor with heavy loss of life.

Some of the victims died in an elevator which jammed as they tried to flee.

Police said they had found the bodies of 25 of the girls on the fourth and fifth floors and that a number of others were still trapped on the elevator jammed between the third and fourth floors by a power failure. A fireman and a restaurant employee also were killed.

The fire broke out around 1:50 p.m. in the kitchen of a restaurant in the building which houses a theatre, restaurant, and the Metropolitan Club where the hostesses worked. The girls were on the top floor to collect Chinese New Year bonuses when disaster struck.

500 ESCAPE

About 500 persons in the Hsin Sheng Theatre, one of the largest in Nationalist China, escaped to the streets. Many girls were seen fleeing the building with their hair burning or burned off. Some were injured when they leaped from upper windows.

The agency collected a grand total of $966,250 in 1965.

Counter Spy Chief Replaced

(See story Page 3)

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government today replaced its counter-espionage chief following the affair of a kidnapped Moroccan politician.

The government charged the abduction of Mehdi Ben Barka, a left wing Moroccan opposition leader, on a Paris street in October was organized abroad with the complicity of certain French secret agents.

The announcement was made in a communique issued after a cabinet meeting presided over by President de Gaulle.

The communique said Ben Barka's abduction was "a criminal enterprise organized from abroad and which benefited from certain connivances on the part of French secret agents or police."

Following the cabinet meeting, a government spokesman said Gen. Paul Jacquier was being replaced as head of the counter-espionage service.

Gen. Eugene Guibaud, a career officer who once served as military intelligence chief in Saigon, was named to replace Jacquier.

The spokesman also said the counter-espionage service, formerly attached to the office of the prime minister, now will be placed directly under the armed forces minister.

One member of the counter-espionage service, Antoine Lopez, is under arrest and has been charged in connection with Ben Barka's disappearance.

Lopez' immediate superior in the counter-espionage service, Marcel Leroy, was suspended Tuesday.

Ben Barka, an exiled leftist Moroccan leader, was kidnapped Oct. 29 and has not been seen since then.

KILLED BY BULLET

A Paris gangster, Georges Figon, who had said he saw Ben Barka murdered — was found dead with a bullet in his head in an apartment on the fashionable Avenue de Wagram Monday after police went there to arrest him.

Justice department officials said Figon killed himself.

QUEBEC (CP) — Marcellin Laroche, 46, Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly for Portneuf, was charged today with accepting benefits from a person dealing with the provincial government.

Mr. Laroche was charged with 16 counts involving a total sum of $15,260.

He was charged under section 102 of the Criminal Code with having exacted from businessmen in the District of Portneuf returns for himself, and also for other persons.

The charge says the businessmen had received provincial government contracts.

Mr. Laroche was first elected to the assembly in 1960. He lives in Pont Rouge.

Section 102 says:

"Everyone commits an offence who directly or indirectly, being an official or employee of the government, demands, accepts or offers or agrees to accept from a person who has dealings with the government a commission, reward, advantage or benefit of any kind . . ."

ORGANIZER INVOLVED

Mr. Laroche also is charged with having conspired with a Portneuf Liberal organizer to commit some of the alleged offences.

The organizer is named as Guy Renaud of Donnacona, who himself is charged with 14 counts of conspiring with Mr. Laroche.

The alleged offences were said by the charge to have been committed between Jan. 1, 1961, and Nov. 30, 1965.

Of the counts in the main charge against Mr. Laroche, 14 involve benefits to himself, two involve benefits to others.

The charges were filed before Sessions Judge Alphonse Garon, who then summoned the two charged men to appear before him by Jan. 29.

The complaint against Mr. Laroche was signed by Omer Auclair, special investigator for the Quebec Provincial Police.

The businessmen from whom the money is alleged to have been exacted were involved in farm-improvement projects at the time.

THREE-YEAR-OLD BEATEN TO DEATH

Town Will Bury 'Little Boy Blue'

MONROE, Mich. (UPI)—Unless someone can identify him, a three-year-old boy will be buried in this southern Michigan town later this week known only as "Little Boy Blue."

The boy, clad in a blue quilted ski jacket, red shirt, black corduroy pants and blue socks, was found by a rabbit hunter in an outhouse on an abandoned farm near here.

An autopsy revealed the lad had been beaten to death.

Authorities said their best clue collapsed today. A label inside the boy's shirt was found to be that of a brand carried by three discount chains with stores throughout the nation.

Detective Sgt. Patrick Lyons of the Michigan State Police said laboratory tests on the boy's clothing failed to disclose anything of help in the investigation.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation assigned an agent to help local authorities in the investigation.

No one has claimed the boy. His description: Brown hair, 35 inches tall, 25 pounds with that sturdy, well-fed look.

Police theorize no one has claimed the boy because those who know him may be his murderer or murderers. They believe either the parents slew the boy or they are dead themselves.

Shortly after the body was discovered last Saturday, police sent out a nationwide alert for an identification of the lad.

A color photograph of the boy's clothing and its description have been distributed to other law enforcement agencies, so far to no avail.

Monroe County Sheriff Charles G. Harrington said of the mystery child, "he was neat, but his clothes were dirty. He didn't look like he came from a first class family. The clothes were fairly good, but dirty."

When the body was found the jacket was zippered and the hood was on the boy's head—an indication, authorities said, the boy had been well cared for and well trained. Also it was an indication, they said, the lad was not struggling at the time of his death.

By the middle of this week only two divorced fathers had come to take a look at the boy on the possibility he may have been a son. He wasn't.

Meantime, the little body was being held at Mercy Hospital.

Monroe County officials will bury the body in a few days unless a loved one shows to give "Little Boy Blue" a proper burial.

VANCOUVER—Mike Chernoff, 39, heeded a half-heard siren song early Tuesday morning—and spent the following 10 hours trapped on the roof of a bank.

Chernoff, former resident of Grand Forks, B.C., said he saw several persons enter the building just after midnight Monday and thought there was a party in progress.

"I followed them in because I had nothing else to do. Then I heard music so I tried to track it down."

He stepped through a door which closed and locked behind him, leaving him stranded on the roof, seven storeys up.

Ten hours later he dropped a rock, with a note attached near two girls leaving the building on a coffee break.

The sounds which lured Chernoff came from the building's piped-music system.

HOBART, Australia—The mayor of Launceston, Tasmania, has issued an invitation to critics of the city's public toilets to have lunch with him and his family in any of the public conveniences.

LOS ANGELES—"When I die I want artificial flowers, jitterbug music and a bottle of vodka at my grave."

That quip to a bartender—made only in a spirit of fun last Saturday—proved an exit line for Mark Twain's last direct descendant, Nina Clemens Gabrilowitsch, 55.

The sprightly granddaughter of the author of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn novels was found dead Saturday, the coroner's office reported Tuesday. She was the daughter of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony at the time of his death in 1936.

Her room contained several bottles of pills and alcohol, police said.

She called herself Nina Clemens, joking that she couldn't pronounce Gabrilowitsch (Gab-ril-o'-vitch).

Miss Clemens lived on, and generally spent, a $1,500 monthly allowance from a $2,000,000 share of Twain's estate.

DENVER — A wedding night bottle of champagne ruined marriage for Myrna and Arthur Dussart.

District Judge Saul Pinchick granted Dussart an annulment because he said his bride drank too much on their wedding night.

"She drank too much champagne and got real sick," Dussart said. "The next day at noon she just left. I'm afraid I could never trust her again."

BANGKOK, Thailand — Police reported Sunday a school headmaster shot and killed his third wife because she failed to call him for supper. Police said Charoon Nakvachara, 49, also shot and killed his two previous wives but was acquitted after investigations.

DONCASTER, England—One of Britain's biggest construction firms is giving some of its men time off without pay to watch strip-teasers.

The firm, George Wimpey and Company, has about 200 men building a fuel plant at Doncaster. It discovered that on Sundays they were taking more than their usual half-hour lunch break in a nearby miners' club.

A company spokesman said:

"It was no good closing our eyes to the situation or sacking good workers who return late. So we arranged that they could have an extra half-hour added to their lunch break—without pay."

NEW YORK—Verbosity lead to the arrest here of a suspected bank robber.

His note said: "This is a stickup. Do just like this note says and you will be all right. Put 10s, 20s and 50s in a bag and don't push no buttons. I have someone at your house and if I don't get away he will know what to do and you will get hurt. Also we have been keeping an eye on you for the past two weeks. So hurry."

By the time teller John O'Brien finished reading the 68-word note, 12 persons had lined up behind the would-be robber and the guard came over to tell them to move to other wickets.

O'Brien shouted to the guard and he grabbed John Marshall, 36.

Saanich Reconsiders Municipal Handouts

How much can a municipal government give in the form of grants?

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis suggested to the Intermunicipal Committee Tuesday that the end of the line had almost been reached.

"The whole grant picture is causing Saanich council grave concern," he said. "Last year Saanich could not see its way clear to contribute to a specific grant and Victoria picked up the tab. This is passing the buck in the worst way and caused great embarrassment to me."

Looking at requests for grants from Goodwill Enterprises, the Dominion Drama Festival, the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and the Maritime Museum, Reeve Curtis sighed "and this is only the second week in January."

Other bids for grants already before the committee come from baseball and basketball organizations, the Left-Handed Golfers Association and various other community groups.

The committee decided to shelve them all until a special meeting could be called to review the entire grant system and to decide what should be done.

"I'm not just crying wolf," Reeve Curtis said. "I am just expressing concern about the amounts being asked. We need a meeting to bring in a full report on grants.

5,000 Quit Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The number of refugees airlifted from Cuba to the United States since Dec. 1 has passed 5,000. With 160 arriving Monday, the total reached 1,257 men, 2,265 women and 1,562 children. Meanwhile, six men including some of military age ineligible for the airlift fled Cuba in a 23-foot boat. They reached Key Sal, north of Cuba, and were brought here by the U.S. Coast Guard.

HOME GARDEN

Plant Now In Dryland Gardens

By HILDA BEASTALL

Gardeners in many parts of this general area have soil which drains freely after winter rains. With them even snow is only an unpleasant memory.

Hilda

Soil which loses water rapidly and does not remain sticky for long, is suitable now for continuing the planting of trees and shrubs halted by the snow and rain.

The advantages of planting now are that the moisture needed for new root formation is in the soil and likely to be for several weeks; and nearly a season is gained by this early start.

Soil which drains quickly also warms quickly under the sun's rays, and no-one who works briskly outdoors on a sunny day even in January can doubt the warmth from the sun already.

Heathers are one of the most delightful groups of plants to add to a garden during winter. They like a sunny, open location, where the winter-blooming varieties may even repay you by attracting the stray hummingbird who has gambled with fate by remaining here.

Shrubs and trees which lose their leaves for winter may still be planted in well drained locations, since the soil can be worked back closely around the roots.

Staking is as necessary as in fall planting.

Plants of the conifer group, sold with a complete rootball of soil, help to give instant effects as do the broadleaved type of everygreen shrub.

The latter also give the double value of flowers in season as well as foliage all the year.

It is no empty promise that gardening is a year around hobby in this general area, since the variation in topography and soils add up to a similar variation in the little climates of the individual gardens.

In many cases, there is no need to wait for spring—plant it now.

Mile From Home, Woman Dies Walking In Cold

DAWSON CREEK (CP)—An attempt to walk a little more than a mile to her home from her husband's stalled truck, resulted in death for Mrs. Wilfred Hackett, 57-year-old resident of the Dawson Creek area.

Police said she was in a truck with her husband, when they bogged down in a snow bank. The husband left her in the vehicle and started walking for help. When he returned, she was missing and her body was found later, about ¾ of a mile from their farm home.

Police said she apparently started walking in the 25-degree below weather and became lost in the drifting snow and darkness.

INTERMUNICIPAL AIM

Cost-Sharing Probe Urged on Province

A government committee to hear the financing problems of municipalities was requested Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Before formal presentation to the government the request, presented in the form of resolution by Oak Bay, needs the approval of individual municipal governments.

But committee members from Saanich, Victoria, Esquimalt and Central Saanich left no doubt that their sympathy was with the strongly worded resolution worded by Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox.

Noting that provincial and federal governments continuously renegotiate the responsibility of various social programs, the resolution said a "glaring defect in this system is the position of local government."

PROPERTY LOADED

Reeve Cox, absent from Tuesday's meeting, said in the resolution's preamble that local governments are "required to provide (for social programs) out of the real property tax."

He submitted, in modern society this is no longer a reflection of the property owners' ability to pay substantial sums of money for such programs as education, health and hospital construction."

Adding that an objective study of the problem is urgently required in British Columbia, the resolution called for the immediate establishment of a select committee to hear the municipal point of view.

The inter-municipal committee in a unanimous vote agreed that the government should be "earnestly requested . . . to establish during the 1966 session of the legislature a select committee."

It would hear representations from municipalities and municipal organizations on the general question of sharing social legislation programs.

Costs of education, health and hospital construction would get particular attention.

The special committee would recommend to the legislature "a course of action for the immediate and equitable solution of these problems."

HOSPITAL PLAN

Earlier the committee had discussed a proposal by Coun. Frances Elford, Oak Bay, that a meeting of mayors and reeves be called to discuss hospital needs with the hospital planning board.

She said that prior to the recent defeated hospital referendum no meeting were called and the issues were not clear. disagrd.

Reeve Hugh Curtis, Saanich disagreed.

"I think the issues were pretty well understood," he said. "I don't think this was voted on my an uninformed electorate. I think it was voted on by an electorate that took a firm position."

CURTIS IN FAVOR

He, and other municipal leaders, said they could only speak as individuals on Reeve Cox's resolution but they agreed that it was a move to be supported.

"Saanich council will decide whether or not to support the resolution, but I shall certainly do all in my power to persuade them to vote unanimously in its favor," he said.

Mayor A. W. Toone said he would be more than happy to take the resolution to Victoria city council for approval.

After ratification and possible amendment by various municipalities the resolution will be forwarded to the government, if possible prior to the opening of the legislature later this month.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

An extensive high pressure area off the Washington coast continues to dominate the weather over southwestern B.C. Under the influence of this high skies will remain generally clear over the area. In the interior the Arctic air continues to slowly edge southward. It is expected to reach the coastal mountains tonight and stall. Snow flurries will progress southward with the cold air.

Arthur Mayse

For as long as I can remember, various elected and self-appointed spokesmen have been urging us to be good Canadians.

This, practically all of us try earnestly to accomplish. We have struggled to think nationally instead of sectionally. We have asked ourselves, even on quite minor questions, "Will this be good for Canada?"

It hasn't been easy, especially in the periods when Quebec was fussing and fuming her loudest, and those damnation back-Easters were stubbornly refusing to recognize the existence of anyone west of Lakehead except at income tax time.

In spite of these irritations, and ignoring minor backslidings, we have worked hard at the project, and would be in a fair way to succeeding if it weren't for one major obstacle.

This is the doubtful example provided for us by the very people who should be showing us how to become bona fide, certified, corrosion-proof, rust-resistant, good Canadians.

★

Mind, I'm not charging that Mr. Pearson, Mr. Diefenbaker and those who sit with them in our Parliament are bad Canadians.

What I suggest is that they have let our party system of politics get badly out of hand. Canadianism as I once understood it seems to be wandering lost in the fog generated by the clash of rampant Liberalism against militant Conservatism.

This was particularly evident during the last federal session.

Think back, if you will. What and how much was accomplished for Canada during those weeks and months during which the ship of state pitched, yawed and, rolled in the tide-rips of party controversy?

Some legislation, to be sure. But not nearly enough; and the result, as indicated by Tuesday's speech from the throne, is a work pileup that Parliament will be tripping over and picking its way around for a long time to come.

I'm all for reasoned and sensible opposition, and our parliamentary system couldn't function without it. However, when it becomes a mere frivolous attempt to flimflam the taxpayer into believing that your Conservative — or Liberal — is the Almighty's only honest man, reason goes out the window.

★

As a Canadian who is fed up with putting his shoulder to the national wheel, ony to find some joker heaving from the opposite direction, I think that for the good of our mutual country, it's high time we scaled these runaway party animosities and loyalties down to manageable size.

A hard-fought political campaign is a very fine thing, but must it continue as guerrilla warfare through an entire session as it did last year?

Well, another session is now upon us, its opening pomp and circumstance relegated to yesterday, the work waiting to be done.

The list of tasks is long and complex, and the hopes, fortunes and futures of Canadians from one coast to the other ride on the way this newly-elected Parliament handles its duties.

Its members can throw a numbing block into education, or legislate measures which will help underwrite the expanded universities and vocational schools we so badly need.

They can work wisely for the farmer both east and west, or hang him up with his needs unresolved.

They can do much toward regaining the respect of our provinces for the central authority, and they can help check the trend toward regional blocs and principalities which stands as our gravest internal threat.

But none of these needs is likely to be met as it should be, if party warfare continues to hamper and even hamstring Parliament at work.

Victorians Protest Hiring of U.S. Firm

By JIM HUME
Times' City Hall Reporter

With its decision to hire an American company less than 24 hours old, the Greater Victoria Confederation-Centennial Committee is already feeling the lash of public criticism.

The committee decided on Tuesday to hire the John B. Rogers Producing Company of Ohio to stage the main events of 1967 and to act as consultant-co-ordinator of the events of 1966. (See Page 6.)

Committee members did not expect the decision to be popular. And they were correct.

Local entertainer Fred Usher this morning criticized the lack of appreciation for local talent.

"The Rogers company did a nice job in 1962," Mr. Usher said. "They put on a good pageant. But the underestimating of local talent in this city is shocking.

PEOPLE ASTOUNDED

"Under Peter Mannering the Lights Up revue at McPherson Playhouse astounded people. They just didn't know we had that kind of talent in the city.

"As to the 1967 pageant and other activities, we could have done it locally and successfully."

Mrs. Nel Horth, Deep Cove, past president of the Peninsula Players, echoed Mr. Usher's thinking.

"With all the local talent available there is no earthly reason why we couldn't handle the matter ourselves," she said.

"After all it is our centennial and there was no need at all to go out of the city to find someone to organize it for us.

LOCAL TALENT

"What it amounts to is that an outside organization has been called in to run the show. Undoubtedly they will use local talent in their productions after they have picked the brains of local organizations which could have put on the entire thing in the first place."

L. J. Wallace, provincial chairman of Confederation-Centennial projects, said he had no comment on the committee's decision.

"We have 360 committees in the province, each one with complete autonomy. We do not comment either way on their decisions," he said.

Defeated bidder for the 1966 contract George A. Hamilton who claims to be the only Canadian in the pageant and big show organizational business, had a different criticism.

GRAVE MISTAKE

"The Rogers company is good," he said. "Very good in pageants. But your committee has made a grave mistake in making 1967 the big year instead of 1966.

"In 1967 British Columbia will be competing with all of Canada for the tourist dollar. In 1966 it has the stage to itself.

Vancouver is planning a huge pageant in 1967. If it goes ahead Victoria and the Rogers Company are going to find it a hard act to follow."

Peter Mannering took the rejection of the Bastion Theatre Studio philosophically but with disappointment.

"It is an embarrassment to me that they don't believe productions like this can be done by Canadians," he said.

"It would appear that Canadian talent will never be permitted to initiate productions.

STRATFORD TOO

"Victoria isn't alone in this. At Stratford, Ontario, the entire thing was set up, sets designed, plays directed by English people.

"The talent is here in Canada. It could have been done, if not by us then by other Canadians.

"This is one time, a Canadian centennial project, when it should be done by Canadians."

Mr. Mannering said the Bastion group would be more than willing to stage its indoor production during 1967 as part of the over-all celebration program.

"We would have no hesitation in staging the proposed indoor production — as long as the people realize that performers have to be paid," he said.

WALTER DODSWORTH
. . . he wasn't there

DECISION MAY CHANGE

Greater Victoria Centennial Society president Walter Dodsworth said today the decision to hire professional organizers for local celebrations is not final.

"I was not at the meeting (Tuesday) but I know there is considerable feeling about this among the people of Greater Victoria.

"As president of the society I would have to put my name to a contract to seal the bargain, and I'm not signing anything without the backing of the intermunicipal committee."

He said intermunicipal representatives will discuss the matter early in February.

Industry Body Urged To 'Reduce Frictions'

The building trade unions in British Columbia today called on the provincial government for the establishment of a human relations committee in the industry.

The recommendation for such a committee, established under the labor department and representing unions and employers, was made in a brief by the B.C. Building and Construction Trades Council.

The council represents all building trades councils in the province, whose affiliated unions represent about 40,000 men.

The brief was presented to Labor Minister Leslie Peterson by a delegation of 12 headed by Al Medley of Vancouver, president of the provincial council.

The standing committee would:

- Consider current problems in the industry generally;
- Anticipate future needs of industry and trades;
- Exchange views on social and economic trends;
- Establish meaningful contact outside collective bargaining;
- Exchange and develop ideas related to manpower, skills and future requirements.

GREATER SCOPE

The committee would be greater in scope than the automation committee set up after the oil industry dispute last fall.

The B.C. Building and Construction Trades Council said a "fuller understanding" may well be achieved of all facets of industrial and trade union problems through such a committee.

Sub-committees could be formed of persons representing related kinds of industry—construction, transportation, logging, manufacturing and so on.

"In the broadest terms such committees could inquire into areas of friction with the view to recommending ameliorative steps," said the brief.

The brief added that the time has come to advance the interests of the industry and union members "by other than the piecemeal, seesaw means heretofore a feature of the labor-management relationship."

REPLY

Much of the brief was taken up with a reply to one presented to the government last month by the Vancouver Construction Association.

The brief said 95 per cent of all mystery pickets are concentrated "on" non-union projects with sub-standard working conditions and contractors, paying sub-standard wages. These mystery pickets are for organizational purposes."

The unions also attacked the construction association for saying B.C. is plagued with costly strikes.

SIX DISPUTES

In 1964, the construction industry lost "a grand total" of 5,462 days in six disputes, or three per cent of the total days lost through strikes.

The total time lost throughout the province due to all strikes in 1964 was 181,784 working days, or 0.147 per cent of the total time worked.

But in the preceding year, just over 1 million working days were lost because of compensable accidents. In 1964 the figure was 1.1 million days.

BUT NO TRACE REPORTED

Search Stepped Up for Youths

Time was running out today for three young Victoria hunters missing since Saturday.

A sea and air hunt was intensified at dawn today as hope faded for the three hunting chums.

They were last seen midnight Saturday when they cast off from Oak Bay Marina in a 12-foot open boat.

Their destination was Chatham Island, two miles offshore. They were to have hunted for brant and returned Sunday night.

But nothing has been seen or heard of them since.

Missing are Dennis Powell, 19, of 1240 Newport; Ronald Hynds, 18, 2428 Dalhousie, and Wade Squire, 17, of 2741 Dewdney.

Said an RCMP marine officer: "The time element is against them. Even if they made it to an island it would be pretty grim."

Around 10 a.m., a Dakota spotter aircraft from RCAF Comox, radioed a report of wreckage spotted north of Discovery Passage.

NO CONNECTION

The pleasure craft Sea Deuce from Oak Bay Marina was sent to investigate, only to report that the wreckage was a piece of plywood.

It had no connection with the missing boat.

Also spotting over the area was the department of transport helicopter from Pat Bay.

Later in the morning, civil defence chartered three private aircraft from Pat Bay and sent them up.

Three local flyers, Joe Howroyd, Charles Watts and Roy Parrett, manned the planes.

Other private planes, along with a navy tracker aircraft from Pat Bay, were already combing an extensive area from south of San Juan Island to the northern Gulf Islands.

An armada of vessels, large and small, plied between the myriad of tiny islands, any one of which the boys could have been washed up on."

RCMP are working on the theory that the boys were washed north.

If this theory is right, the boys would end up in the Discovery Passage area.

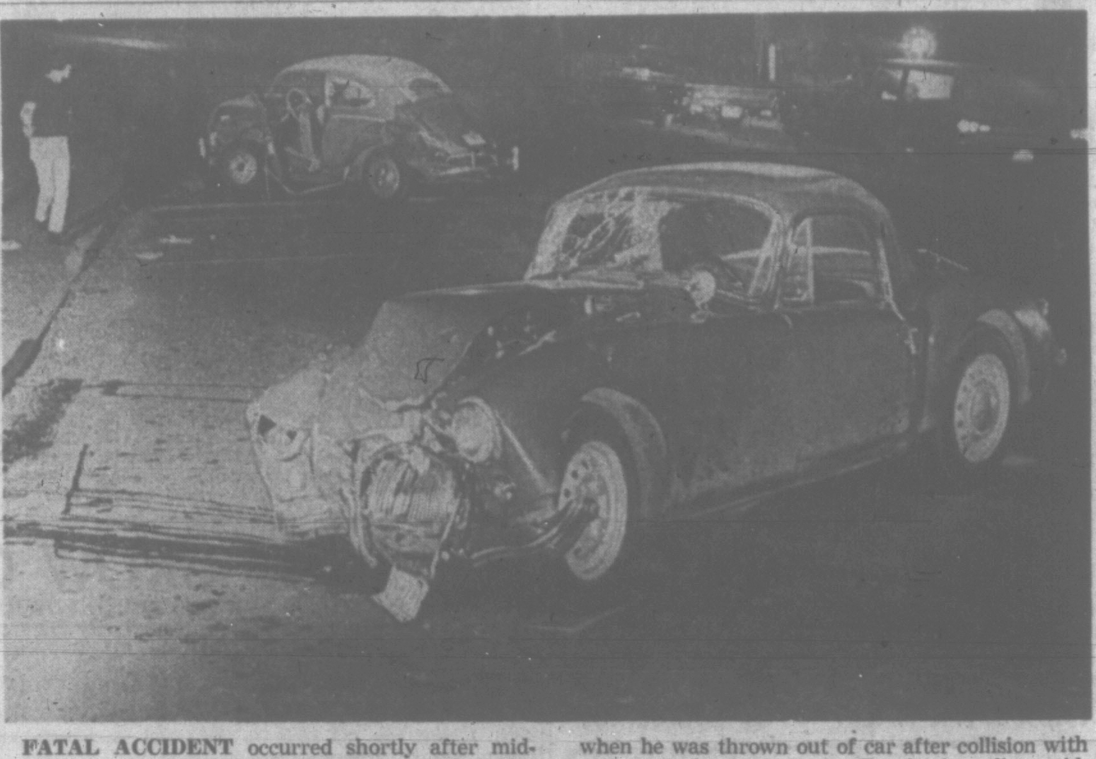
The police patrol boats Victoria and Sidney used their skiffs to search close inshore.

Meanwhile, the coast guard vessels Racer and Ready continued a search of the area.

MORE BOATS

They were aided by another government vessel, The Snipe, and several private pleasure craft.

If nothing turns up today, the search will go on Thursday.



FATAL ACCIDENT occurred shortly after midnight at this intersection of Lampson and Craigflower. Man driving small car in rear was killed when he was thrown out of car after collision with sports roadster at front, Esquimalt police said. (Jim Ryan Photo.)

Midnight Collision Kills Shift Worker

A 54-year-old Saanich man was killed just after midnight as he drove home from work.

Bror Nels Granewall, owner of Berryland Farm on Patricia Bay Highway, was killed in a two-car collision at the intersection of Lampson and Craigflower.

He was on his way home to 5630 Alderley Road after working the 4-to-12 shift as a rigger at Yarrows Shipyard.

Driver of the other vehicle involved was William G. Owen, 28, of 336 Newport, an unemployed logger.

The accident occurred about five minutes after midnight. Mr. Granevall was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital by Esquimalt police and was pronounced dead at 12:25 a.m. today.

AT INTERSECTION

Esquimalt police said the accident occurred when Mr. Granewall's car, a light imported model, pulled out of Lampson on to Craigflower.

The car driven by Mr. Owen was proceeding east on Craigflower and the collision between the two vehicles took place in the middle of the intersection.

The Granewall vehicle was pushed 37 feet east on Craigflower and came to rest at the side of the road. Mr. Granewall was thrown out and his body was found on the sidewalk.

The Granewall car was destroyed in the collision and police said Owen's car is probably a total write-off. Traffic was light at the time of the collision.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has ordered a post mortem examination. Date for an inquest will be set later.

FROM SWEDEN

Mr. Granewall came to Canada from Sweden 15 years ago. He operated Berryland Farm, a place familiar to many Victoria people who have driven out to the farm's roadside stall in past years to buy fruit and vegetables.

The dead man is survived by his wife and five children. He worked during winter months in recent years at Yarrows.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later after the inquest date has been set.

Court Hearing

Preliminary hearing has been set for Feb. 7 for Larry Alan Preston, charged in connection with a break-in at Standard Furniture last fall.

Preston elected trial by judge and jury in a hearing in central court Tuesday afternoon.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please inform me as to how Canada got its name and by whom it was named? A.B.M.

A. The term derived from the Huron-Iroquois work "kanata" meaning village or community.

First white man to use it was Jacques Cartier in a narrative written in 1534.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

CITY MAN DIES IN FALL

A 47-year-old Victoria man was killed in an industrial accident Tuesday at a pulp and paper mill at Duncan Bay, two miles north of Campbell River.

Frank Harold Phipps, 3895 Cedar Hill Road, died of multiple head injuries about one and a half hours after he fell 18 feet to a concrete floor at the site of an addition to the Elk Falls Ltd. mill. The company is a Crown Zellerbach subsidiary.

A company spokesman said Mr. Phipps had only been on the job seven days.

"He apparently tripped, slipped or fell through a guard rail down the shaft. None of the other 300 workmen actually saw him fall."

Mr. Phipps was an employee of Mathias and Nicol Installations Ltd., a Vancouver company which has been doing contract work at the pulp mill site for just over a year.

He is survived by the widow and one son.

AFTER YEAR-LONG NEGOTIATIONS

Mill Workers Get Pay Hike

More than 5,000 skilled workers in the coast lumber industry will receive wage increases following rate revision agreements in Vancouver today.

The increases will apply to a number of Victoria mill workers, but an exact figure was not available this morning.

Negotiations have continued for the past year between Forest Industrial Relations, representing 135 companies, and the International Woodworkers of America, with a membership of 25,000 on the coast.

Delays in reaching agreement caused unrest in various parts of the coast. Recently, boom men in Vancouver walked out in protest.

Both FIR and IWA will recommend acceptance to their member companies and union locals.

Fifteen categories in sawmills, including boom men and first aid attendants, plus six categories in logging are involved in the latest increases. Their wages now range from $2.54 to $3.87 an hour.

Earlier, planermen and a number of logging categories were raised.

The latest rate revisions provide increases for skilled categories ranging from 10 cents to 25 cents an hour effective at the beginning of the year.

Mill boom men will gain a flat 10 cents and boat operators 12 cents an hour. A joint study will now be made to revise the job of boom men "in accordance with their job and responsibilities," said the IWA.

Agreement was also reached today on the millwright apprenticeship training program. Upon successful completion of his training, a journeyman millwright will receive a certificate and an additional 21 cents an hour.

Training for the new program will combine on-job tuition plus institutional study.

Bedroom Organizers Of Sturdy Plastic

By Penny Saver

Every girl loves a nice, dainty-looking bedroom. Yet, a girl's bedroom is sometimes the hardest room in the house to keep that way. The dresser, in particular, seems to be strewn with lipstick tubes by the dozen, hair spray dispensers, hand lotions, perfumes, and heaven knows what else. One day, the room can look tidy and neat, but when daughter comes home again, pressed for time, the room regains its haphazard state. Bathrooms, too, seems to be collectors for bottles and dispensers of every variety.

In one store, I found items that will help remedy this situation. A rectangular, heavy-plastic box, with six holes of one-half inch diameter in the lid, is a lipstick holder. It is available in a soft, powder blue color, with plastic flowers and gold sparkles decorating the surface. The box itself is very attractive, and will serve to keep all the tubes in one place, instead of all over the dresser. This item sells for $2.98.

Safety pins and bobby pins collect everywhere. Pin trays, made of the same plastic as the lipstick holders, sell for $2.98. They're highlighted with the same design.

Another piece to add to this set is a hand lotion dispenser. Complete with the plunger, this sells for the same price.

Lamps are a boon to any room in the house. One unique little lamp in this store is priced at $5.49.

The base of the lamp is a wooden shoe. The shoe is in full sail, depicting, of course, the old legend of the Flying Dutchman. The legendry, spectral ship is believed to be a bad omen when seen by sailors, so the story goes, but the only omen that it can bring to your home is complimentary comments by all your guests.

Interested? Remember, Penny's number is 382-3131. She'll tell you where to shop.

MEAT BALLS IN GINGER SAUCE

One pound minced beef, ¼ cup chopped onion, ⅔ cup soft, stale bread crumbs; ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, 1 egg, beaten; ¼ cup apple juice, 1 can (10-ounce) consomme, ½ cup water, 1 teaspoon brown sugar, ¼ cup raisins, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, ½ cup ginger cookie crumbs.

Mix beef, onion, bread crumbs and seasonings. Add egg and apple juice. Mix lightly, then shape into 30 meat balls, about 1-inch in diameter.

Combine consomme and water in frying pan. Bring to a boil and stir in remaining ingredients to make sauce. Add meat balls and simmer, uncovered over low heat for 10 to 15 minutes.

Turn meat balls, baste with sauce and continue simmering 10 to 15 minutes longer, basting occasionally. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Serve with spaghetti or noodles.

Trunk should be erect. Raise your arms sideward, shoulder height. Twist so that you can touch the fingers of your right hand to your left toe. Raise your trunk and lift your ribcage. This time touch the fingers of your left hand to your right toe. Raise trunk and continue, alternating. It is important to keep your knees stiff throughout the exercise. If you can't touch your toes, reach as far toward them as you can.

Don't Forget Your Hair During Reconditioning Period

This is the eighth article in which I bring you my Eight-Week Beauty Improvement Plan. Those of you who are working toward a loss of 15 to 20 pounds in eight weeks are now well-launched on that program. Yesterday I urged you to give your complexion, as well as your figure, special attention to see how much you can improve it in eight weeks' time.

Lowman

Today let's think of your hair. I don't have to sell you on the idea that your hair can make all the difference in the world in the way you look. Every woman knows this. It acts as a frame for your face and your hairdo can minimize defects and glamorize lovely features or do just the opposite.

The hair, like the complexion, will benefit by my Beauty Improvement Plan but it too would profit by some special care. The condition of the hair is important to good looks and to successful permanents and hair styling.

If your hair and scalp are very dry, you should give yourself hot oil shampoos, or use one of the splendid conditioners on the market. There are many good ones. If you wish to try hot oil treatments, do it this way. Part the hair all over the head progressively and rub warm olive oil along the parts. When you have covered the entire scalp wrap a damp hot bath towel around your head. Leave it on until it begins to cool and then heat the towel again and repeat several times.

Daily massage is equally important to the oily and the dry scalp because it tends to normalize the action of the little oil glands in the scalp. Why not treat your head to a daily or nightly massage for eight weeks? When you massage your scalp do it in the following manner.

Spread the fingers out on the scalp. Keep the fingers in place as you rotate the hands. Change the position of the hands until you have covered the entire scalp. Press down with the fingers and make the scalp really move. This stirs up circulation and is beautifying to the hair. Add regular complexion and hair care to your regime of calorie counting and exercise for eight weeks! You will be surprised by the change in your appearance.

Supply, Staff, Stockpile Key to Service's Success

TORONTO (CP)—For a women's organization planning to open a thrift shop as a money-raising venture, almost any sort of premises will do—from a room to a store.

More important is a healthy stockpile of merchandise, assurance of a continuing supply, and a staff that can be counted on.

Mrs. John Goldie, chairman of the Toronto Junior League's 40-year-old thrift shop, suggests starting to collect merchandise at least a year in advance of opening.

"Then you need a lot of willing bodies, a place for your shop and advertising at the start. The best place is probably a downtown area where the things you sell are needed. Even though the shop makes a profit, it is a service."

The only display equipment required is a few shelves and racks. Mrs. Goldie recommends selling from bins. For example, a bin with children's underwear priced at 25 cents an item will be quickly sold out.

Counter Spy Chief Replaced

(See story Page 3)

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government today replaced its counter-espionage chief following the affair of a kidnapped Moroccan politician.

The government charged the abduction of Mehdi Ben Barka, a left wing Moroccan opposition leader, on a Paris street in October was organized abroad with the complicity of certain French secret agents.

The announcement was made in a communique issued after a cabinet meeting presided over by President de Gaulle.

The communique said Ben Barka's abduction was "a criminal enterprise organized from abroad and which benefited from certain connivances on the part of French secret agents or police."

Following the cabinet meeting, a government spokesman said Gen. Paul Jacquier was being replaced as head of the counter-espionage service.

Gen. Eugene Guibaud, a career officer who once served as military intelligence chief in Saigon, was named to replace Jacquier.

The spokesman also said the counter-espionage service, formerly attached to the office of the prime minister, now will be placed directly under the armed forces minister.

One member of the counter-espionage service, Antoine Lopez, is under arrest and has been charged in connection with Ben Barka's disappearance.

Lopez' immediate superior in the counter-espionage service, Marcel Leroy, was suspended Tuesday.

Ben Barka, an exiled leftist Moroccan leader, was kidnapped Oct. 29 and has not been seen since then.

KILLED BY BULLET

A Paris gangster, Georges Figon, who had said he saw Ben Barka murdered — was found dead with a bullet in his head in an apartment on the fashionable Avenue de Wagram Monday after police went there to arrest him.

Justice department officials said Figon killed himself.

'Explosive' Fire Claims Hostesses

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI) — Fire raced today through a five-storey building housing a theatre and nightclub and trapped 50 cabaret girls on the upper floor with heavy loss of life.

Some of the victims died in an elevator which jammed as they tried to flee.

Police said they had found the bodies of 25 of the girls on the fourth and fifth floors and that a number of others were still trapped on the elevator jammed between the third and fourth floors by a power failure. A fireman and a restaurant employee also were killed.

The fire broke out around 1:50 p.m. in the kitchen of a restaurant in the building which houses a theatre, restaurant, and the Metropolitan Club where the hostesses worked. The girls were on the top floor to collect Chinese New Year bonuses when disaster struck.

500 ESCAPE

About 500 persons in the Hsin Sheng Theatre, one of the largest in Nationalist China, escaped to the streets. Many girls were seen fleeing the building with their hair burning or burned off. Some were injured when they leaped from upper windows.

The fire erupted when Tunwar poured kerosene over hot coals in an old stove in an effort to take the chill out of the room before the family rose.

Que. MLA Named In Payoff Charge

QUEBEC (CP) — Marcellin Laroche, 46, Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly for Portneuf, was charged today with accepting benefits from a person dealing with the provincial government.

Mr. Laroche was charged with 16 counts involving a total sum of $15,260.

LAROCHE
. . . farm projects

He was charged under section 102 of the Criminal Code with having exacted from businessmen in the District of Portneuf returns for himself, and also for other persons.

The charge says the businessmen had received provincial government contracts.

Mr. Laroche was first elected to the assembly in 1960. He lives in Pont Rouge.

Section 102 says:

"Everyone commits an offence who directly or indirectly, being an official or employee of the government, demands, accepts or offers or agrees to accept from a person who has dealings with the government a commission, reward, advantage or benefit of any kind . . ."

ORGANIZER INVOLVED

Mr. Laroche also is charged with having conspired with a Portneuf Liberal organizer to commit some of the alleged offences.

The organizer is named as Guy Renaud of Donnacona, who himself is charged with 14 counts of conspiring with Mr. Laroche.

The alleged offences were said by the charge to have been committed between Jan. 1, 1961, and Nov. 30, 1965.

Of the counts in the main charge against Mr. Laroche, 14 involve benefits to himself, two involve benefits to others

The charges were filed before Sessions Judge Alphonse Garon, who then summoned the two charged men to appear before him by Jan. 29.

The complaint against Mr. Laroche was signed by Omer Auclair, special investigator for the Quebec Provincial Police.

The businessmen from whom the money is alleged to have been exacted were involved in farm - improvement projects at the time.

Mrs. Gandhi First In Major Nation

NEW DELHI (CP)—Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of the late Jawaharlal Nehru, was elected today to be India's third prime minister, the first woman in modern times to head the government of a major nation.

India's ruling Congress party automatically elevated Mrs. Gandhi to prime minister by electing her leader of its majority faction in Parliament.

Thus to the shoulders of this 48-year-old widow fell India's immense problems — problems which her father wrestled with for 17 years until his death in 1964 and which his successor, Lal Bahadur Shastri, attacked vigorously until a heart attack killed him Jan. 11.

Mrs. Gandhi went to her victory wearing a red rosebud pinned to her shawl, just as her father wore a red rose daily throughout the tumultuous years after independence in 1947.

See Story Page 27

Mrs. Gandhi polled 355 votes to 169 for her only challenger, rightwing leader Morarji Desai. Two votes were invalid.

Cheering erupted in Parliament's central hall when a party official, G .S. Pathak, announced the results of the secret ballot.

As the Nehru family once again took command in India, Mrs. Gandhi moved quickly to heal any damage done to party unity by the hectic political manoeuvring that followed Shastri's death.

'We Need Everybody's Blessing'

"I want your blessing," she told Desai as balloting began.

The stern, 69-year-old Desai replied:

"Who am I to give you blessing? We need everybody's blessing."

Victory for Mrs. Gandhi, who learned politics at her father's side, not only resumed the Nehru era after Shastri's 19-month interval, it also passed the nation's leadership to the second generation of Indian politicians.

Until today, India has been governed by the early freedom fighters who waged Mohandas K. Gandhi's "peace resistance" campaign to gain independence from Britain.

Mrs. Gandhi was part of that movement but played only a minor role. However, the survivors of her father's generation, notably Congress party President Kumaraswami Kamaraj, crushed most opposition to Mrs. Gandhi and thus will continue to have a say—perhaps a strong say—in national affairs.

Mrs. Gandhi is the 20th century's second woman prime minister. The other was Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon, the tiny island nation of 10,000,000 people off the southern tip of India. Elected in 1960, she was defeated in elections early last year.

A new prime minister could hardly face more serious problems than Mrs. Gandhi does.

There is widespread hunger in India and a near famine is expected in the coming months.

The dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir, which has set the two countries at war twice in 17 years, still festers. India's 480,000,000 people are still divided along religious and sectional lines. The national economy is in chaos. Neighboring China is a constant threat.

Gulzari Lal Nanda, sworn in as acting prime minister last Tuesday after Shastri's death in Tashkent, Russia, went to tender his government's resignation to President Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan and inform him of Mrs. Gandhi's election.

The president asked Mrs. Gandhi to form a new government.

Desai pledged his full co-operation to the new prime minister.

Mrs. Gandhi, weeping as she spoke, said in her acceptance speech:

"I am indebted to all members of the party including those who voted for and against me and I solicit their support in the great tasks lying ahead of us.

"Of all the resources we have,

Dief Says He'll Try To Dump Government

SIR Hugh Beadle, Chief Justice of Rhodesia, met British Prime Minister Harold Wilson today to discuss the Rhodesian situation. (See story on Page 3.)

OTTAWA (CP)—Three opposition party leaders slammed the government Tuesday for making no mention of pension increases in the throne speech and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker promised an early non-confidence motion on the issue.

All leaders criticized the speech for containing little but leftovers from the last Parliament. They used adjectives such as puny, pallid, pedestrian and ineffective to denounce it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a non-confidence motion is the only course open to the opposition to pressure the government into increasing old age pensions to $100 a month from $75, even if this means defeat of the government in the Commons.

He criticized other leaders, particularly T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party, for trying to find some way other than a non-confidence motion to express their views on pensions.

Defeat of the government wouldn't necessarily mean another election, he said. Prime Minister Pearson could recommend to Governor-General Vanier that another party be allowed to try to form a government.

Mr. Douglas said last weekend only certain votes should be taken as non-confidence in the government. He wants pensions increased but not at the cost of another election.

INCREASE NEEDED

Mr. Douglas and Creditiste Leader Caouette also criticized the speech for containing no pension increases. Mr. Caouette said he was disappointed there was no reference about any increase in family allowance payments.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the only new measures in the speech were increased aid to universities, which his party would support, and the reorganization of government departments.

"One wonders what the government has been doing in the 200 days since Parliament sat," he said. "It was a pallid photostat of the last speech which couldn't be implemented because the government decided to go to the country."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the brief reference in the speech to the government's desire to find a way to amend the British North America Act in Canada indicated that the Fulton-Favreau formula "is as dead as a dodo."

The formula to move the BNA act to Canada and set up an amending procedure was approved by nine provinces, but Quebec decided against approving it.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the speech gave no indication that the government is going to discontinue its "give-away attitude" on national unity questions. "The weakening of the

Sanctions Studied Against Students

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec education department is studying the possibility of imposing sanctions on thousands of technical and vocational school students across the province who have been "striking" since Monday in protest against an extension of their school year.

Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie mentioned some of the possibilities at a press conference Tuesday.

He said the government could withdraw the $10-a-month allowance paid to parents of 16- and 17-year-old students and suspend payments of the second half of 1965-66 bursaries and student loans.

The education minister said he was "scandalized" by the fact that some teachers had encouraged the student walkout, and reproached parents "for having failed to live up to their responsibilities."

He took a firm stand on the new school calendar, some 2½ weeks longer than last year's, which provoked the student "strike."

There was no question of any change. "The new school calendar is essential for academic and pedagogical reasons." It was adopted after consultation with teachers' groups representing schools across the province.

THREE-YEAR-OLD BEATEN TO DEATH

Town Will Bury 'Little Boy Blue'

MONROE, Mich. (UPI)—Unless someone can identify him, a three-year-old boy will be buried in this southern Michigan town later this week known only as "Little Boy Blue."

The boy, clad in a blue quilted ski jacket, red shirt, black corduroy pants and blue socks, was found by a rabbit hunter in an outhouse on an abandoned farm near here.

An autopsy revealed the lad had been beaten to death.

Authorities said their best clue collapsed today. A label inside the boy's shirt was found to be that of a brand carried by three discount chains with stores throughout the nation.

Detective Sgt. Patrick Lyons of the Michigan State Police said laboratory tests on the boy's clothing failed to disclose anything of help in the investigation.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation assigned an agent to help local authorities in the investigation.

No one has claimed the boy. His description: Brown hair, 35 inches tall, 25 pounds with that sturdy, well-fed look.

Police theorize no one has claimed the boy because those who know him may be his murderer or murderers. They believe either the parents slew the boy or they are dead themselves.

Shortly after the body was discovered last Saturday, police sent out a nationwide alert for an identification of the lad.

A color photograph of the boy's clothing and its description have been distributed to other law enforcement agencies, so far to no avail.

Monroe County Sheriff Charles G. Harrington said of the mystery child "he was neat, but his clothes were dirty. He didn't look like he came from a first class family. The clothes were fairly good, but dirty."

When the body was found the jacket was zippered and the hood was on the boy's head—an indication, authorities said, the boy had been well cared for and well trained. Also it was an indication, they said, the lad was not struggling at the time of his death.

By the middle of this week only two divorced fathers had come to take a look at the boy on the possibility he may have been a son. He wasn't.

Meantime, the little body was being held at Mercy Hospital.

Monroe County officials will bury the body in a few days unless a loved one shows to give "Little Boy Blue" a proper burial.

GRITS SHOW LITTLE ZEST FOR MEETING BASIC ISSUES

By PETER NEWMAN

OTTAWA—The Speech from the Throne which opened Canada's 27th Parliament may not do much to illuminate the nation's future, but it does cast a pale clear light on the present state of the Liberal Party of Canada.

The party portrait drawn by this declaration of parliamentary plans is that of a group of well-intentioned men with little zest for dealing head-on with Canada's basic problems.

The throne speech reflects accurately the changes which have taken place within the Liberal party since it was first elected to office nearly three years ago.

Lester Pearson opened his stewardship then with the ringing declaration that his time in office would "excite the daring, test the strong and give new promise to the timid."

That, too, was an accurate reflection of the mood of the moment; everything seemed possible in that faraway time of brave beginnings.

The Liberal party was then firmly in the control of its left-wing activists and despite the many pratfalls that followed,

VANCOUVER—Mike Chernoff, 39, heeded a half-heard siren song early Tuesday morning—and spent the following 10 hours trapped on the roof of a bank.

Chernoff, former resident of Grand Forks, B.C., said he saw several persons enter the building just after midnight Monday and thought there was a party in progress.

"I followed them in because I had nothing else to do. Then I heard music so I tried to track it down."

He stepped through a door which closed and locked behind him, leaving him stranded on the roof, seven storeys up.

Ten hours later he dropped a rock, with a note attached near two girls leaving the building on a coffee break.

The sounds which lured Chernoff came from the building's piped-music system.

HOBART, Australia—The mayor of Launceston, Tasmania, has issued an invitation to critics of the city's public toilets to have lunch with him and his family in any of the public conveniences.

LOS ANGELES—"When I die I want artificial flowers, jitterbug music and a bottle of vodka at my grave."

That quip to a bartender—made only in a spirit of fun last Saturday—proved an exit line for Mark Twain's last direct descendant, Nina Clemens Gabrilowitsch, 55.

The sprightly granddaughter of the author of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn novels was found dead Saturday, the coroner's office reported Tuesday. She was the daughter of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony at the time of his death in 1936.

Her room contained several bottles of pills and alcohol, police said.

She called herself Nina Clemens, joking that she couldn't pronounce Gabrilowitsch (Gab-ril-o'-vitch).

Miss Clemens lived on, and generally spent, a $1,500 monthly allowance from a $2,000,000 share of Twain's estate.

DENVER — A wedding night bottle of champagne ruined marriage for Myrna and Arthur Dussart.

District Judge Saul Pinchick granted Dussart an annulment because he said his bride drank too much on their wedding night.

"She drank too much champagne and got real sick," Dussart said. "The next day at noon she just left. I'm afraid I could never trust her again."

BANGKOK, Thailand — Police reported Sunday a school headmaster shot and killed his third wife because she failed to call him for supper. Police said Charoon Nakvachara, 49, also shot and killed his two previous wives but was acquitted after investigations.

DONCASTER, England—One of Britain's biggest construction firms is giving some of its men time off without pay to watch strip-teasers.

The firm, George Wimpey and Company, has about 200 men building a fuel plant at Doncaster. It discovered that on Sundays they were taking more than their usual half-hour lunch break in a nearby miners' club.

A company spokesman said:

"It was no good closing our eyes to the situation or sacking good workers who return late. So we arranged that they could have an extra half-hour added to their lunch break—without pay."

NEW YORK—Verbosity lead to the arrest here of a suspected bank robber.

His note said: "This is a stickup. Do just like this note says and you will be all right. Put 10s, 20s and 50s in a bag and don't push no buttons. I have someone at your house and if I don't get away he will know what to do and you will get hurt. Also we have been keeping an eye on you for the past two weeks. So hurry."

By the time teller John O'Brien finished reading the 68-word note, 12 persons had lined up behind the would-be robber and the guard came over to tell them to move to other wickets.

O'Brien shouted to the guard and he grabbed John Marshall, 36.

Saanich Reconsiders Municipal Handouts

How much can a municipal government give in the form of grants?

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis suggested to the Intermunicipal Committee Tuesday that the end of the line had almost been reached.

"The whole grant picture is causing Saanich council grave concern," he said. "Last year Saanich could not see its way clear to contribute to a specific grant and Victoria picked up the tab. This is passing the buck in the worst way and caused great embarrassment to me."

Looking at requests for grants from Goodwill Enterprises, the Dominion Drama Festival, the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and the Maritime Museum, Reeve Curtis sighed "and this is only the second week in January."

Other bids for grants already before the committee come from baseball and basketball organizations, the Left-Handed Golfers Association and various other community groups.

The committee decided to shelve them all until a special meeting could be called to review the entire grant system and to decide what should be done.

"I'm not just crying wolf," Reeve Curtis said. "I am just expressing concern about the amounts being asked. We need a meeting to bring in a full report on grants.

5,000 Quit Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The number of refugees airlifted from Cuba to the United States since Dec. 1 has passed 5,000. With 160 arriving Monday, the total reached 1,257 men, 2,265 women and 1,562 children. Meanwhile, six men including some of military age ineligible for the airlift fled Cuba in a 23-foot boat. They reached Key Sal, north of Cuba, and were brought here by the U.S. Coast Guard.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

An extensive high pressure area off the Washington coast continues to dominate the weather over southwestern B.C. Under the influence of this high skies will remain generally clear over the area. A series of weak Pacific disturbances moving toward the Charlottes will give cloudy skies to the north coastal districts with a few showers or showers of mixed rain and snow. In the interior the Arctic air continues to slowly edge southward. It is expected to reach the coastal mountains tonight and stall. Snow flurries will progress southward with the cold air.

HOME GARDEN

Plant Now In Dryland Gardens

By HILDA BEASTALL

Gardeners in many parts of this general area have soil which drains freely after winter rains. With them even snow is only an unpleasant memory.

Hilda

Soil which loses water rapidly and does not remain sticky for long, is suitable now for continuing the planting of trees and shrubs halted by the snow and rain.

The advantages of planting now are that the moisture needed for new root formation is in the soil and likely to be for several weeks; and nearly a season is gained by this early start.

Soil which drains quickly also warms quickly under the sun's rays, and no-one who works briskly outdoors on a sunny day even in January can doubt the warmth from the sun already.

Heathers are one of the most delightful groups of plants to add to a garden during winter. They like a sunny, open location, where the winter-blooming varieties may even repay you by attracting the stray hummingbird who has gambled with fate by remaining here.

Shrubs and trees which lose their leaves for winter may still be planted in well drained locations, since the soil can be worked back closely around the roots.

Staking is as necessary as in fall planting.

Plants of the conifer group, sold with a complete rootball of soil, help to give instant effects as do the broadleaved type of everygreen shrub.

The latter also give the double value of flowers in season as well as foliage all the year.

It is no empty promise that gardening is a year around hobby in this general area, since the variation in topography and soils add up to a similar variation in the little climates of the individual gardens.

In many cases, there is no need to wait for spring—plant it now.

Mile From Home, Woman Dies Walking In Cold

DAWSON CREEK (CP)—An attempt to walk a little more than a mile to her home from her husband's stalled truck, resulted in death for Mrs. Wilfred Hackett, 57-year-old resident of the Dawson Creek area.

Police said she was in a truck with her husband when they bogged down in a snow bank. The husband left her in the vehicle and started walking for help. When he returned, she was missing and her body was found later, about ¾ of a mile from their farm home.

Police said she apparently started walking in the 25-degree below weather and became lost in the drifting snow and darkness.

INTERMUNICIPAL AIM

Cost-Sharing Probe Urged on Province

A government committee to hear the financing problems of municipalities was requested Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Before formal presentation to the government the request, presented in the form of resolution by Oak Bay, needs the approval of individual municipal governments.

But committee members from Saanich, Victoria, Esquimalt and Central Saanich left no doubt that their sympathy was with the strongly worded resolution worded by Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox.

Noting that provincial and federal governments continuously renegotiate the responsibility of various social programs, the resolution said a "glaring defect in this system is the position of local government."

PROPERTY LOADED

Reeve Cox, absent from Tuesday's meeting, said in the resolution's preamble that local governments are "required to provide (for social programs) out of the real property tax."

He submitted, in modern society this is no longer a reflection of the property owners' ability to pay substantial sums of money for such programs as education, health and hospital construction."

Adding that an objective study of the problem is urgently required in British Columbia, the resolution called for the immediate establishment of a select committee to hear the municipal point of view.

The inter-municipal committee in a unanimous vote agreed that the government should be "earnestly requested . . . to establish during the 1966 session of the legislature a select committee."

It would hear representations from municipalities and municipal organizations on the general question of sharing social legislation programs.

Costs of education, health and hospital construction would get particular attention.

The special committee would recommend to the legislature "a course of action for the immediate and equitable solution of these problems."

HOSPITAL PLAN

Earlier the committee had discussed a proposal by Coun. Frances Elford, Oak Bay, that a meeting of mayors and reeves be called to discuss hospital needs with the hospital planning board.

She said that prior to the recent defeated hospital referendum no meeting were called and the issues were not clear. disagrd.

Reeve Hugh Curtis, Saanich disagreed.

"I think the issues were pretty well understood," he said. "I don't think this was voted on my an uninformed electorate. I think it was voted on by an electorate that took a firm position."

CURTIS IN FAVOR

He, and other municipal leaders, said they could only speak as individuals on Reeve Cox's resolution but they agreed that it was a move to be supported.

"Saanich council will decide whether or not to support the resolution, but I shall certainly do all in my power to persuade them to vote unanimously in its favor," he said.

Mayor A. W. Toone said he would be more than happy to take the resolution to Victoria city council for approval.

After ratification and possible amendment by various municipalities the resolution will be forwarded to the government, if possible prior to the opening of the legislature later this month.
